Gaines·burgers don't become leftovers.

Put half a can of dog food in your refrigerator and see what happens.

One. Your refrigerator might end up smelling like dog food.

Two. Your dog ends up with yesterday's dinner. And ice cold.

Tomorrow, forget the can and serve Gaines·burgers.®

There won't be any leftovers.

Because.

Gaines·burgers come in a convenient size that lets you serve less than a full can at a time. (You only open as many or as few as your dog needs for dinner.) And each Gaines·burger is individually wrapped so it's neat and fresh tasting.

And like regular canned dog foods, Gaines·burgers are meaty and moist and give your dog all the vegetables, vitamins and minerals he needs.

So.

Regular canned dog food is good.

But Gaines·burgers are better.

There's no can. No smell. No refrigeration. And no leftovers.

Gaines·burgers. The canned dog food without the can.®

If artichokes won't choke us up, nothing will.

If a KitchenAid disposer can swallow tough, stringy artichoke leaves, it can swallow anything. Like steak bones. Chicken bones. Even celery.

It grinds faster, finer and quieter. Its grinding elements are cast stainless steel. Its undercutting teeth cut stringy foods into fine particles that wash down the drain easily. And it's specially insulated.

There's no odor because food doesn't cling to the Teflon-S*-coated sides. So garbage odors go down the drain with the garbage.

If it ever gets choked up, you can clear the jam electrically. You don't need a wrench.

Do you want a disposer that can take what you dish out? See your KitchenAid dealer. He's in the Yellow Pages. Or send us this coupon.

Uses—and misuses—of common "mood" drugs

"Amphetamine abuse is a major health problem—many times more serious than narcotic addiction."

The most widely used drugs in America today include sedatives, tranquilizers, pep pills, and diet pills—all drugs which effect a change in a person's mood. In most cases, when used properly under a doctor's supervision, they are safe and beneficial. Indeed, they're invaluable to the practice of present-day medicine.

But millions of people are guilty of not using these drugs correctly. They either take them when they shouldn't or fail to take them when they should. On the one hand, they put too much reliance on these compounds and self-prescribe them when they can serve no useful purpose—and in fact can do very great harm. Or on the other hand, because of fears stirred by publicized dangers, people deny themselves the use of what might help them. A clear understanding of the basic facts involved will help you derive the most good from these drugs.

Sedatives. Sleeping pills, depressants, "downers," hypnotics—whatever term they go by and whatever form they take (capsules, tablets, or intravenous injections), barbiturate-type chemicals depress the central nervous system and are effective in the treatment of a wide range of ailments, including epilepsy, high blood pressure, peptic ulcer, insomnia, and various mental and nervous disorders. Their effect is to slow down the human machine. Respiration slackens, heart rate falls off, muscles lose their tenseness, nerves become dulled. These drugs are essential for surgical procedures and on the many other occasions when sedation is required. Taken in normal doses under medical supervision, they are highly effective and safe.

At other times, however, they invite serious risks, which the general public appears to underestimate. There are several thousand fatal overdoses each year—many of them accidents, not suicides.

Most doctor-prescribed barbiturates are the short-acting type such as Seconal, Amytal, and Tuinal. These pills, consumed to excess, create a condition with many of the same features as intoxication from alcohol—sluggishness, poor judgment, a lack of muscular coordination, distorted perception, slurred speech, slow reactions, a quickness to be moved to either laughter or tears, a sense of euphoria (or, at other times, irritability), and eventually a very deep sleep. Since alcohol and barbiturates enhance each other's potency in a sort of two-plus-two-equals-seven fashion, misusing them—for example, by taking sleeping pills after an evening of drinking—is extremely unwise. Both drugs are depressants, and their combined effect on vital functions may be to stop them altogether.

Another major hazard of the overuse of barbiturates is that it can lead to addiction. As a tolerance to smaller doses builds up, the user must consume increasingly larger amounts to produce the desired effects. In time, a true physical dependence may develop, and abrupt withdrawal of the drug is traumatic. It causes delirium, nausea, severe cramps, convulsions, and occasionally sudden death. A somewhat lesser danger is psychological dependence or habituation. The user thinks he can't get along without the drug.

At what point does a person run the risk of these perils? No one can say for sure because individual response to barbiturates is so varied. Some people have swallowed 50 pills at once and survived, while others have proved that eight can be fatal. One of the most knowledgeable judgments on this matter is that of Dr. Joel Fort, a professor at the University of California, and a drug expert. "Daily heavy use (best defined in terms of present research knowledge as more than 500 milligrams or five ordinary capsules of barbiturates, or the equivalent of the other drugs) provides physical dependence (addiction)," he says. "Those taking 400 milligrams or less would be psychologically dependent (habituated) and will often exhibit drug abuses other than addiction but usually will not develop addiction."

Tranquilizers. Like sedatives, tranquilizers have a depressing effect, but when used in normal doses they do not reduce alertness; they seldom impose the limitations of barbiturate-type chemicals on either physical or mental performances. Another big difference between the two families of drugs is described in "The New Connection," a recent book by John H. Frykman, director of the Drug Treatment Program of the Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic. "Whereas the sedatives release inhibitions stored in the primary brain stem," says Reverend Frykman, "the tranquilizers wall off this primary area." In other words, instead of "letting loose" the user's deepest inhibitions, which may be potentially dangerous to himself or to others, tranquilizers work by "locking up" these impulses.

This explains why "major" tranquilizers (antipsychotic agents), mainly used in institutions—phenothiazine, for example—have proved so effective in the control of psychotics and have virtually revolutionized the treatment of mental illness. The type of drug generally prescribed for the public at large—"minor" tranquilizers (antianxiety agents) such as chlordiazepoxide (Librium)—are valuable in relieving milder emotional problems and reducing extreme tension. They are also good muscle relaxants.

A significant minority of the people who use tranquilizers will experience undesirable side-effects: dizziness, skin rash, chills, upset stomach, drowsiness, fever, some loss of coordination. Chronic overuse invites the same kind of symptoms that characterize overindulgence in barbiturates. But tranquilizers pose little danger of genuine addiction. Some experts, in fact, believe there's no such risk at all—and the chances of becoming psychologically dependent on these drugs, or of developing a tolerance that leads to massive doses, are also considered slight. Fatal over-consumption has been reported only rarely.

Pep pills. Benzedrine, Dexedrine, and other stimulants taken "straight" (as distinct from diluted stimulants such as nicotine and caffeine) are mostly amphetamines or amphetamine-type compounds whose effect on the central nervous system is the reverse of that caused by barbiturates. Basically, amphetamines, sometimes called "uppers," accelerate the engine. Heart rate becomes faster, blood pressure climbs, alertness increases, dexterity may improve, excitability is superimposed over feelings of fatigue, and the body's whole metabolic system speeds up.

The legitimate medical uses for amphetamines are few. Some doctors, in fact, think these drugs should be restricted to the treatment of two disorders, both rare: narcolepsy, in which the patient keeps falling helplessly asleep, and hyperkinetic behavior in children. Paradoxically, some youngsters who are disruptively overactive can become calm after taking drugs whose usual effect on adults is just the opposite.

To treat every case of these ailments in the entire United States would require an annual total of well under a hundred thousand pills. But the number of amphetamines actually produced in this country exceeds eight billion every year. Small wonder that one authority, Dr. John D. Griffith of the Vanderbilt University Medical School, says, "Amphetamine abuse is a major health problem—many times more serious than narcotic addiction." Typically, the trouble begins innocently enough—maybe with a housewife who feels down in the dumps, or a student fighting sleep during an all-night cram session, or a truck driver anxious to push on and reach Cleveland. In each case, a pep pill might see the individual through the crisis, and if he stops there, no harm has been done. Used sparingly under the guidance of a conscientious doctor, amphetamines can provide a valuable lift in a pinch. For example, when the astronauts limping home in Apollo 13 were so weary they inadvertently pushed a number of wrong buttons, they were instructed to take pep pills to improve their performance during the critical reentry maneuvers.

But many people rely on chemical crutches too often. They build up a tolerance that calls for larger doses and frequently become psychologically dependent on amphetamines; the risk of habituation is high. Soon these people may be taking pep pills as if they were peanuts—sometimes in doses more than a hundred times stronger than would normally be regarded as safe. Then come the symptoms of chronic abuse: jitteriness, malnutrition, extreme irritability, exhaustion, insomnia, and finally psychosis—mental derangement. "Following the continued usage in some people," says Dr. Julius Axelrod of the National Institute of Mental Health, "amphetamines produce a condition that is clinically indistinguishable from paranoid schizophrenia."

Diet pills. Technically, these drugs are anorexiants, from the Greek word meaning "want of appetite." That name does not designate their chemical composition. Chemically, most "reducing pills" are amphetamine-type compounds, very similar in their effects to pep pills. Of all the amphetamines prescribed in this country, more are prescribed for obesity reduction than for any other purpose.

In theory, these stimulants suppress the user's appetite; he (or she) eats less and therefore loses weight. But many doctors question whether it really works that way. In long-term (more than a few weeks) programs of weight reduction, the superiority of diet pills to a placebo has not been demonstrated. A placebo, of course, is a pill that contains no active medicine.

After the first couple of weeks, many overweight patients keep swallowing their diet pills but revert to their old eating habits. As the needle on the scale climbs, they may start to take more pills, which may seem a lot easier than swearing off desserts, but which invites the same troubles as overuse of pep pills. ■

Let's Harness those Go-

Already more than one million snowmobiles are breaking the peace of our northern fields and forests. Another breed of go-anywhere machine, the so-called all-terrain vehicle (ATV) which is designed to go most anywhere, is now selling at the rate of 60,000 a year. Soon there won't be any place, no matter how removed, where you can count on solitude and silence.

We don't go quite so far as the National Parks and Conservation Association which equates these playthings with machine guns. Snowmobiles and ATVs are not all bad.

They have opened up snowbound towns. They have been instrumental in rescues, and they have made it possible to quickly repair isolated power and telephone lines. They have enabled law enforcement officers to patrol areas way off in the backcountry.

Above all, with their amazing mobility, these new machines have added a lot of fun to life.

But cross-country vehicles cannot continue unregulated, lest we sacrifice all that's left of our wilderness.

Even the president of Busse Bros., Inc., an ATV manufacturer, admits candidly, "There is no doubt in our minds that snowmobiles and ATVs can be a very destructive factor in upsetting the balance for all kinds of game, and will not only require more comprehensive regulation, but possibly some basic decisions on priorities for land use."

Suggested legislation

Only a handful of Canadian provinces and a few states have laws governing ATVs and snowmobiles. This is not enough. All of us must work toward the legislation necessary to keep them from becoming unregulated nuisances.

Urge action from your city council, from your state legislators, from your state's conservation agency. Try to influence any public official at any level whose voice may aid this cause. Tell them what's needed:

1. A definite noise limit. One leading manufacturer of engines concedes that "many ATV buyers, like snowmobile buyers and dragsters, tend to identify noise with speed and power." Thus, a legislated noise limit will not only reduce the ruckus but take some of the kick out of the sport for those most likely to use cross-country vehicles irresponsibly. The noise limit should be in the 80-decibel range, which is the approximate level in a car traveling at 50 m.p.h. Efficient mufflers must be required equipment to keep the sound at this level or less.

2. Confine these vehicles to specified trails in specific areas, or at least set aside areas where they are absolutely prohibited.

3. Require all snowmobiles and ATVs to be numbered and registered for easy identification and law enforcement.

4. Give control and enforcement responsibilities to state conservation agencies. Just think: the advertising for one ATV boasts that "Even 2- to 3-inch trees topple . . . Compare to a tank . . . just drive right through trees and brush . . ."

5. Set a minimum age requirement for operators, probably no lower than 14. The possibility of requiring a special license should also be considered.

6. Establish an absolute ban on hunting and harassing wildlife from these vehicles, and make it an offense to carry loaded weapons of any kind aboard or discharge firearms from the vehicles. This regulation must provide stiff penalties for violators.

Immediate steps

Getting legislation through takes time, of course. In the meanwhile, it's a hopeful sign that a number of companies in the cross-country vehicle business are trying to improve the situation.

For instance, Rockwell Manufacturing Co., a producer of engines for both snowmobiles and ATVs, says its goal is to make them as quiet as the average car. ATV Manufacturing Co. is working on a driving code which tells how its machines should be handled in order to prevent ecological damage. The Outboard Marine Corp. has set up an environmental affairs department, and Massey-Ferguson Inc. is working with government agencies on environmental considerations. Industry trade organizations are increasingly conscious that they must help set standards for this new sport.

But for right now it's really up to the vehicle owners themselves to act as civilized humans. If you are one of them, here is what you can do to help:

Don't be a nuisance. Admit that your machine makes more noise and can cause more damage than you'd like to think—then act accordingly.

Help disprove the so-far well-founded charge that "most vehicle-oriented sportsmen turn out to be spectacular litterers."

Organize snowmobile and ATV clubs, and aid your group in taking responsible stands on safety, good sportsmanship and sound vehicle legislation.

Passports, visas and customs inspections

If you are planning a trip overseas next summer, you should be filling out a passport application right now. As the number of Americans traveling abroad continues to increase at an explosive rate, passport agencies are often flooded with paperwork. And that means a longer wait between filing an application and receiving your passport.

Actually, obtaining a passport is a fairly simple procedure. You can get an application from a passport agency (in Boston, Chicago, Honolulu, Los Angeles, Miami, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle and Washington, D. C.) or from the clerk's office of a federal or state court in your community.

Once you've filled out the application, you'll have to appear in person before a passport agent or court clerk to file. If husband and wife are to be included in one passport, both must appear. Unmarried children under 18 who also are to be included in the passport need not appear.

In addition, you'll have to bring:

- Proof of your U.S. citizenship. A birth or naturalization certificate is preferred. Baptismal certificates or other church ceremonial records are acceptable if a birth certificate is not available.
- A current identification document—your driver's license, government or business I.D. card or your previous passport.
- Two duplicate full-face photographs ($2\frac{1}{2}$x$2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3x3 inches). Duplicate group photographs are preferred if your wife and/or children are to be included in your passport. In either case, photographs must be professional quality prints. Vending-machine photos, acetate or film base prints, snapshots or full-length photographs are not acceptable. Usually there are photo studios convenient to a passport agency that will make the pictures you need at a nominal cost. Passport office clerks are not permitted to recommend or suggest a photo studio.
- A check, money order or cash for the $12—$10 passport fee and a $2 execution fee.

Taking care of your passport

As soon as you receive your passport, which at present is valid for five years, sign it as indicated. Until you do so, it is not valid. Also fill in the information required on the inside front cover.

Guard your passport carefully and keep it in good condition. When you're traveling abroad, it's best to keep your passport with you at all times. Don't give it to anyone to hold as collateral, and don't alter it in any way.

If you lose your passport, report the loss immediately to the Passport Office, Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20524, or to the nearest American consular office.

When you apply for a new passport to replace the one you have lost, you must furnish a detailed affidavit explaining all the circumstances of the loss.

Inoculations for travel overseas

U.S. law requires that before you can reenter the country from abroad, you must present a valid International Certificate of Smallpox Vaccination indicating you have had either a successful primary vaccination or revaccination within the past three years. Of course, this also protects you while abroad, so you should have it done before you leave. You can obtain at a passport agency a smallpox certificate to be completed by your own doctor or by your local Board of Health. If you're vaccinated by your own doctor, your local Board of Health must affix the approved stamp certifying the doctor's signature.

For travel to some parts of the world, other inoculations are recommended and sometimes required before you return to the United States. You can obtain this information from a U.S. Public Health Service office, travel agent, local Board of Health or the Foreign Quarantine Program, National Communicable Disease Center, Atlanta, Ga. 30333.

Visas and other entry documents

Many foreign countries require you to obtain a visa from one of their consular officials in the U.S. before you enter their territory.

A visa is usually a stamped notation in your passport by a consular official. Though pleasure travel is fast becoming visa-less, there are still exceptions. Your travel agent will know if visas are required for your particular trip, and he can help you obtain them.

Most Western European countries do not require them for tourist visits, nor does Canada or Mexico. If you're traveling to South or Central America, or the Caribbean, check with your travel agent or transportation company. Some of these countries require a passport and visa, others require a passport and tourist card, while some only require a tourist card or evidence of onward transportation. Tourist cards are easily obtained through your travel agent or transportation company.

Customs regulations

As a general rule, if you've been out of the U.S. for at least 48 hours, you may bring back $100 in merchandise duty-free. Each member of your family—even an infant—is entitled to the $100 exemption. When your family travels together, you can total your exemptions.

If you are taking foreign-made articles—cameras, binoculars, watches—with you on an overseas trip, it's a good idea to have documents of ownership (a purchase or repair receipt, or a certificate of registry obtained in advance at a customs office). All your foreign-made articles are figured against your duty-free allowance unless you can show they were not purchased on your trip.

For details about duties and other U.S. customs regulations, consult the booklet, "Know Before You Go," available at a U.S. Customs Office or passport agency. ■

Keeping on top of the market

"Investigate before you invest" says a slogan coined by the nation's largest brokerage house. Of the all the folklore known to Wall Street, this may be the only saying that can be taken as holy writ by every investor.

No amount of investigation, of course, can insure that a stock will prove a winner. If it could, the 20,000 professional investigators (Wall Street calls them "security analysts" or just plain "analysts") would become millionaires, and few of them are. But investigation can avert costly mistakes, which is half the battle.

It's certainly not enough to investigate, buy a stock and then forget about it. Fortunes have been made by doing just that, but it's a policy that relies too much on luck. A stock that has been a fine investment for one year—or ten—can suddenly run into trouble from new competitive challenges, governmental decisions, market saturation or social changes.

Some television stocks quadrupled in price between 1963 and early 1966. By the beginning of 1970, they had lost half of their gains. The airline stocks skyrocketed from 1962 to mid-1966; the following four years they experienced an equally precipitous decline. That classic blue chip, Dupont, after reaching a price of 293 in 1964, proceeded to decline steadily and fell below 100 in the early part of 1970.

Long-term investors should be able to ride out the setbacks caused by market weakness or temporary problems. But how can they tell whether the problems will be temporary unless they investigate? Anyhow, why wait for hard-earned profits to be eroded before making a checkup? By keeping an eye on your stocks and reviewing their prospects periodically, you can save yourself some bitter disappointments.

Investors with a sizable portfolio, or those who are fairly active in the market, c get a good deal of help fr their broker. But what if y don't care to depend entir on your broker's opinions, don't have regular access competent professional gu ance? You'll find that do yourself investigation is not difficult as it appears—and can become a fascinating a cation. Market-oriented pu lishers churn out an ov whelming amount of inform tion. Some of it is free; mu of the rest of it is relativ inexpensive.

When you check sto prices in your daily newsp per, watch the front page a the financial section for velopments that could aff your stocks. If you're am tious enough to cope with f daily coverage of the busin and investment scene, yo find it crisply and lucidly p sented in The Wall St Journal. Then there is B ron's, a 50-cent weekly tha required reading among W Street professionals. Its f tures include knowledgea commentaries on the mark articles on business trends a companies, and a special s tion that's devoted to sto and-bond prices, earnings a dividends.

In the magazine field, For probably does the most s viceable all-round job for t average investor. Busin Week and U.S. News & Wo Report don't focus, as For does, on the investment sce But they deal in greater dep with business and politi trends that influence the m ket. And shareholders w buy any of the news weekl should be sure to glan through both their busin and financial sections.

A major source of free formation is the company a nual report, which can be tained simply by writing it. Those put out by smal concerns usually conf themselves to the minimu requirements—the chief ecutive's report and the b ance sheet and income sta

The single reference source most widely used by professional investors is Standard & Poor's Stock Reports, which provide highly condensed summaries (continuously updated) of nearly 5000 companies. The cost of this service is prohibitive for most private investors, but you can get individual Stock Reports through your broker. Another leading reference source is Moody's Handbook of Common Stocks, a quarterly that sells for $48 a year.

For those willing to pay annual subscriptions ranging from ten to 200 dollars and more, there is quite an array of investment advisory services. These run the gamut from sleazy tout sheets to long-established, reputable services that provide broad weekly coverage of the market and economy. Among those best suited to the average investor are Standard & Poor's The Outlook ($72 annually), Moody's Stock Survey ($144), United Business Service ($88) and Value Line Investment Survey ($167). Select Information Exchange (2095 Broadway, New York 10023) publishes a comprehensive Guide to Business and Investment Services; it also offers a $27 Christmas stocking-full of goodies—30 four-week trial subscriptions and a $27 credit on any full-year subscription.■

The first dishwasher detergent for dry-hards.

Dry-Hards are tough-to-clean foods—like eggs, fruit pie, oatmeal, meat fats, sauces—that dry and cake and stick. And stick. And stick. To plates. On forks. Filming glasses. Electrasol, fortified with 20% more active cleaning ingredients than other leading dishwasher detergents, really removes Dry-Hards. Lets your dishwasher give you cleaner, brighter, film-free dishes.

Test proves fortified Electrasol's superiority against Dry-Hards. Egg cup with Dry-Hard paste of egg, oatmeal and blueberry pie baked on for ten minutes at 330°F came out looking this way when washed in another leading dishwasher detergent.

Identical Dry-Hard egg cup—but cleaned in Electrasol, fortified with 20% more active cleaning ingredients than other leading brands. Try Electrasol. It removes Dry-Hard soils, prevents them from drying into spots on dishes, glasses and silverware.

Doing your own pizza

Tossing the crust doesn't actually make it more tender, but you'll have a ball making other people think so! Give vent to the ham in your personality. Once you have the dough in the pans, choose from either of the toppings, then bring out the Chianti.

Classic Pizza Crust

1 package active dry yeast
2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup warm water
1 tablespoon cooking oil

In large mixer bowl, combine yeast, 1 cup of the flour and the salt. Add warm water and oil; beat at low speed of electric mixer for ½ minute, scraping sides of bowl. Beat 3 minutes at high speed. By hand, stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a stiff dough. Knead till smooth, 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning once to grease surface. Cover and let rise till more than double, about 1½ hours. Punch down; cover and chill till cold, about 2 hours. Cut dough in half. On floured surface, roll each half to 12-inch circle, about ⅛ inch thick. Place in two greased 12-inch pizza pans; crimp edges. Brush each with an additional 1 tablespoon cooking oil. Makes 2 pizza crusts.

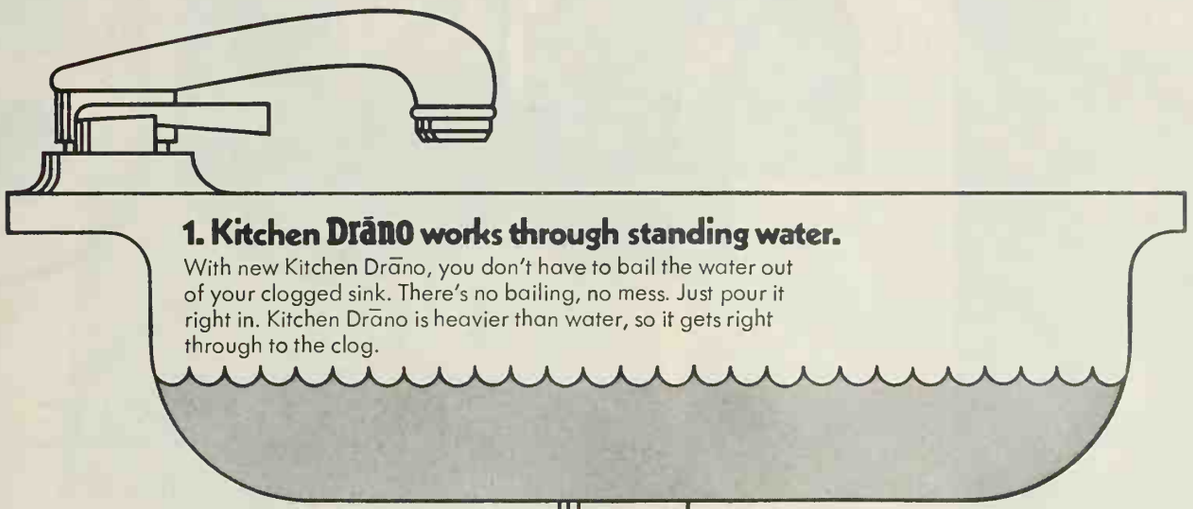
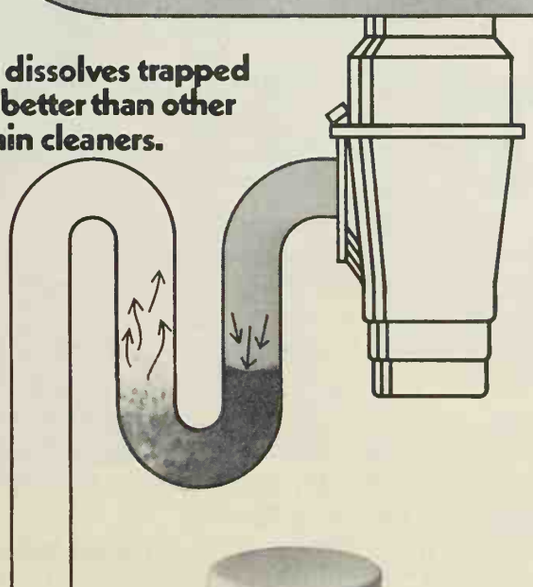
NEW KITCHEN Drāno® SOLVES ALL 4 KITCHEN DRAIN PROBLEMS.



1. Kitchen Drāno works through standing water.
With new Kitchen Drāno, you don't have to bail the water out of your clogged sink. There's no bailing, no mess. Just pour it right in. Kitchen Drāno is heavier than water, so it gets right through to the clog.

2. Kitchen Drāno dissolves trapped grease faster and better than other leading liquid drain cleaners.
That's because Kitchen Drāno has a grease-cutting solvent you don't get with other leading liquids. Just half a capful of Kitchen Drāno once a week prevents grease from building into a clog. Keeps your drain free-running, too.



3. Kitchen Drāno cleans and deodorizes garbage disposers.
You wouldn't dare use other leading liquid drain cleaners in your disposer, because their caustics would be damaging. Not so with new Kitchen Drāno. It's ideal for keeping your disposer clean, free of grease and residue. Two capfuls a week keep it fresh smelling too.

4. Kitchen Drāno has enzymes that help it eat through food clogs.
All those little food particles that sneak down your drain can cause clog problems. But the enzymes in new Kitchen Drāno actually help it eat through those clogs. They won't harm your pipes or septic tank either.

Kitchen Drāno costs about 1/2 as much to use.
New Kitchen Drāno is concentrated. So one little capful is all you need to unclog. With caustic liquids, you have to use half a big bottle. (Our measuring cap makes sure you are using just the right amount, too.)

HOW THIS SPECIAL ISSUE CAME TO BE

The phrase, "good design," often sounds pretentious because some people use it just that way. When the editors of Better Homes and Gardens decided to prepare an issue on "good design," we knew there was the risk we might seem to be preoccupied with "design for design's sake." That has never been how we think of our magazine—or how we want you to think of us.

So, why an issue on good design?

Because we feel that today, with the great proliferation of things to buy for the home, a responsible magazine must help its readers select those products which will contribute to a better life. It's time to recognize the fact that "good design" is no longer an esoteric concept reserved for the wealthy or the fussy few.

We do have strong ideas on what well-designed products should be: good-looking, yes, but also useful, good value for the money and available to everyone.

We have applied these criteria to all of the 400-plus products chosen for this special issue.

In making the selections, our editors visited the major markets all over America, looking for products that fit our requirements. After the search came the job of assembling for photography. Using only one location was out of the question, so we had the cameras clicking in studios in New York City, High Point, N.C., Chicago and the West Coast.

As is always the case when we prepare a special issue of Better Homes and Gardens, we learned a lot: there is indeed excellent design available in America, in every kind of product, in every price range. We found far more things than we had space to show, but we trust this selection will help you the next time you need a product and want to be sure of its usefulness, its value—and its good design.

If you were to buy a dishwasher today, would you know which one to buy?

A good start would be to look or a dishwasher that's made by a rofessional dishwasher company.

Look at us, for example.

We're the oldest and largest aker of commercial dishwashers in e world. And we've been making itchenAid dishwashers for the home r over 20 years.

KitchenAid®
Dishwashers and Disposers
By the makers of Hobart commercial dishwashers and disposers.

Through the years, KitchenAid as earned a fine reputation. Because its reliability and day-in, day-out per- rmance. And it's built to last.

Why is the KitchenAid Superba popular? Because it offers what omen want most in a dishwasher.

It features Soak Cycle,* which utomatically soaks dirty pots and ans right inside the dishwasher.

And SaniCycle is another fea- re you'll appreciate. SaniCycle pre- eats the final rinse water up to 0° to give your family extra health otection.

Another thing to look for in a dishwasher is loading capacity and convenience.

KitchenAid is more than an average dishwasher so it holds much more than an average dishwasher load. The top rack adjusts to 9 separate positions to make room at the top for deep bowls, and to accommodate tall platters in the bottom rack. And both racks pull all the way out so loading is easy.

A company that makes commercial dishwashers has to know how to get dishes really clean.

KitchenAid washes so thoroughly, there's no hand-rinsing the dishes before you machine-wash the dishes. Even with a plate that has egg on its face.

For safe, thorough drying of crystal, fine china, good plastic, and silverware, KitchenAid uses a separate heater and fan that circulates hot, sanitized air over, under and around each piece. There are no hot spots, unlike dishwashers that only have a heating element and bake dishes dry.

KitchenAid maintains that the inside of a dishwasher should stay as beautiful as the outside. So the inside of every KitchenAid has two coats of premium porcelain enamel plus an overglaze to protect the wash chamber from scratches, food acids and strong detergents.

KitchenAid gives you the most complete line of dishwashers to choose from: built-ins, front or top-loading portables, and dishwasher-sink combinations. Look in the Yellow Pages for your nearest KitchenAid dealer. Or send this coupon. *Patent pending.

"Your life is many stories... let us help you write them"

One of America's best-known writers tells you how you might turn your everyday experiences into enjoyable stories and articles

By Faith Baldwin

Faith Baldwin, one of America's most popular women novelists. Although she runs a household and has brought up four children, she has managed to write more than 100 books, including many bestsellers.

If you want to write, your own experiences are your best stock in trade — even if you haven't crossed the Atlantic in a sailboat or been to the White House for dinner. Most of today's best books, short stories and television plays begin with what the authors saw, heard and felt in the ordinary course of living.

"Take my own case, for instance. I started by writing stories drawn from my own experiences as a young wife and mother. And I've been drawing material for my novels and articles from personal experience ever since. Max Shulman's best-selling novel, Barefoot Boy With Cheek, came out of his college days. Rod Serling's amateur boxing career inspired Requiem For A Heavyweight. And Phyllis McGinley got the material for Sixpence In Her Shoe right at home. The same principle — write about what you know best — holds true for the budding author, too.

"Your own life may be filled with stories begging to be written. Every day brings new subjects: revealing bits of conversation, a sudden flare of emotion, a fact filled with conflict, an incident in the street. To see how close your experiences are to what is being read today, just look through any popular magazine. I'll bet you'll find stories there similar to those in your own life.

"But having something to write about is only half the battle — the other half is bringing it to life for other people. This calls for the craftsmanship that turns your experiences into polished pieces of writing.

"There are two ways to learn this craft. You may acquire it through years of toil, sweat and rejection slips the way I did. But I think the other way is quicker and far less frustrating: you can learn the techniques of good writing.

An unusual kind of writing school

"Several years ago, I got together with a group of outstanding authors to form the Famous Writers School. Our purpose was to help beginners develop their potential by passing on to them what we have learned about writing. The famous authors themselves don't actually grade your papers. But they created the materials for the Course and developed the method of teaching.

"This training is uniquely fitted to a woman's needs — because you study at home, at your own pace, in your own free time. There's no need to follow any schedule but your own. You work at times that are most convenient for you."

Person-to-person teaching

After giving you a solid grounding in the fundamentals of all good writing, the Famous Writers School offers you advanced training in the specialty of your choice. Your instructors are all professional writers or editors. They give your writing personal attention and constructive criticism.

Instead of dealing with a large group of students — each with different problems and talents — they concentrate on your individual needs. They carefully edit your assignments, going over them word by word, line by line, blue-penciling corrections on them just as editors do with established authors. Then they return your assignments to you with detailed letters, giving concrete recommendations on how to make your writing more effective.

Many students break into print

Of course, no one can promise success. But the proof of the School's effectiveness is in the publishing: Famous Writers students have sold their work to more than 700 publications.

Doris Stebbins of South Coventry, Conn., writes, "Your Course made it possible for me to sell six articles to Woman's Day for $2,050."

"I've sold twelve articles and one short story," reports Mrs. Frances Morton of San Jose, Cal. "I'm working on another and have three more 'go-aheads'."

Free Aptitude Test offered

If you've been keeping quiet about your talent, here's a wonderful chance to do something with it. The first step is to mail the attached card for the free writing Aptitude Test. We'll send along with it an illustrated brochure telling you all about the School, our unique teaching method, and about today's writing markets. There is no obligation, of course. (If card is missing, please write to Famous Writers School, Dept. W-1053, Westport, Connecticut 06880. Please give your name, address, age and ask for writing Aptitude Test.)

FOOD TO FIT THE OCCASION

by Doris Eby, Food Editor, and Nancy Hopkins, Associate

During the holidays, all sorts of good times happen around good food. That means you're probably looking for very special party ideas: food that's festive to look at, fast and fun to prepare, and—first and foremost—exceptionally tasty. To fill the bill, we've rounded up a party package of just-for-fun food—to fit every get-together on your family's holiday agenda, from cozy coffee klatch to crowd scene. Take a look—we're betting you'll find ideas you'll want to invite to your next party.

New Year's Day Brunch

NEW YEAR'S DAY finds many of us at home sunk into comfortable chairs watching the football parades and games. It's also a day of casual entertaining and gatherings on the spur of the moment. The food should be simple, informally served, and easy on the cook.

Our New Year's Day Brunch features roasted Glazed Canadian-style Bacon and Cheesy Egg Bake. They require little attention and come out of the oven together—the bread even toasts itself as the eggs bake. The fruit-laced beverage (served either with or without spirits) is Fruited New Year's Day Sparkler and is made ahead to chill. Set out a fruit and cheese platter which goes together in a snap. Convenience is the key—holiday hospitality couldn't be easier!

Fondue for Drop-in Friends

BONVIVIAL is the word for fondue cooking. Strangers meet and become friends, and old friends reminisce as they gather round the pot to dip, dunk and cook. The food is the entertainment! Shops are brimming with the utensils you'll need—pots, forks, sauce bowls and plates. To cook with oil, you'll need metal pots, but colorful ceramic ones are fine for cheese and other kinds of fondue. And once you get started, you'll find there's no end to the variety of fondue combinations.

Featured here are Sauerkraut Balls (far left) and Cheese Fingers to cook in bubbling oil. Sauces can be quick or fancy—we suggest Quick Curry Dip and Mustard Sauce you make yourself and sweet-sour sauce, jam, jelly or honey you pick up at the store. The center pot holds Brandied Strawberry Fondue ready for fruit, cake or marshmallow dippers. On the right is a Beer Rarebit Fondue served with French bread cubes.

Come for Coffee... Afternoon Cards... a Committee Meeting

COFFEE is a cup of warm hospitality! It's an unbeatable way to say welcome and put your guests at ease—whatever the occasion may be.

Homemade bread seems to say "You are special friends" better than anything else you can serve. Make it ahead so you can relax and enjoy the company; then, if you like, pop the bread in the oven to warm. You can't miss when you choose from these possibilities: Gumdrop Bread sparked with the bright candy drops; Apple Dandy Rolls brimming with a nutty cranberry apple filling; or Cherry Coffee Cake layered with shimmering red cherry pie filling and a streusel topper. Dress up the coffee with whipped cream and a touch of orange peel, a cinnamon-stick stirrer, a twist of lemon . . . or maybe even a little holiday cheer.

COME in out of the cold to a hearty meal that says "Welcome home." When you've spent the day sledding, skiing, skating or making snowmen, you're bound to have a ravenous appetite. This warming supper is guaranteed to hit the spot. It scores, too, because you can make it ahead and join the fun with the rest of the family. The kids, young and older, will love to sip Hot Buttered Lemonade while the feast warms. Cinnamon stick muddlers make the mugs even more appealing. Then, by the time the family has started to revive, bring on Hearty Fiesta Burgers and Parsley-buttered Loaf to take care of those appetites. End with pecan-topped Carmelitas—chewy chocolate chip cookies covered with luscious layers of chocolate and melted caramels. Certainly worth coming in for! (Recipes begin on page 79.)

Lots of Friends— Lots of Food

GO AHEAD AND INVITE the crowd—the more the merrier! In a normal-sized living or family room, all you need to do is move a few steps and you're in the midst of a new and friendly conversation. To entertain a big group, select a time either before or after the usual dinner hour. That way, guests will expect a snack rather than an elaborate spread. As for the food, plan on setting out a wide variety to please everyone from the adventurous nibbler to the cautious dieter. You'll make everybody happy with: (left to right) Liptauer Cheese Ball, a make-ahead cheese treat garnished with sliced radish; Notches, a Mexican-flavored snack of tortilla chips and refried beans topped with cheese and a slice of chili pepper; Shrimp Cucumber Dip, a cottage cheese and vegetable dip for calorie conscious party-goers; Clamavo Dip, a take-off on guacamole, but with minced clams added; Appetizer Cheesecake, a sour cream mixture sparked with crisp vegetables and layered with cheese cracker crumbs; Chestnut Meatballs, man-pleasing appetizers with crunchy water chestnuts sprinkled throughout the ground meat mixture.

Wine to Welcome the New Year

AS THE HANDS near the top of the clock and the excitement mounts, bring on a beverage to match the occasion—something special, spectacular and sure to please. A wine beverage is ideal. If you whip up a large enough batch, there's no need for you to be constantly mixing drinks—the guests can help themselves. Our three suggestions offer a wide variety to satisfy many tastes. The Rosy Champagne Punch (center) floats brandied cherries in a bubbly pineapple and champagne combo. Sherried Chocolate Frappes (right) are a sophisticated milk-ice cream combo with cream sherry adding that delightful spark. Or, try Hot Apple Wine, guaranteed to take off the chill.

If you're a chicken soup fancier, try chicken soup fancier. Campbell's Cream of Chicken Soup.

It's a fancy first course. And a fancy sauce, too. Because Campbell's uses tender light-meat chicken from breasts and wings. And tender dark-meat chicken from thighs and legs. And thick, rich cream. Just to make it even fancier. Why cook plain when it's just as easy to cook fancy?

Sit right down and get your Campbell's worth.

The egg and I

Establishing friendly relations with eggs has always been an easy thing for Bac*Os® product. Sprinkling it on just before serving adds a crisp and a crunch that changes an ordinary egg into an event. With a flavor like bacon, it is the perfect egg complement at breakfast, brunch, lunch or supper. And once you've sprinkled Bac*Os product on top of eggs, you'll really get ideas! Here are three more we guarantee will always have you saying "give me Bac*Os and eggs."

Creamy Scramble Surprise with Bac*Os
8 eggs, slightly beaten
1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, cut up
2 tablespoons snipped chives
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
⅓ cup Bac*Os product

Mix eggs, cream cheese and chives. Heat butter in skillet over medium heat until just hot enough to sizzle drop of water. Pour egg mixture into skillet. As mixture begins to set at bottom and side, gently lift cooked portions with spatula so that uncooked portion can flow to bottom. Avoid constant stirring. Cook until eggs are thickened throughout but still moist. Sprinkle Bac*Os product over top. 6 to 8 servings.

Bac*Os and Golden Eggs on Toast
1 can Betty Crocker Cheese Sauce
4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
4 slices toast
⅓ cup Bac*Os product

In small saucepan, heat Cheese Sauce just to boiling, stirring constantly. Arrange egg slices over warm toast. Spoon Cheese Sauce over eggs; sprinkle with Bac*Os product. Serve immediately. 4 servings.

Bac*Os Scrambled Egg Omelet
3 eggs
Dash of salt and pepper
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
¼ cup shredded natural Cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon freeze-dried chives
2 tablespoons Bac*Os product

Mix eggs, salt and pepper. In 8-inch skillet or omelet pan, heat butter over medium heat. Pour egg mixture into skillet. As mixture begins to set at bottom and side, gently lift cooked portions with spatula so that uncooked portion can flow to bottom. Avoid constant stirring. Sprinkle with cheese, chives and 1 tablespoon of the Bac*Os product. When mixture has set, fold or roll over. Sprinkle remaining Bac*Os product over top. 2 servings.

A flight through Grand Canyon

It sounds exciting—and it is. It's also the quickest way to begin to comprehend the magnificent proportions of this awesome natural wonder.

Your trip begins around 9:30 in the morning, when your pilot from Scenic Air Lines picks you up at your Las Vegas hotel for a brief ride to the airport. Then a six- to nine-passenger plane lifts you above the famous Strip and gives you a bird's-eye view of Hoover Dam and the Lake Mead Basin, where river runners end their ten-day rubber-raft rides down the Colorado's wild rapids.

Soon the colorful desert becomes rifted with small but impressive gorges, and, as the Colorado cuts deeper and deeper through the earth's crust, the stunning and overwhelming beauty of the Canyon unfolds around and below you.

The clear desert air intensifies the variations of reds, browns and golds as you criss-cross and dip into two billion years of earth's history. You must keep reminding yourself that the narrow red river at the bottom is wider than the length of a football field, just to keep the size of what you are seeing in some perspective.

The Canyon branches off in all directions. As you fly over one of these side canyons, you'll see the incredible blue-green waters and tumbling waterfalls in the home of the ancient Havasupai Indians. Since the 12th century, this small tribe has raised its crops here, isolated from the outside world.

You land 7000 feet above sea level amid ponderosa and white pines at the Grand Canyon airport. A short bus ride takes you, first, to a museum, which tells the history of the Canyon and its people. Lunch then awaits you at the Grand Canyon Village on the South Rim, where the Canyon is at its widest and perhaps most impressive. Rock formations like great Aztec temples rise thousands of feet above the Canyon floor with names like Shiva, Vishnu, Point Sublime and Wotan's Throne.

As you return to Las Vegas in the late afternoon, the colors of the Canyon have changed to purples, pinks and blues. You have flown 418 miles—75 miles of the flight below the Canyon's rim. At the airport, you receive a souvenir book of the Canyon and a certificate testifying to your adventurous spirit.

The trip costs $67.50, all inclusive. You can make reservations by calling Scenic Air Lines or you can ask your travel agent about those inexpensive package tours of Las Vegas which include the flight.

WESTERN TRAVEL DIRECTORY

Lions: just minutes from downtown L.A.

If you like animals, but don't like to see them in cages, pay a visit to Lion Country Safari. Just 20 minutes from Disneyland, it is off the San Diego Freeway at Moulton Parkway. This concept of a small game preserve reverses the usual confrontation with African wildlife. Your car becomes a cage, and the free-roaming animals look at you—occasionally by standing on the car and peering through the windshield.

An eight-mile drive takes you from "Kilimanjaro Plains," where antelope and ostriches roam, through the "Rungwa Forest," where lions play with their young in the sun, to the "Umfolozi River," a home for hippos, zebras and giraffes.

There are eight sections in all, each reproducing the characteristics of the regions they represent and dividing the prey from the predators with a beautifully concealed system of moats and barriers. You can watch elephants, cheetahs, chimpanzees, gnus, rhinos and a large collection of African birds behaving much as they do in their native habitats. The concept is so valid that young zoologists come here to study the animals.

If your children wish they could play with one of those cute lion cubs, stop in at the Junior Jungle. All the animal babies are there, from reptiles to playful monkeys. The children will also enjoy the Safari Camp which offers adventure rides and the Afritheater which presents a bird show.

The Native Village contains authentically constructed huts of the Zulu, Masai and Ndebele tribes, and a Curio Shop selling African imports.

Tickets for the safari are $3.25 for adults, $1.50 for children five through eleven. There are some restrictions. Your car windows must be closed, and no convertibles are allowed. You can rent a sedan or safari vehicle, if necessary.

No family pets. They distract the animals, but there's a free kennel with private accommodations and selective cuisine at the entrance.

And no pedestrians. A large sign outside warns: "All trespassers will be eaten."

Winter bird-watching by the Bay

October through March are particularly good bird-watching months in the San Francisco Bay area. During this time, the south marshes alone provide food, shelter and a resting place for 70 percent of the water and shorebirds on the Pacific Flyway—a "highway in the sky" which birds have used for thousands of years on their annual migrations between Alaska and Mexico.

Take advantage of this natural phenomenon. Yours could be one of the last generations privileged to see such a wealth of birdlife, as dredging, bay-fills, developments, and air and water pollution destroy the birds' life-supporting environments. All you need are comfortable clothes, a picnic lunch and, if possible, binoculars. As a resident or visitor in the Bay area, you don't have far to travel.

In San Francisco, go to the hain of Lakes in Golden Gate ark or Lake Merced. You'll nd several species of ducks, cluding Widgeon, Shoveler nd Wood Ducks, and also nall land birds.

Underground in Seattle

There is nothing new about city-sewage problems, but few cities are able to turn the problem's solution into a tourist attraction. Seattle does.

Several decades ago, high tides created a backwash of sewage in the wooden pipes of the city's system. Toilets were raised to throne-like positions, and it was finally decided to raise the street level, too.

Seattle handles its sewage problems differently now, but the streets are still raised, leaving a labyrinth of old shop fronts and sidewalks one floor below. Now guided tours explore some of these half-forgotten historical landmarks.

On the two-hour tour of the streets around and below Pioneer Square you'll explore a variety of abandoned establishments: elegant old office buildings, a department store, an opium den, a theater and a room used for revival meetings. Your guide is well-versed in the lore and scandals of Seattle's colorful characters who lived, worked and played here.

Aboveground, you'll pass Yesler Way, where Henry Yesler skidded his logs down to the waterfront and gave the name to the first "skid road." The area is so rich in old buildings of mosaic brick and carpenter's Gothic that its historic integrity has been protected by city ordinance. The tour takes you by carefully restored artists' studios, galleries, shops, fine restaurants and offices.

To make tour reservations, call MU2-4646 in Seattle. Tickets are $1.00 a person. Try to take an evening tour. It gets pretty eerie in the dark. ■

Made to measure

What should you look for when you shop for measuring cups and spoons?

Good workmanship. Make sure they're sturdy, with a minimum of crevices to catch food particles, dirt and germs. Find out if they'll survive dishwasher treatment, if that's in your plans.

Accuracy. Don't assume all measuring tools have it. Alas, some stunning imports are not keyed to our fractions, so just love 'em and leave them on your walls. Always check out any new cup sets with a standard measure-marked cup, and spoons with a utilitarian spoon set, to avoid cooking failures (Photograph 1).

Usefulness. Spoons with short handles are easier to manipulate—but long handles are slicker for deep jars, bottles, cans—or when adding to hot mixtures on the range. It's helpful if measuring sets attach, either to each other at the handle-tips or to a rack. Saves hunting for misplaced ones. Nesting cups save space (2).

Good looks. Decorative hanging measures are an apt accessory for kitchens. Pewter, copper or stainless steel may be just the accent you need—or gay enameled implements to spark up a dull kitchen. One set (3) teams matching measuring spoons and long-handled measuring cups—they're white with blue flowers, and both sets have racks.

Special jobs. Some tools measure, and then go on to do some plus chores, such as: storing neatly between refrigerator shelves, with covered top and pouring spout; measuring wet and dry ingredients in the same utensil (4); mixing or beating ingredients; shaking instant puddings, drinks, breakfasts (5).

An aluminum cup measures its liquid contents, and tells you the score on its clear plastic handle (6).

Some measuring sets have companion coffee scoops.

How many sets? Two basic spoon sets and two cup sets save mid-cooking cleanup.

How to use. Overfill fractional cups or spoons, then level off with straight edge of knife or spatula—don't pack down. If glass measuring cup has safety rim, don't mistake that for cup measure line.

Ford's new Pinto. The little carefree car.

'into is one little car that can free you rom car cares, big and little. From cares bout high price and big gas bills. From ares about maintenance and repairs, ower and stability, roominess and quiet. 'he little care-free car takes care of all hat.

Sized like the little imports... on the utside. Pinto is only a little longer than a W. But its turning circle is a little shorter. o it can slip easily into the same kinds of ttle parking spaces.

But a big car where it counts... on the nside. Pinto's modern design gives it more verall room inside than the leading im- ort. Getting in and out is easier because 'into's doors are a good half-foot wider.

Quiet, smooth and 25 mpg. Pinto's little igh-efficiency engine is backed by 50 mil- on owner-driven miles. It delivers 75 hp and has averaged over 25 mpg in simulated city/suburban driving.

Pinto takes a firm stand. With a wider stance than any economy import. You get better stability on turns, and in high crosswinds. And for better road feel, Pinto has a rack-and-pinion steering system, like in Porsche and Jaguar—something you won't find in any other American car.

Do it yourself and save. Pinto's manual is complete with pictures and simple step by step instructions showing you how to do everything from changing spark plugs and burned out bulbs to checking your manifold vacuum and replacing the bumpers. A special "troubleshooting section" tells you how to spot minor problems. And how to fix them.

Don't do it yourself and save. When your Ford Dealer handles Pinto's maintenance, you still save. For example, Pinto needs regular servicing half as often as the leading import.

No kidding. No changes. Pinto's styling will last. And its parts will do the same. There's extra life in dozens of key parts, like Pinto's heavy-duty drive shaft, ball joints, starter motor, rear axle and wheel bearings.

Priced like the little economy imports. Your Ford Dealer will show you Pinto's little price is care free. And it includes high-back bucket seats, DirectAire ventilation, 4-speed synchronized transmission, or an optional 3-speed automatic. Don't forget this better idea for safety: buckle up.

By Janice Heckroth,
Appliances, Housewares, Management Editor

Make lighting an integral part of your kitchen planning. Bear in mind that light be absorbed by dark surfaces, or it can be reflected by lighter surfaces to prov useful illumination. Correct lighting makes colors livelier and your work easier.

Incandescent: 150 watt or fluorescent: 60 watt.
Average kitchen (75-120 sq. ft.)

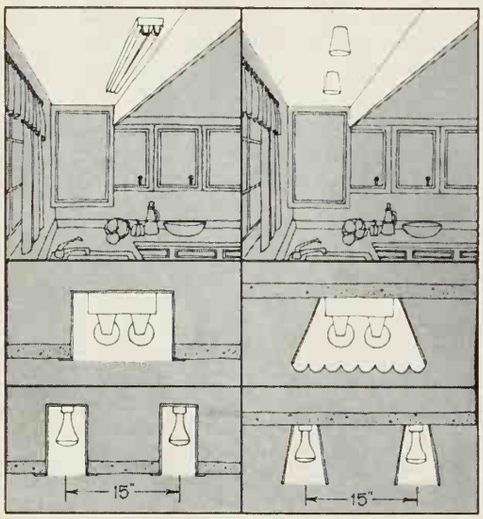
SINK OR RANGE AREA



1. With wall cabinets on either side—
Use bare bulbs or tubes for cabinets joined by 8″ minimum depth face board. This will provide well-distributed light in a concentrated area.
a. Fluorescent—Use deluxe warm-white tubes in a two-lamp fixture mounted directly above the outside edge of the counter. Size to space available. Use three tubes in areas where 20-watt fixtures are required.
b. Incandescent—Use 2-75w R-30 reflector floodlights or 2-75w soft-white bulbs spaced 15″ apart. They are mounted on the soffit, 3″-4″ behind the face board.
2. Without face board—
(Or over projected and island units)—
a. Recessed fluorescent—Use 2-30w (36″) or 3-20w (24″) deluxe warm-white tubes. The shielding can be louvers, frosted glass, or ribbed clear plastic. Specular reflectors above tubes will nearly double light. Do consider purchasing the reflectors when buying the lighting fixture.
b. Surface-mounted fluorescent—Repeat center-ceiling fixture directly above w area. If two work areas have no ca nets over them and are lighted by surfa mounted fluorescent fixtures, the need fo center-ceiling fixture is minimized, depe ing on size of room. However, before eli inating the center-ceiling fixture be s there is sufficient overall lighting in kitchen.

20w (24″) for counters less than 36″
40w (48″) for counter 48″ to 6 ft.

Use the longest tube that will fit in available space, and fill at least two-thirds of counter length. This will prevent shadows and dark areas on the counter work area.

2. Right-angle counter, cabinets above—
Use a fluorescent channel mounted leng wise under center of the upper cabinets, w opaque shielding on both sides of the tu The length needed is the same as for w counter beneath cabinets.
3. Right-angle counter, no cabinets above—
Use either louvered, surface-mounted, se recessed cylinders or recessed, louve "high-hats" with 75w R-30 floodlig spaced 20″ from center to center. If counter doubles as an informal dining ar a pulley fixture or several pendants could used to provide the proper amount of lig

Just what is a torte?

Is a torte a rich, many-layered cake made with ground nuts instead of flour? Or perhaps sponge or chiffon layers with jam filling and whipped cream? Or is a torte a meringue dessert enhanced with fruit? You may be surprised to learn that it can be any one of these three desserts. But more important than the terminology is the taste. And that's delectable, as you'll discover when you try one of our trio of tortes.

THIS WOMAN IS REDUCING HER WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS AND THIGHS

with the Fabulous New SAUNA BELT™

TRIM-JEANS

The Amazing Space-Age Slenderizer that is so sensationally effective it is...

GUARANTEED TO REDUCE YOUR WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS, AND THIGHS A TOTAL OF FROM 6 TO 9 INCHES IN JUST 3 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED

Here is how it works:

Mrs. Linda Saatsaz has slipped into her trim-jeans and is inflating them with the handy little pump provided. She is now ready to perform her 'Magic Torso' movements, an exercise program designed specially for trim-jeans.

After a few pleasant moments — about 10 minutes or so — doing her 'Magic Torso' movements, Linda is now relaxing for an additional 20 minutes while keeping her trim-jeans on. That is all there is to it.

Linda now slips her trim-jeans off and checks her 'after' measurements. Remarkable! Linda lost 2 inches from waist, 1 inch from tummy, 1 inch from hips, 1½ inches from each thigh for a total measurement loss of 7 inches in just 1 brief session.

"I actually lost 7 excess inches during my very first session with this incredible slenderizer and the inches came off just where I needed to lose them. I went through the program again on each of the following 2 days and the inches continued to roll off — and all without the need for dieting. Over the 3 day period, I lost a total of 4 inches from my waist — going from 29 inches down to 25 inches, 2 inches from my tummy, 2½ inches from my hips — going from 39½ inches down to 37 inches, 3 inches from each thigh — going from 24 inches down to 21 inches, for a total overall loss of 14½ inches in just 3 days with these wonder working trim-jeans."

Linda Saatsaz

THIS SUPER PRODUCT IS PRODUCING SUPER NEW SLENDERIZING FOR A HOST OF WOMEN. HERE ARE JUST A FEW:

Miss Penny Dix: "I used the trim-jeans just 3 times and took a total of 11½ inches off my hips, thighs and middle — 7 inches the very first day. No dieting and my figure has never looked better."

Mrs. Mary Lou Wilhelm: "Following the trim-jeans program, I reduced my waist 2½ inches, my abdomen by 2 inches, my hips by 2 inches and my thighs by 2½ inches each — I ate normally — it took just 3 days — and the inches have stayed off."

Miss Carol Arrighi: "I used your marvelous trim-jeans a few minutes a day for 3 days in a row and reduced my waist from 26 to 24, my tummy from 31 to 29, my hips from 36 to 34 and my thighs from 24 to 21. My new measurements are just perfect for my height."

TRIM-JEANS — THE SPACE AGE SLENDERIZER WITH RESULTS THAT ARE OUT OF THIS WORLD. The trim-jeans are a marvel of ease, comfort and efficiency. Once you have slipped them on, you are ready for the most astounding experience in rapid slenderizing you have ever known. Only trim-jeans has the unique features of design, including the exclusive super sauna-lock that permits the constant snug fit and solid support in all areas — waist, tummy, hips and thighs — without which truly sensational results are not possible. We recommend that the trim-jeans be used a few minutes each day for 3 days in a row when you first receive them and then several times a week until you have achieved your maximum potential inch loss. After that, for maintenance you can use the trim-jeans about twice a month or as often as you feel the need.

THE MOST REVOLUTIONARY GUARANTEE IN SLENDERIZING HISTORY. So many users of the trim-jeans obtain 'instant reducing' — are inches slimmer, inches trimmer in from just 1 to 3 sessions with this super slenderizer — are actually losing as much as a total of 7 or more inches from their waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 1 session and up to 14 or more inches from 3 sessions. This principle produces really fantastic results. There may be variations of speed and/or degree of results due to individual differences in metabolism and body response. Not everyone may lose 7 inches in just 1 session and 14½ inches in 3 days but remember this: No matter what your metabolism, no matter what your body type, if you do not lose a total of from 6 to 9 inches from your waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 3 days, you may return the trim-jeans and your entire purchase price will be immediately refunded.

THE AMAZING TRIM-JEANS TAKE OFF INCHES WHERE THEY NEED TO COME OFF. Your trim-jeans are designed to give you just the reducing effect you need where you need it... and the price of the trim-jeans is just $13.95 and each pair carries a FULL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. 4 times more effective than the standard model! Burns longer . . . burns "hotter"—super efficient heating coils!

IN THE WINTERTIME. Ice and snow will never overwhelm you again. Even in the heaviest blizzard this heavy-duty model is big enough to do the job. The coils generate 4 times the amount of heat. Even snow banks up to your eyes will evaporate in seconds with this mighty flame gun. It will cut through ice up to a solid foot thick just as if it were soft butter. Best yet, the Super Flame Gun won't leave a pool of water to freeze over. Just a little more time and the Flame Gun . . . with all that heat, all that power, will actually evaporate the melted ice and snow away. Keep it in your car and you will never get stuck again. Keep your steps and sidewalks free of ice and snow all winter long.

COMES SUMMER AND THIS SUPER FLAME GUN IS YOUR FRIEND. What a quick way to destroy weeds. This flame gun is so great . . . it doesn't stop at just weeds . . . it virtually burns up into smoke old tree stumps (eliminating all that chopping). Clear the grass and weeds that grow between patio blocks and sidewalk pavement in just seconds. Demolish anthills and insect nests. The professional gardener will use the Super Flame Gun to sterilize soil in just 25% of the time the smaller model takes . . . and more thoroughly too.

PERFECTLY SAFE AND EASY TO USE. Despite all this super heat it is actually easier to use than the standard model . . . and 100% safe. Just fill with ordinary kerosene. Holds 4 times the amount of fuel, so you don't have to stop and fill up nearly as often or fuss with matches. One filling will burn for up to 1 hour . . . more than enough time for the average job. Perfectly balanced so even a dainty woman can handle it with ease. Easy grip handle. All that extra heat is generated by a super coil . . . which simply means you spend much less time doing a better job.

ACTUALLY MADE IN ENGLAND. Only the finest skilled workmanship and best gauge steel is used to produce this fine piece of equipment. Finished in a rich golden color. Over 3 feet long.

Horses and juvenile delinquency?

it doesn't figure

Can you imagine a kid on horseback stealing hubcaps? Or smoking pot? Or marching in an anti-world protest? It just doesn't figure. Horses, especially purebred Arabians, go with kids, the outdoors and wholesome fun. And the beauty is this: you can own a purebred Arabian for less than you'd pay for a second car. If you think you've done everything for your kids, go one more giant step . . . investigate owning an Arabian.

The man next door®

They tried an "adults only" skating period for 15 minutes every hour at our town's ice rink, but it was abandoned at the request of the grown-ups. It was like eating an ice cream cone in front of 75 hungry children.

Dad Hillis admits he's a lot like Congress. "I invariably make big plans in January," he reports, "talk about them for months, drop most of them, and end up with a mighty small yield at the end of the year."

Bill Norman travels a great deal but he confesses he still doesn't like to fly. Therefore, he says he always tries to take early morning flights because "I don't much care what happens to me before breakfast."

The Rev. George Hall concedes that the Bible has a few episodes that might be rated "X," but he is strong in his belief that this has nothing at all to do with the Good Book being a consistent best seller.

In these days of threatened wildlife, I was feeling good about finally attracting two cardinals to our feeder. Then Dot Dresch saw them and exclaimed, "I see our cardinals are visiting your feeder."

Harold Evans' six-year-old daughter was asked in school the other day what kind of work her father does. "I don't know," she replied, "but I think he has his secretary do most of it."

Our newspaper friend, Ned Mehaffey, has turned down a job as a television newscaster, explaining, "When you talk, you can't go back and X it out."

Aunt Opal has lost her faith in horoscopes. Since she gets her newspaper a day late, she has found the predictions often don't pan out.

Fred Thompson seems happy in his new retirement village home. He writes that he finds it sort of refreshing to once again be around people who refer to him as "Sonny."

"You shouldn't carry all that. Make two trips."

"I'll open the door, Mom, as soon as you're over your tantrum."

During my infrequent gloomy moments, I sometimes wonder if the next natural resource which will be depleted will be the taxpayer.

For quite a while, I have been getting strong hints from Christine and from our 16-year-old Rosemary that my wardrobe ought to be updated with a pair of bright-colored slacks.

I knew what to do when Chris gave me a gift certificate for use at a men's store. "Get something that's not so dark and old and ungroovy," urged Rosemary. At the store, I began to rummage halfheartedly through the brighter trousers, seeking my size.

A young salesman, no more than 21, appeared. Annoyingly brisk, he said, "I think, sir, that the kind of slacks you want are over here." He led me over to a table of trousers that looked much like those I'm used to—dark and, well, ungroovy.

Frankly, the arrogant salesman was right. I was inclined toward the slacks he was showing me, but I certainly did not like his implying that I couldn't properly wear the bright ones. Embarrassed and irked, I stalked out.

Chris and Rosemary were disappointed when I returned home empty-handed, but when I told them why, they both burst out laughing. And I found myself laughing with them.

That settled it. Tomorrow I'm going back after those slacks. The bright ones. I've decided they're the ones for a man so young that he still acts childishly from time to time.

New kind of floor from Armstrong
When it cushions like carpet and cleans like vinyl, you're on Easy Street™

Want to bring an old kitchen into 1971 in a hurry? Start your remodelling with Easy Street—a new idea in vinyl floors from Armstrong.

New Easy Street gives you the comfort of carpet with the easy maintenance of vinyl.

When you step on Easy Street you feel the "give". Just like carpet. That's because Easy Street has an extra-thick foam-cushion backing underneath. When you lift your foot, Easy Street springs back. Just like carpet. Some patterns of this new Armstrong floor even look like carpet.

But there's a side to Easy Street that no carpet can match. The top side.

Easy Street is durable, nonporous vinyl, so it cleans as easily as only vinyl can. If you drop an egg or spill some gravy, it's no problem. Easy Street comes clean with the swipe of a sponge or a mop.

There are no dirt-catching seams either because Easy Street comes in rolls 12 feet wide, so you can do practically any kitchen in one piece.

Easy Street is as easy on the eyes as it is on the feet. Queen Anne, the design in the kitchen on the opposite page, is offered in a variety of colors. So is Santa Fe, the popular Spanish tile effect (top, right). And Dunbarton, the classic French design (bottom, right). Virginia Brick, in addition to the red, comes in Colonial white. These are richly textured ceilings with an al sculptured look. (The picture at the left gives y guest's-eye view of a Chandelier Ceiling in Chatham design. In the close-up picture below, can see the rich texture and detail. See what we m by a "sculptured look"?)

A Chandelier Ceiling is unlike any tile ce you've ever seen. In fact, it dosen't look like ceiling at all. The edges of the tile aren't bevelle there are no "V" grooves between tiles. The rich ture flows smoothly from wall to wall. Is it any wo that these new Chandelier Ceilings are already b seen in so many beautiful rooms throughout country?

The Chatham design is acoustical, so it su up noise. All Chandelier Ceilings are fire resis And installation is a snap for the do-it-yourse (Your husband can install one over a weekend.)

New design in carpets
Out with the old, in with the bold

New Adventure Prints™ are the latest word in the new lively world of indoor fashion. And—take it from your friend in the carpet business—these bold and sassy prints can go with anything: plaids, muted stripes, solids, or prints.

Adventure Prints are part of Armstrong's growing carpet line—a complete collection of shags, sculptured, patterned, and plush carpet—with literally hundreds of glorious colors to choose from.

And there's no guesswork when it comes to choosing the right fiber. Armstrong has selected the best fiber for each kind of carpet and labeled it "Armstrong Approved" So, both fiber and carpet are backed by one familiar name—Armstrong. Adventure Prints, for example, are made of continuous filament nylon for an unusually durable carpet with excellent resistance to soil.

To find out more about Adventure Prints and other Armstrong carpets, see the box below.

CREATORS OF THE INDOOR WORLD

This puts the soup on.

The KitchenAid Hot-water Dispenser gives you 190° water at the turn of a knob. It's like having a built-in teakettle.

Use it to make tea, instant coffee, hot soup; to get a fast start on cooking; to thaw frozen vegetables; to warm baby's bottles; to prepare instant foods and drinks instantly.

You'll probably think of uses for it that even we haven't thought of.

This cleans up afterwards.

The KitchenAid Dishwasher-Sink is a dishwasher, a stainless steel sink and work counter, and a spacious storage cabinet with room for a KitchenAid disposer.

So it's a complete clean-up center, yet it's just 48" wide.

Install a KitchenAid Hot-water Dispenser and your clean-up center will also help put the soup on.

If you want a KitchenAid Dishwasher-Sink or Disposer or Hot-water Dispenser or all three, see your KitchenAid dealer. He's in the Yellow Pages. Or write us for more information. KitchenAid Dishwashers, Dept. 1RC-2, The Hobart Manufacturing Company, Troy, Ohio 45373.

HOW TO MAKE THE 1970 TAX REFORM CHANGES PAY OFF

If they had a choice, most Americans would probably rather have a severe dose of poison ivy than suffer through their annual income tax battle.

To ease the pain of this year's 1040 fray, we've capsulized the key 1970 tax reform changes. With them, and the tax tips in the rest of this article, you should be able to make some substantial savings in your tax bill.

Crucial tax reform changes

- Exemptions for yourself, your spouse, and dependents (including any age and blindness exemptions) have been raised to $625 for 1970, and will be increased gradually to $750 by 1973.
- A low-income allowance of up to $1100 has been adopted. You can use it instead of itemizing deductions or taking the percentage standard deduction. By combining the increased exemption and the new low-income allowance, any taxpayer earning $1725 or less will owe no tax for 1970.
- You can reduce your withholding tax if your estimated itemized deductions are unusually high. This increases your take-home pay, and you won't have to wait until the following year to get back your over-withheld tax via the refund route. Your employer should have the necessary IRS forms.
- You can avoid withholding by certifying to your employer that you will owe no tax for the year, and owed no tax for the prior year. This change will particularly help students and other part-time employees who will thus have immediate use of the money which would otherwise be deducted.
- Income-averaging rules have been liberalized. If your 1970 income was considerably higher than in the four preceding years, averaging will give you a lower tax. To see whether you qualify, check over a Schedule G, available at your local IRS office.
- Moving expense deduction rules have been eased so you can reap greater tax savings if you move to a new job. Under the old law, your deduction usually was limited to transportation charges for your household goods, in-transit storage fees, and travel costs to get you and your family to the new location. Now, in addition to this, you can deduct:

1. Travel expenses that you incurred in one pre-move house-hunting trip.
2. Temporary living expenses up to 30 days at the new job location.
3. Related expenses, such as real estate commissions, legal fees, mortgage costs, escrow fees and other expenses incurred in selling your old home and buying a new one. The maximum you can claim for these newly added deductions is $2500 (but no more than $1000 can be for house-hunting and temporary living expenses).

- If you're single and earned $1700 or less, you don't have to file any return (unless you file to get a refund). For married persons filing jointly, the non-filing requirement extends to incomes up to $2300. Senior citizens (65 or older) don't need to file on incomes up to $2300.
- Surprising as it seems, IRS usually will compute your tax if your income is $20,000 or less. They'll also automatically mail you any refund you have coming. Of course, if you owe more tax, you'll be billed by IRS.
- The five percent tax surcharge was dropped July 1, 1970. However, on your 1970 tax return, you'll pay a 2½ percent tax surcharge representing the six-month period it was in effect.
- Taxpayers failing to pay all the tax due on their returns now face a non-payment penalty of up to 25 percent of the underpayment. This penalty is in addition to six percent interest charged by IRS for late payment.

Preparing your return

Getting ready. Whether you do your own return or have it professionally prepared, you must organize and summarize your tax data on income and deductions. Allow yourself enough time to do the job right—preferably in a quiet spot. Here's what you'll need:

- All 1970 W-2 forms from your employer, and forms 1099 covering interest and dividends received.
- Your 1970 deposit slips, plus canceled checks and payroll stubs.
- Receipts for cash-paid deductions, such as drugs and door-to-door charity contributions. You'll also need your record of business travel and entertainment expenses.
- Several sheets of wide, multi-column accounting paper.
- Copies of your 1969 federal income tax return, and your state income tax retur
- A 1970 IRS instruction book, and set of 1970 tax forms.

Figuring your income. Begin by chec ing over your 1969 return to see h you reported your income and dedu tions. This will tip you off to any "carr over" items, such as unused charitab contributions.

Next, using your accounting pap make a worksheet for your 1970 incom List your salary or wages, your intere and dividends from your form 109 plus any other income. Don't inclu Social Security benefits—they're n taxable. Go through your 1970 ban deposits to make sure you haven't ove looked anything.

Be sure to check your 1099 for against actual dividends and intere received. If you don't agree with t form 1099, check with the payor to s who's right.

If you sold stocks or other assets, j your sales price on your worksheet. I addition, you'll need the dates y bought and sold the asset, your co basis, and any sales expenses. To g your cost on stocks, refer to the brok slip you received when you made yo purchase.

Finally, total the various incom items on your worksheet. Give this t whoever prepares your return, or s it aside for filling out your own retur

Getting the most deductions. Label t columns on a sheet of accounting pap with the various deductions—medica interest or taxes. Take your cancele checks and enter the amounts in th correct column. Where necessary, i sert a brief identifying comment on th worksheet. When you're done, you' have a complete breakdown of all 197 checkbook expenses.

Next add the following deduction

1. Drug expenses not paid by check.
2. Items withheld from your paycheck such as charity contributions, med cal insurance premiums, and stat and local income taxes.
3. Interest paid to savings and loan as sociations and other lenders who de duct interest paid from your saving account. Check your savings accoun passbooks for this.
4. Interest paid on your charge account

I won't let Mary wear Teresa's hand-me-downs unless they're clean enough. With Tide XK, they are. Glad I found it in my new Hoover.

If you don't want a big machine taking up a lot of space, the Hoover Spin-Drying Washer is perfect for you. It's a portable small enough to store away when you're not using it. And it's got two tubs. One tub washes while the other tub spins clothes damp-dry. Hoover's Turbo-Action agitator washes clothes faster too—as much as 24 pounds in about 30 minutes.

Tide has agreed with Washer makers to supply Tide XK samples packed by them and to feature their washers in Tide XK advertising.

The makers of 22 leading washers pack Tide XK in every top-loading automatic.

and your installment loans.

5. Mortgage loan interest payments. Principal repayments aren't deductible. But don't overlook deducting your real estate taxes if they're paid by the lender.
6. Your gasoline taxes. This deduction can be figured easily with an IRS table if you've kept a mileage record for 1970.
7. Sales taxes. This deduction also can be figured with an IRS table. Be sure to add the sales tax on any car purchases in 1970.

Now total all the columns on your worksheet to arrive at your maximum deductions. On a separate worksheet, take each column and summarize by deduction categories. For example, your medical column should be summarized on a separate worksheet by showing each doctor, the hospital and other medical expenses, plus the total paid each.

As one last step, check your deductions against the table below. Published by the IRS, it shows the average deductions claimed by taxpayers in various income categories. However, this table is not a what-can-I-get-away-with chart. If you're audited, you'll have to prove your deductions.

Doing the return. Everything you've done to this point must be done by you, whether you plan to prepare your return or have it done by a tax pro. If you do employ a tax consultant, he'll need:

1. Copies of your 1969 federal and state returns.
2. Your 1970 tax return package from IRS, including the "piggyback" name and address label, which you should attach to the 1040 copy you send in.
3. Your W-2 and 1099 forms.
4. Changes in your exemptions, including dependents.
5. Your 1970 worksheets and summary sheets. If you're in doubt on any deduction, give him ample data to decide if it's deductible.

If you do your own return. Note: do your work copy in pencil to avoid messy, inked changes.

After filling in your occupation and checking the correct tax status box, complete the data on exemptions. Under the tax reform act, each exemption is worth a $625 deduction for 1970. If you claim dependents not living with you, complete line 34 on the back of the return. If you don't, IRS may be calling.

Next, complete the income portion of the return. Some of your deductions, like medical expenses, charitable contributions and sales taxes, can't be figured until you've calculated your total income, so do the income section first.

Include your wages or salary on line 12. Copy this data from your form W-2. If you had more than one employer or your spouse is employed, enter total from Continued your W-2 forms at line 12. Enter your federal tax withheld at line 26.

If you worked for more than one employer, too much social security tax (F.I.C.A. tax) may have been withheld. In that case, enter the excess at line 62 on the back of the return. Don't overlook this, since any excess is treated as added tax paid by you, and reduces your tax liability.

Attach a copy of the W-2 form to the back of the return, and start on your dividend income. If dividends were $100 or less, enter the total on line 13a, and claim the dividend exclusion (up to $100 of dividends received by each spouse from U.S. companies) on line 13b. Taxable dividends (line 13c) will then be zero. However, when dividends exceed $100, you must complete Schedule B, furnished with the tax forms from IRS.

If you had interest income of $100 or less, enter this at line 14. Where it's over $100, you must use Schedule B. If you have other income, such as business income or capital gains, fill out the appropriate schedules and enter the totals at line 15.

You're now ready to tackle "adjustments to income" (line 17). On this line, you deduct sick pay, job-related moving expenses, certain employee business expenses and any payments made to a self-employed retirement plan. IRS has printed schedules for all these items.

If you're entitled to any of these deductions, see your IRS instruction booklet. The total of the "adjustments" should be subtracted from your total income, and the balance inserted at line 18 is known as adjusted gross income. Your deductions for sales tax, medical expenses and charitable contributions can be limited by adjusted gross income, so this line is especially important.

Itemizing your deductions. First, decide which of the following deduction routes gives you the greatest deduction:

1. The standard deduction of $1000 or 10 percent of your adjusted gross income, whichever is lower.
2. The low-income allowance of up to $1100, provided by the tax reform act.
3. Itemizing your deductions.

Note: If you use the standard deduction or the low-income allowance, skip the following.

Here's where your old sheets and summary sheets pay off. First, use Schedule A from your IRS tax form package, and enter your itemized deductions. Your total itemized deductions should be entered at line 47 (a) on the back of form 1040.

Although the tax reform act hasn't altered this deduction area, there still are ways to cut taxes.

Medical expenses. Be sure to deduct half your medical insurance premiums up to $150, even if you can't meet the three percent test on medical expense deductions. Also, IRS will allow a deduction of 7 cents a mile for transportation

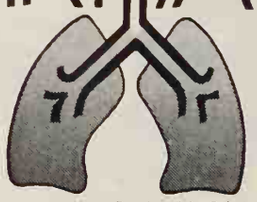
WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT

PNEUMONIA



Drawing: John Baker

Many people, including doctors who should know better, regard pneumonia as one of the conquered diseases.

They couldn't be more wrong. Pneumonia is appearing with increasing frequency, and once again poses a major threat to your health.

As late as 1936, pneumonia was the No. 1 cause of death in the United States. Then the sulfa drugs and penicillin brought the disease under control.

Today, medical researchers are busily dusting off studies of pneumonia that were happily abandoned with the advent of the "wonder" drugs.

Conflicting reasons are given for the resurgence of one of mankind's oldest and deadliest enemies. The pattern of the illness is often different from the pattern of 40 years ago, yet pneumonia today is essentially the same as pneumonia yesterday. What is this old, and yet new, illness?

Pneumonia isn't a single disease, but any one of a dozen different acute lung infections caused by a variety of microorganisms, bacterial and viral.

Many people confuse pneumonia with bronchitis, in which only the air tubules leading into the lung tissues are infected. But all forms of true pneumonia are characterized by a much more dangerous condition. The spongy, air-filled tissues of the lungs themselves become infected, and inhaled oxygen can no longer diffuse properly into the bloodstream.

Still the most common and most dangerous form is lobar pneumonia, so-called because it's commonly confined to a single section or lobe of a lung. When both lungs are affected, it's double pneumonia.

Lobar pneumonia is typically caused by small bullet-shaped bacteria which grow together in pairs, end to end (called the Diplococcus pneumoniae or pneumococcus). These organisms are often found living in your nose or throat, just waiting for an opportunity to move into your lungs, especially when your body's resistance to infection is low, or when you have a cold.

Once the infection is established, a whole section of the lung can quickly become filled with so much mucus and pus that air can no longer move in and out of the infected area. These bacteria also produce debilitating poisons or tox-

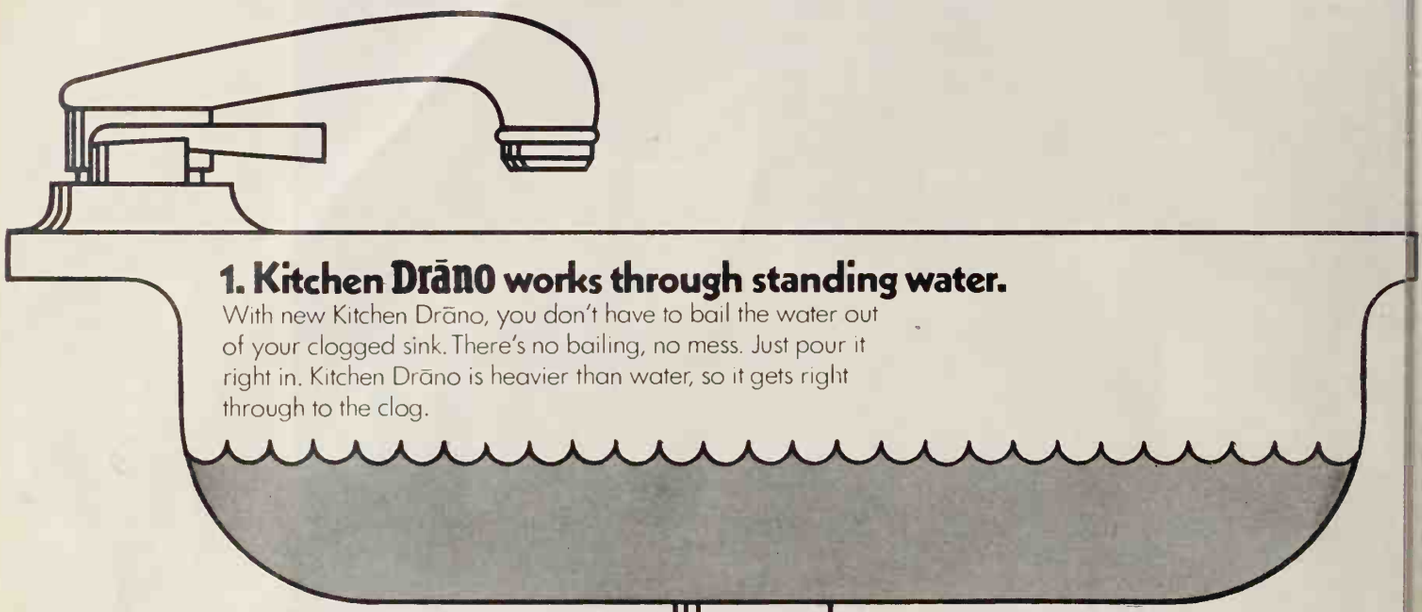
NEW KITCHEN Drāno® SOLVES ALL 4 KITCHEN DRAIN PROBLEMS



1. Kitchen Drāno works through standing water.

With new Kitchen Drāno, you don't have to bail the water out of your clogged sink. There's no bailing, no mess. Just pour it right in. Kitchen Drāno is heavier than water, so it gets right through to the clog.

2. Kitchen Drāno dissolves trapped grease faster and better than other leading liquid drain cleaners.

That's because Kitchen Drāno has a grease-cutting solvent you don't get with other leading liquids. Just half a capful of Kitchen Drāno once a week prevents grease from building into a clog. Keeps your drain free-running, too.

3. Kitchen Drāno cleans and deodorizes garbage disposers.

Kitchen Drāno is the only effective leading liquid drain opener that cleans and deodorizes garbage disposers. It doesn't contain a caustic, so it can't damage your disposer. Two capfuls a week do the job.

4. Kitchen Drāno has enzymes that help it eat through food clogs.

All those little food particles that sneak down your drain can cause clog problems. But the enzymes in new Kitchen Drāno actually help it eat through those clogs. They won't harm your pipes or septic tank either.

Kitchen Drāno costs about 1/2 as much to use.

New Kitchen Drāno is concentrated. So one little capful is all you need to unclog. With caustic liquids, you have to use half a big bottle. (Our measuring cap makes sure you're using just the right amount, too.)

that contribute greatly to severity of the illness.

The first symptoms include: den onset of chills and a perature spiking to 103° higher; an increasing sense tightness in the chest; a ing of breathlessness; a dry gh that soon becomes ex- nely painful. The victim n becomes delirious from fever and toxicity of the ss. The infection can pro- s so swiftly that an ap- ently normal person may me mortally ill within a ter of hours. He soon be- coughing up sticky mucus ed with pus and a rusty- red spit from the infected . If the condition goes un- ted, the fever and chills continue for as much as weeks while the victim mes increasingly weak short of breath. Death occur at any time.

hose who survive typical- o through a "crisis." The perature drops sharply in midst of drenching per- ation, and great quantities fectious debris are coughed rom the diseased lung. A period of convalescence equired before healing is plete. In many cases, lung e is so seriously scarred the victim remains high- ulnerable to recurrent in- ons for many years.

rtunately, lobar pneumo- s rarely allowed to run its se without treatment. At the sulfa drugs and peni- proved extremely effec- in fighting the pneumo- us. They stopped the in- on before it really got ed. Even lobar pneumo- aused by streptococcus or hylococcus infections (es- ally tough bacteria) re- ded well to antibiotic tment for many years. recently, more and more iotic-resistant strains of e organisms have begun pear.

ctims of lobar pneumonia usually tiny babies who neither the strength nor resistance to fight oii the disease, and elderly people whose natural resistance has been beaten down by other illnesses. Yet healthy young adults also may become victims. Indeed, pneumonia of any kind today poses its greatest threat as a secondary infection, moving in on the heels of virus infections such as measles, flu or mononucleosis, or complicating less dangerous bacterial infections such as pharyngitis or bronchitis.

Other forms of pneumonia have similar symptoms, but usually aren't as swift-moving or devastating. Bronchial pneumonia, also caused by bacteria, often develops after acute bronchitis. It characteristically infects small patches of lung tissue throughout both lungs, rather than settling in one lobe. Viral pneumonia is impervious to antibiotic treatment, but fortunately is usually a less virulent infection than the more common bacterial pneumonias.

Pneumonia also can arise from inhaling irritating gas fumes (chemical pneumonia), aspirating material from the stomach into the lungs while vomiting (aspiration pneumonia), accidental introduction of oily nose drops into the lungs (oil pneumonia), or just remaining too still in bed for too long during some other illness (stasis pneumonia).

Why is pneumonia a threat today?

Bacteria that resist antibiotics are one important factor. Here are some others.

● Lack of naturally developed resistance to bacteria. Many doctors feel that widespread shotgun use of powerful antibiotics during the last 30 years for relatively trivial upper respiratory infections has robbed many individuals of natural body defenses. These defenses would have developed had these people been allowed to fight off numerous minor respiratory infections unaided by strong antibiotics.

● Increasing age of our population. Elderly people have always been more vulnerable to pneumonia than have stronger, healthier young people. The old are potential victims any time their resistance has been broken by a bout with influenza or other illnesses, and antibiotics often just won't stop pneumonia for them anymore. It is this age group that has been hardest hit in recent years.

● Air pollution and lung damage. During the past decade, we have seen a tenfold increase in the amount of corrosive, lung-damaging pollution carried in the air we breathe, particularly in our urban areas. It's hard to say precisely how our increasing air pollution contributes to the situation, but there is little question about its indirect effects.

For example, lung damage caused by air pollution leads to pulmonary emphysema, a condition in which healthy, air-filled lung tissue is gradually stretched and scarred until the air sacs lose their elasticity. This slow-developing condition creates more and more areas of damaged lung tissue in which infection can gain a foothold, ready to explode into full-blown pneumonia the moment body resistance flags.

Emphysema also contributes to a higher mortality rate when pneumonia does strike, since there is less healthy lung tissue left to carry the victim through a bout of infection once it gets started.

● Post-surgery pneumonia. This extraordinary hazard has been recognized for as long as inhalation anesthetics have been in common use, well over 125 years. If both parents brush with Crest, will the baby have strong teeth?

Chances are the baby will. Because with both parents brushing with Crest, chances are the baby will grow up on Crest.

And growing up on Crest is one of the best things that can happen to a child.

Crest has fluoride. And fluoride makes teeth strong, healthy, more resistant to cavities.

We are accepted by the American Dental Association.

In the 15 years that Crest has been around, a whole generation of babies has grown up on Crest... with a lot of healthy, cavity-free teeth to show for it.

We're proud of that. Because fighting cavities is the whole idea behind Crest. That's why we encourage people to brush after eating, to watch treats, and to put in regular appearances at the dentist.

Will the baby have strong teeth? If he works at it. And Crest is going to be a big help.

Heredity has nothing to do with Crest's effectiveness against cavities.

In the ad we were trying to say that if parents use Crest, chances are the children will use it, too. And a child who grows up brushing with Crest will have strong teeth.

But we didn't say it very well. Some people told us they thought the ad was trying to say there is a hereditary benefit from Crest.

There isn't. Heredity has nothing to do with Crest's effectiveness against cavities. Crest is effective but only for people who brush with it.

Today there's a whole generation of babies who grew up brushing with Crest. And there's a lot of strong, healthy teeth to show for it.

We're proud of that. Because fighting cavities is the whole idea behind Crest.

Have regular checkups, watch between-meal treats, and brush often.

pollutant-producing cars by "cleaner" new cars.

with the most sophisticated pollution-control devic pollution is maintenance.

Of the five basic air pollutants, the internal combu engine spews out four. These emissions come from sources: the engine crankcase, the exhaust and the

All U. S. cars manufactured since 1963 (1961 in Evaporation from fuel systems has been greatly re

"DR. SEUSS'S ABC"
A remarkable book that teaches your child the sounds of the letters. Funny words and pictures start your youngster laughing, leave him reading all by himself! Yours Free to keep.

Now that your little one is walking and talking— he's ready to start reading!

Remember the first time your little one said, "Mama," or "Dada"? Then he learned to say another word, and still another. Now, he knows so many words, you just can't add them up. He puts them together now. He talks in sentences—and all without a single formal lesson. It's only natural. Because he wants to learn. He's so curious, so eager to grasp his strange, lovely, exciting world.

And with BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS, he can learn to read just as naturally and happily as he learned to talk. So many little children have—from tiny two's to strapping six-year-olds—with the help of these enchanting and pertinent books by the famous Dr. Seuss and his fellow authors.

Why? Because Dr. Seuss knows what your child wants to know about—his very own ears and what they hear; his chubby little hands and what they can do; and (with the help of some fascinating bears) he can even learn to count and find out how numbers work.

So, Dr. Seuss and his friends use the simplest, clearest words to explain these ideas in clever little rhymes. But, the illustrations are the real key. Your child will love their bigness, their brightness—he'll go over them again and again. And he'll soon be on to put the words and the pictures together. With just a little help from Mom or Dad, your child will soon discover the magic of reading all by himself!

From this happy start— on to bigger things!

The three BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS shown here are the starter books in the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM. They cost $5.85 at the publisher's catalog price. But you may have all three for only $1.65 as an introduction. They'll get your "beginning" beginner off to a happy start in reading. And then it's an easy glide right into reading regular BEGINNER BOOKS . . . they begin where BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS leave off!

As a member of the program, your child will receive a BEGINNER BOOK each month, and you will be billed only $1.65 plus delivery. After accepting four monthly selections, you may cancel membership at any time.

The other three pollutants are produced by all internal combustion engines in varying amounts according to the anti-pollution devices on the engine and the mechanical condition of the engine.

Carbon monoxide results from incomplete fuel combustion and from too rich a fuel mixture.

Hydrocarbons are released into the air by fuel evaporation and by incomplete burning of fuel. Unburned hydrocarbons are the major offenders. The quantities produced are greatly increased by inefficient engine operation resulting from badly worn and/or poorly maintained engines.

Oxides of nitrogen are produced by all forms of combustion. Both unburned hydrocarbons and oxides of nitrogen contribute to what is known as photochemical smog.

The importance of maintenance

It is estimated that 85 percent of automotive air pollution now comes from cars three years old and over. And according to Automobile Manufacturers Association, the average age of cars in use is 5½ years. Many authorities claim that for the next ten years the biggest pollution problem will stem from cars not equipped with new emission control systems and cars that are poorly maintained. If all cars now on the road were replaced with well-maintained 1971 models, the automotive portion of our air pollution problem would be virtually solved. But this solution is not likely to have wide consumer appeal so let's take a look at what you can do to make your present car a better clean-air citizen.

Emission control mechanisms, regardless of type and degree of sophistication, require periodic maintenance or they can cause an engine to actually produce more pollutants than an older model not equipped with controls.

Crankcase ventilation (PCV), on all U.S.-prod cars since 1963, must cleaned regularly to op properly. A sticking or clo valve can double the en emission output.

Air filter must be cle and/or replaced regularl dirty filter restricts air upsetting the air-fuel mi and can increase emissio as much as 75 percent.

Carburetor and automa choke must be adjusted co rectly. An overly rich se results in huge outpourin unburned pollutants.

tune-up, two out of three owners had no complaints about the operation of their cars before tune-up, but an almost unanimous majority reported easier starting, better acceleration and smoother idle after tune-up.

The average motorist has no way of knowing how much unburned gasoline is being pumped into the air. If, for example, one cylinder misfires just once in 20 times, you are not likely to feel it behind the wheel of a heavy car with a powerful engine. But that five percent misfire will increase the unburned hydrocarbons emitted from your car by 300 percent.

Further proof of the relationship between engine condition and emissions comes from a check of 120 cars with an average of 35,000 miles on their odometers. All were considered by their owners to be in good mechanical condition. Cars were checked for emissions, then given the most basic of tune-ups consisting of nothing more than adjustment of idle speed, fuel mixture and ignition timing. No parts were replaced. This minimal service reduced hydrocarbons by seven percent, carbon monoxide by ten percent.

What kind of "hardware" does your car have?

If your car is a pre-1963 model, it probably has no emission control equipment unless it was first registered in California. All 1963 and later models have emission control devices; the newer the car, the more efficient and extensive the system.

The systems are designed to a) recirculate blow-by gases, b) improve carburetion and combustion for cleaner exhaust, c) reduce remaining harmful exhaust emissions to an acceptable level and d) control vapor loss from the fuel system.

Maintenance of these devices is not as complex as it might seem. The PCV valve routes blow-by gases back through the engine to be burned. The valve shou checked for proper oper every six months.

Routine maintenance virtually all other emi control devices on your including the '71 mode handled on an annual ideally as part of a com engine tune-up.

Just how safe are garden pesticides?

Don't spray or dust just because you think it's the thing to do. Much of the time it isn't necessary—and it's the indiscriminate use of pesticides that's harmful.

Some plants, like hostas, daylilies and campanulas, are relatively pest free and don't need protection. Instead concentrate on those plants—like roses, apples and cucumbers—that are subject to frequent insect and disease attacks. If you don't spray them at regular intervals, you may lose much of your crop.

Some woody plants are subject to insects with a long life cycle, such as scale on lilacs. They commonly need only one or two applications a year: a dormant spray in early spring before growth starts, and a second in June when young insects are crawling.

If you feed, water and care for your plants properly, they will grow more vigorously and be better able to ward off excessive buildup of pests.

The kinds of pesticides to use are those that do not persist in the environment. Fortunately, most pesticides sold today at garden centers are relatively short-lived. They are broken down into harmless substances soon after doing their jobs. However, since all pesticides are toxic, you must always handle them exactly as the label directs. It's your assurance of safety.

Carbaryl controls many kinds of chewing insects. Malathion is most effective against scale, aphids and other sucking insects. Diazinon acts against many chewing insects, as well as sucking types. Two pesticides derived from plants are rotenone (a stomach poison for control of chewing insects) and pyrethrum (a contact poison for sucking insects). Both have low toxicity for humans and warm-blooded animals, but keep them away from fish ponds. Dicofol and tetradifon are two effective chemicals to control red spider mites.

DDT has been banned for many uses. What if you still have some on hand? The worst thing you could do is pour it down the drain. It will find its way into our waterways and endanger wildlife. Just seal it up and store in a safe place until official word reveals a disposal method.

For control of plant diseases, the following products are among the most effective: captan, folpet, zineb, ziram and dinocap.

You can buy and use pesticides separately or in available mixtures. By using a multipurpose product containing carbaryl, malathion, dicofol and folpet, you control aphids, red spider mites, various beetles, worms and many plant diseases.

For safety and convenience, use a multipurpose pesticide available in pre-measured individual plastic packages. Throw in one pack per gallon of water and stir. The container dissolves immediately.

If you need to control only sucking-type insects, such as scale and mites on ornamentals, a systemic pesticide cartridge is available for a root watering feeding lance. This is the safest way to handle it and roots will start to take in the chemical immediately for distribution through the plant. The systemic is effective for six weeks. It works best on actively growing plants, so use it during early spring and early summer.

Systemics are available in both liquid and granular forms. Avoid using the liquid chemical in the garden—it isn't considered as safe as the dry form. Granular systemics can be mixed with lawn or tree fertilizer and spread underneath plant branches. Be sure to scratch and water it in well or puddles could form that would kill birds and animals.

To help combat pollution, use only the best equipment and apply pesticides properly. Cheap equipment is poor economy. Choose a good-quality compression sprayer or gear-driven duster. Whether you spray or dust, the object is to apply just enough film to cover the leaves uniformly on both sides with no excess. Choose a windless day for this.

Pollution of the total environment by the use of garden pesticides is insignificant when the chemicals are handled as instructed. Before they are allowed on store shelves, chemical research staffs run experiments with them on plants and animals and they are then screened by governmental agencies. Pesticides are often blamed for the death of wildlife when other pollutants are the real cause.

Aldrin, dieldrin, DDT, endrin, heptachlor. All are in the same chemical family. Their residual life is long and they should never be used by the home gardener. With newer, safer insecticides available, there is no need for them.

CONSERVATION: how can you help?

Almost everyone who sets out to enjoy the beauty and wonder of the natural world these days becomes aware of the accelerating rate at which environmental quality is being lost. Of course, conservation organizations have been fighting the battle for wild lands, wildlife, and human environment for a long time. They do have many of the right answers, and they always need more members to help them achieve their goals. Even as an individual member of a very large club, you can have the satisfaction of knowing you are helping to keep the world beautiful and habitable. If you get deeply involved as a working member, you may see your labor pay off in the form of effective legislation.

No single organization can do or even aim at doing all the urgent jobs. However, by choosing among half a dozen major national groups, you can feel your way toward personal effectiveness in the areas you care about most. Some of these groups also plan and sponsor outdoor activities—hikes, river trips, pack trips—in grand, unspoiled regions.

• The Sierra Club is one of these organizations. It has been much in the news in recent years because of its unflagging defense of the Grand Canyon against power dams and its call for establishing a national park in the coast redwoods of California.

From a friendly California society of 7,000 hikers and skiers 20 years ago, the Sierra Club now has a membership over 100,000. The society was founded by John Muir in 1892, and was identified originally with failure because of its inability to stop the infamous Hetch Hetchy water project in Yosemite National Park. Since then, in the words of former U.S. Senator Thomas Kuchel, the group has "shown plenty of muscle." It has lost its tax-deductible status (for legislative lobbying) and has sometimes alienated power companies, oil companies, lumber companies, and several arms of the United States Government.

The club conducts wilderness outings all over the world, has choice mountain lodges and other properties available to its members, and publishes hard-hitting books on environmental subjects. Membership information is available from its many regional offices, or its home office at 1050 Mills Tower, San Francisco, Calif. 94104.

• The Wilderness Society, 729 15th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005, also speaks effectively for wilderness and its creatures. It resists invasion of wilderness with many tools, the most effective of which is its magazine, The Living Wilderness. Pack trips into magnificent wilds of the United States and Canada have been part of its program for many years. In a sense, it is the organization best aware of its goals. It concentrates on wilderness, leaving other environmental concerns to others. But more and more the Society recognizes the intricate web of environmental interrelationships.

• The National Parks and Conservation Association, 1701 18th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009, extends its interests and activities beyond the national parks and monuments of America to conservation and restoration of the whole natural environment. Members are kept informed by the Association's publication, National Parks & Conservation Magazine, which first sounded the alarm about the ultimately defeated Echo Park Dam proposal in Dinosaur Monument.

• The National Audubon Society, 1130 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y. 10028, often thought of as mostly devoted to the protection of birds, is actually a strong champi[on] of all wildlife and unspoi[led] wildlife habitat. Audubon Magazine is both eloqu[ent] and beautiful, somethin[g] to collect and save. Members are expected to participate in the work of the Society. You may find yourself joining in a migratory bird count, mar[k]ing a nature center, or even help[ing] to organize a town conservation commission.

• Friends of the Earth, [2] Pacific Ave., San Francisco, Calif. 94133, is a comparatively new organization that tackles worldwide ecological problems and impending problems which ultimately affect the remaining pockets of wilderness and their native species. FOE (as it is called—and it is a forthright foe of pollution and waste) is the brainchild of the former executive director of the Sierra Club, David Brower. The organization has wasted no time pursuing crucial issues with such provocative paperbacks as The Environmental Handbook and The SST Hand[book]. Soon to be published is a first exhibit-format wilderness-appreciation book on the Hawaiian island of Maui.

• The Nature Conservancy, 1800 North Kent Street, Arlington, Virginia 22209, has a different role. Its primary tool is not persuasion, but a revolving fund with which it actually buys available priceless acreage to save it from exploitation. The land is held in trust pending acquisition by a public body charged with maintaining natural values. Along with each deed conveying property from the Conservancy to an arm of government is a reversionary clause by which the Conservancy takes back any such land if used for purposes other than those to which it is dedicated. Conservancy members often preserve the organization by [ap]praising land acquisition projects near where they live.

Plastic blow-up seating pieces accent the casual mood of the room and also suggest spaciousness. You can achieve a similar space-stretching effect by simulating an outdoor scene or painting a checkerboard design in alternating light and dark colors. What better place to roll out the red carpet than an entrance hall? Here a flaming red area rug, banded in lemon and orange, brightens the entry. These same hot colors are repeated in the plaid upholstery on twin bamboo-framed benches. For more fireworks, red spills over onto the door panel. This incendiary scheme is cooled by large expanses of glass plus a muted background of rough-sawn cedar siding with a driftwood finish. Sparing use of furniture enhances the roomy quality of the entry. In keeping with the crisp contemporary look, the sole wall ornaments are a pair of simply designed opaque cylindrical lights.

Dining setup for six? Take a closer look. There are actually only three place settings on this table. Mirrored panels which span the end wall of this small dining room give the optical illusion of twice that number. Mirror magic such as this works best in a room that is simply schemed around one or two colors. Absence of competing hues keeps the reflected image sharp and uncluttered. Although the chair backs are intricately detailed, they register well in this particular setting because they're painted stark white.

Give your cubbyhole bedroom a lift by adding the illusion of height. Sheath one wall, floor to ceiling, with warm, lustrous copper. Here strips of industrial copper were applied to the wall with a mastic, then nailed on with stainless steel upholstery studs. The secret of this application lies in thinness of copper (the texture heavy bond paper) and the nar width (six inches) which is unro from a spool and cut with regular s sors. Coppery tones of the wall are peated in the patterned bedspre chair cushion and trunk nightsta For a less expensive version, you substitute aluminum strips faste to the wall with brass studs.

What appears to be a latticework wall in this dining ell off the living room is really just a tricky wallpaper. Its dimensional design is overprinted on a silvery foil background to simulate depth. A bright emerald green carpet strikes the only color note in the basically all-white setting. Chrome-based, glass-topped table and marshmallow vinyl and chrome chairs underscore the airy atmosphere. For an interesting contrast of shapes, a circular-design wall hanging is played against the crisscross pattern of the wall covering. A solid-black lucite buffet provides the anchor that keeps the art from floating in space.

Macrame—not as knotty as it look

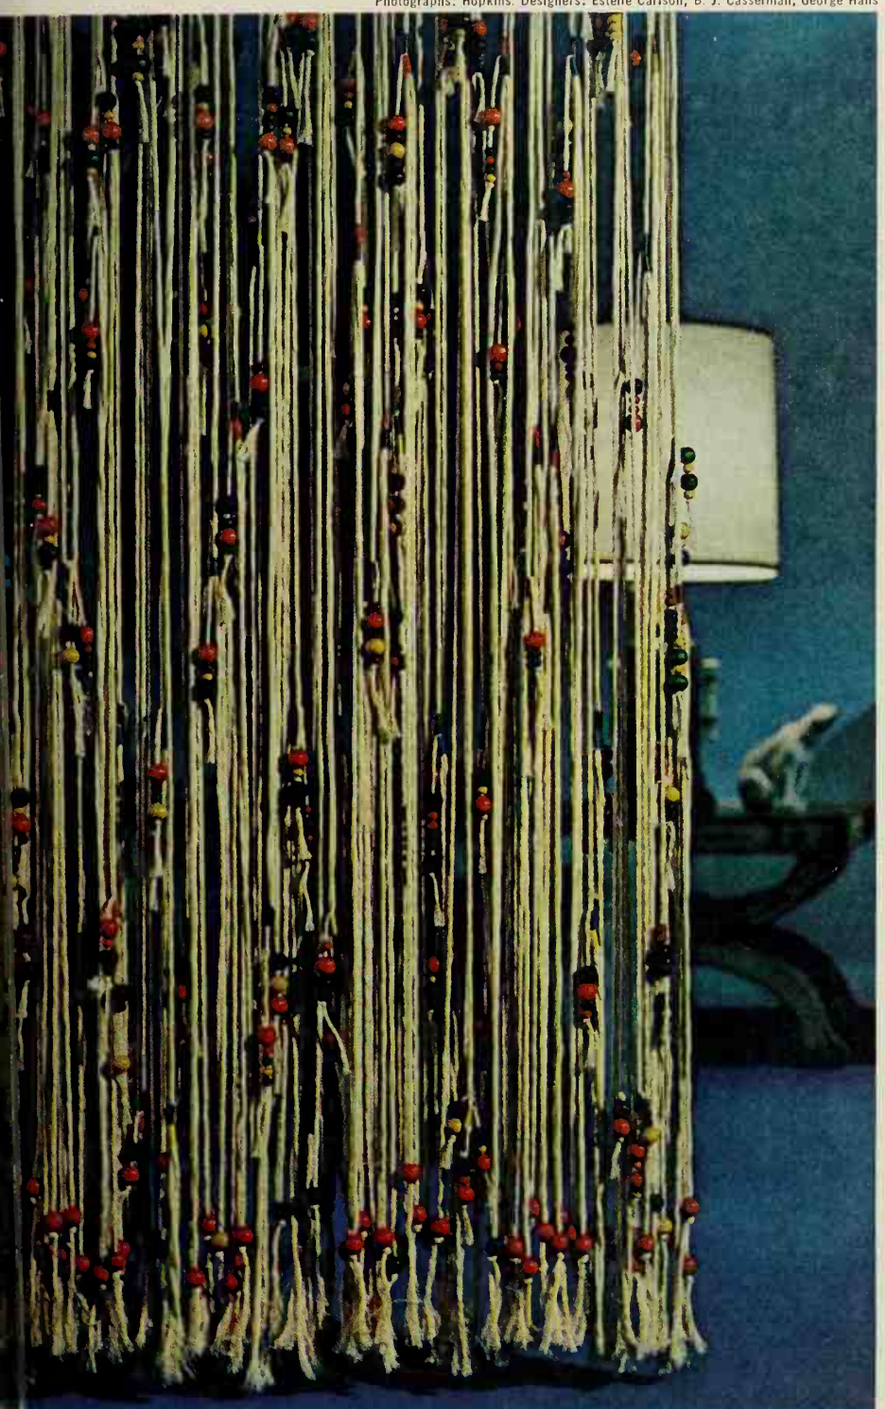
By Morley B. Smith, Crafts and Design Editor

Macrame, the ancient art of knotting, is a craft that fools the eye—it looks impressively complicated, but actually originates from a few basic knots. The rest follows as you improvise.

Free-style or calculated, macrame (pronounced mak-ra-may) successfully combines beauty with practicality. Sailors used it on their vessels for centuries, proving the strength of its construction. Our examples are decorative, but you also can make macrame place mats and purses, runners and rugs, book bags and belts.

Because the materials are inexpensive, you can try a variety of designs and techniques. On small projects, you can work at odd moments almost anywhere—a real help, since macrame, like knitting, takes time.

Photographs: Hopkins. Designers: Estelle Carlson, B. J. Casselman, George Hans



You'll get best results if you first match the material to its intended use. Projects expected to endure hard wear or hold a stiff shape require strong cord with a hard twist. Airy decorations, such as the educated spiderweb (far left), call for thinner, more flexible twine.

Pattern should dominate any macrame design, assisted by texture, color and materials. To achieve this, limit the number of colors you choose for a given design. A small sketch will help you.

If you haven't tried macrame before, a simple project such as the beaded room divider (second from right) would be a good starting point. Regardless of the design you select, practice some of the basic knots first. Then you can create your own patterns as you work.

For how-to information, see page 80.

Room divider requires 2x4s and a 4x8-foot sheet of ¼-inch veneer face plywood that's good on both sides. First lay plywood on scrap lumber. Cut rows of 2½-inch-diameter holes on predetermined centers. Saw straight line through center of holes, creating narrow strips. Crisscross strips as shown.

Make a 2x4 framework about 3½x7 feet, slotting inside edges to accept plywood strips. Glue overlapped strips together and reinforce with small brads. Assemble frame and paint.

Glass racks require ½-inch pine and 1-inch and 2½-inch hole saw. These are long boxes without front and botton sides. For most tumblers, cut 2½-inch holes on top. For stemware, cut 1-inch holes on top and two straight lines ½ inch apart from front edge to hole.

Wine rack requires ½-inch plywood, ½ inch dowels and a 3½-inch hole saw Place scrap lumber under plywood. Cu 3½-inch holes in plywood. Connect th two pieces with six ½-inch dowels.

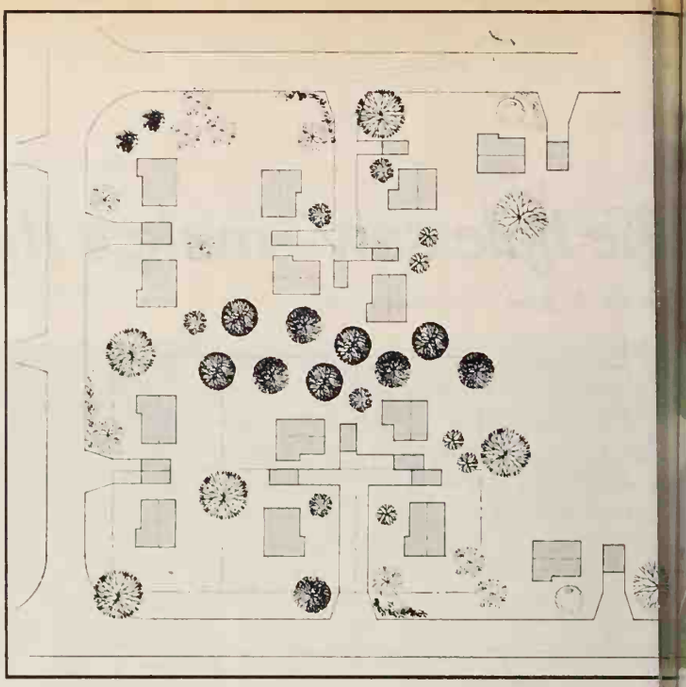
Cluster Houses

A sensible approach to modern living



By Noel Seney, Building Editor

The next time you go shopping for a new home, you'll find that the age of ticky-tacky houses is coming to an end. Today, a new breed of house—and living environment—is quietly taking shape.

In recognition of the new trends in housing, Better Homes and Gardens begins a five-part series on what these changes will mean to you. You'll see low-cost, high-quality houses, and also exciting new ideas on land planning.

One of the most progressive and promising of these new concepts is the cluster development, which marks a sharp departure from traditional patterns of land planning and architecture. Each of the cluster houses we've picked for your consideration would make an excellent buy—whether in a cluster or on your own special lot.

In cluster developments, each house retains its own individuality while making the best use of its lot. Even more important, cluster planning offers unique advantages for family living: privacy when desired, generous amount green spaces, quiet streets, safe play areas for your chil and a real feeling of community spirit.

Not too long ago, cluster houses existed only on the d ing board; today, they represent a growing proportion o newest communities. Laytonia, located in Gaithersb Md., is one such development. Like its sister communi Laytonia's success rests on total planning that begins wit ingenious land arrangement of individualized lots and c mon green areas, and ends with moderately priced, h quality houses.

This kind of planning excellence supplies Laytonia wit unusual but highly functional traffic network. As show the plan above, only one main street cuts comple across the community. At various intervals, dead-end "h merhead" drives veer from the main artery to serve as access roads to house clusters. This imaginative traffic pattern reduces the usual number of roadways, curtails nonlocal traffic, contributes to larger green spaces and greater safety. The dead-end driveways double as safe play areas for children.

Houses are clustered together to create open spaces, but are shielded from one another by carport/privacy screens, strategic house placement and landscaped divides. Yet with all this, the cluster plan still permits as many houses per acre as does the average housing development, and the owner of each house shares in the legal possession of the open landscaped areas.

This thoughtful use of our dwindling land supply will promote an environment where more families can enjoy modern living in a country setting. Laytonia, and similar towns, mark a successful start to that hopeful end.

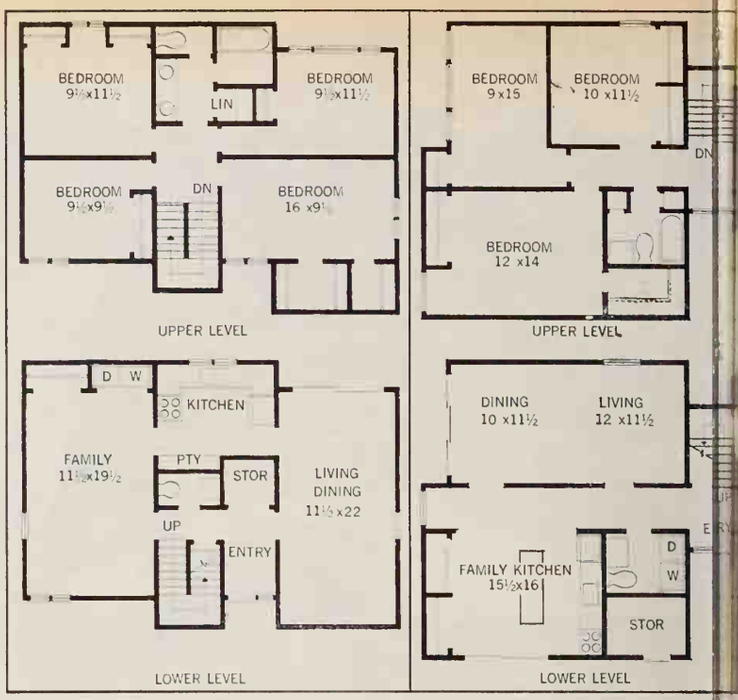
Cluster Houses

Two that can go anywhere



List the three qualities you want most in a new house, and chances are that you'll find them all in one of these two houses. Whether or not you build it in a new cluster development, you'll get the best in contemporary living at an affordable price.

The four-bedroom house on this page steps off with a unique blend of personality, privacy, and good planning.

Geometrical patterns, dressed in pastel colors, give a sharp, contemporary flair to the front of the house. Flanking wall projections create a recessed look around the main entry, while a pocket planting bed adds a colorful footnote to the architectural geometry. Privacy? It's guaranteed with the rear-oriented living room. Instead of facing a typical street view, you enjoy the unique pleasures of your own backyard landscaping.

Planning pays off handsomely throughout the 1581-square-foot interior. Each bedroom on the upper level has an outdoor view, maximum privacy from adjoining rooms and a spacious )set arrangement. The center hall surrenders space to allow · larger bedrooms. In the bathroom, strategic partitioning ows more than one person to use the various facilities at e same time.

Downstairs, the kitchen is conveniently located to serve th the living and dining rooms. A combination laundry and rage area is concealed along a family room wall. And if ur space needs require a basement, the entry closet can converted into a service stairway.

For the smaller family, this three-bedroom house combines made-to-order features: informal floor plan, inexpensive price and an inviting design.

nformality establishes itself with an unusual family-room chen. The breakfast bar divides the room into two sec-ns; while Mom prepares meals in the kitchen, she can keep eye on the children in the carpeted play area. When the ather is bad and the youngsters still want to play out-rs, they can use the sheltered carport.

Thrifty use of space is apparent throughout the house. On the first floor, the half-bath becomes a double-function room by sharing space with a washer and dryer. Three outdoor exits (in dining room, kitchen and main entry) contribute to the open, airy feeling of the 1476-square-foot interior. Twin linen closets in the upstairs bathroom permit double storage space for bath and bedrooms. Each parent has a spacious walk-in closet in the master bedroom. As in the previous house, the coat closet converts into a stairwell should you add a basement.

The front entry is set back along the side of the house. Small flower beds on either side of the entry walk add a warm and colorful note of welcome.

Both houses are finished with a soft-textured hardboard siding that needs little, if any, maintenance. And the pre-finished colors are "locked in" to prevent fading.

Extraordinary plants—but easy

By Hamilton Mason, Garden Editor

These are not common garden-variety plants, but they're easy to grow nonetheless. All you need is some basic know-how and you'll do well with them. You may think of most of the examples shown as plants for warm climates, but they adapt beautifully to container growing anywhere in the country. So, why not try something different, something that will add variety to your collection and still not be a worry. Summer the plants outdoors; bring indoors for winter. They're evergreen and decorative the year around. Spectacular flowers are an added bonus on most of them.

Clivia is one of the most rewardi and least demanding plants you have. The brilliant orange-and-yellow flowers form large heads strong stems that don't need sta The plant is valued for tolerating shade, which means strong or fi light—but not black shade, and definitely not direct sun (leather leaves burn quickly). Birds-nest fern, left, is a striking ornamental. The undivided fronds grow in a rosette and form a cup large enough for birds to nest in—if they have a chance. The plant grows naturally on trees—so that means sharp drainage for the roots. Use chopped tree fern and sphagnum, if available. A soil mixture should have 50 percent perlite. Water frequently. Feed with an acid fertilizer every six weeks if you want big fronds. If leaves turn brown along the edges, you're providing too much moisture—a problem to watch out for in winter. Solution? Cut down on water—and do a neat scissors job on the discolored fronds. This is truly a shade plant—for a north window indoors, under a heavy shade tree in summer. It's one of the few plants you can safely put anywhere you want away from a window. Continued

Staghorn fern is guaranteed to attract attention. It grows naturally on trees, so in cultivation you attach it to a ball of sphagnum on a board and hang it up. As plants increase in size, add to board backing. The basal, roundish fronds turn brown, but don't remove them—they help to protect roots and hold moisture. Pendent, forked fronds eventually yellow and fall—to make room for new growth. When plants get too large, simply cut out small plants (known as "pups") with a sharp knife, back each one with a ball of sphagnum, and tie to a board until roots take hold. (You can grow a small plant in a pot for a while, but eventually the basal fronds cover the top of the pot and thorough watering is a problem.) Hang ferns away from direct sun, indoors or out. To water indoors, hang in shower twice a week and leave until dripping stops. Apply liquid fertilizer in spring.

Bougainvillea, below, scares some people off. They've heard it's tricky and temperamental. Not so. We've known of specimens that have been grown and flowered indoors in Iowa for years. You must have a bright sunny window for bougainvillea in winter. And you must avoid high-nitrogen fertilizer, which produces vegetative growth at the expense of bloom. Plants can bloom most anytime, but put on their best show in spring and early summer. To keep bougainvillea within bounds, prune after flowering and nip back overlong new shoots whenever they appear. Variety Afterglow is shown, but you may prefer one of the many reds or purples that are available.

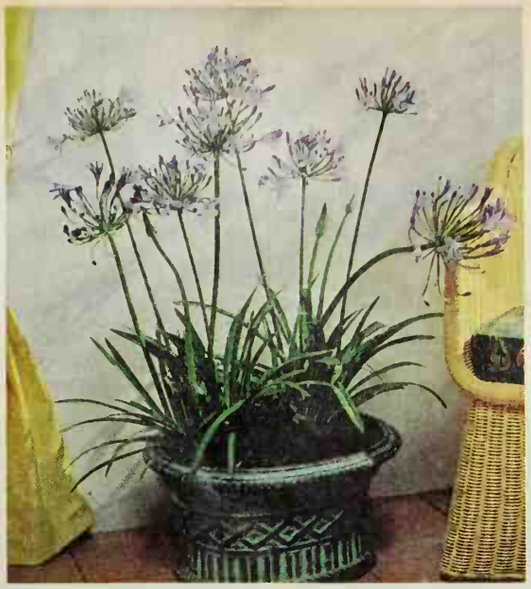
Chinese, or tropical, hibiscus, right, has smaller flowers than the hardy perennial form, but they're produced in abundance from spring through summer. Then, too, the plant is evergreen and makes a handsome addition to an indoor plant collection. This is the commonly cultivated variety, Brilliant, but you can also find a wide range of varieties in pink, yellow, orange and white—singles or doubles. Hibiscus is a large plant, but you can keep it to the size you want by pruning after flowering ends in late summer or early fall. Grow in acid soil and feed in early spring and midsummer with an acid fertilizer. Water only when soil starts to dry out on the surface. Overwatering is one of the main causes of bud drop. Most hibiscus are easy to propagate. Just take four-inch tip cuttings of semihardwood and insert in coarse builder's sand or 50-50 peat and perlite. Keep medium moist.



Agapanthus, is the common as well as botanical name of this blue beauty, left. You can also call it lily-of-the-Nile, though it's really from South Africa. This is a tough plant for sun, and it flowers best when its fleshy roots are well confined. Peter Pan, a dwarf, is more suitable for containers than the three-foot giant varieties. Divide, as you would daylilies, but only when clusters are pushing the sides of the containers—and do it after flowering. Plants produce seed in profusion, and you can grow new ones this way—if you're willing to wait three or four years for them to flower. Agapanthus isn't fussy about soil. You should water well when plants are in flower, but if you don't get around to them regularly, you'll find them quite drought resistant.

Materials needed:

Working surface—may be a pillow, padded board, foam, cardboard box—anything that will take pins easily. It should be a little wider than the design you plan to make. If you try a large design, use a dowel or other rod to suspend the work.

Pins—can be T-pins, push pins, or round-headed pins, to hold knotting on work surface.

Rubber bands—to hold cords in bundles while working.

Fabric dye (optional)

Twine—can be cord, twine, yarn, jute, line. Available in most hardware, grocery, variety, and department

How to figure cord leng

First decide on the len the finished design. The should be three and o to four times that length double that amount (si cords are folded in half tied to your rod or h line) and you will have t rect length of each cord.

Outer cords, which become the knot-bear holding cords, should b as long as the others. If cords are 12 feet long, t cords should be 24 feet.

The holding line (on all cords are fastened) be about six inches longe the finished width of the To keep cords from slidi make a small knot at ea of the line. Place a pin t each knot to hold to the ing surface. If you use a instead of a holding line it two to six inches longe the width of the design.

Certain types of kn quire more than the usu length. The diagonal half hitch is one. Vertic ble half hitches require t much cord as horizontal half hitches. When in add extra length so you sure to have enough t plete your design.

"sinnet" of half knots results in a twisting spiral design.

Square knot

This is made in two steps. The first is a half knot as previously described. Then bend the right outer cord under the filler cords. Bend the left outer cord under the right cord, over the filler cords and under the right cord.

Alternating square knots

These also require groups of four cords to complete. Make a row of square knots (four or more) but allow some extra cord space between it and the row above. To alternate, let the two far left cords remain unused while you knot the next four cords together in a square knot. The third row should look just like the first. It will include the two outer right and left cords that row two did not use.

Horizontal double half hitch

Begin this knot at the right edge. Use the far right cord as the knot-bearer—you will knot all the other cords over it. While knotting, keep this cord taut and held horizontally over the other cords. Knot the next cord (second from the far right) over it, looping in a clockwise direction. Make two loops with each cord and knot firmly. When you reach the left edge, reverse the process by using the far left cord as the knot-bearer, looping in a counterclockwise direction.

Vertical double half hitch

Place a pin inside the far left cord. Slide that cord under the next one and loop around it twice in a clockwise direction.

vertical double half hitch

Reverse the process when you reach the far right side by using the right outer cord to knot, looping counterclockwise.

Diagonal double half hitch

Divide the cords in two groups and use the far right and left cords as knot-bearers. The process is the same for both groups. Hold the knot-bearing cord taut at a 45-degree angle

Penthouse Pizza is a conversation maker on Park Avenue, or Main Street, with uncopyable Miracle Whip. Miracle Whip Salad Dressing is perfect just the way it is. Its lively fresh flavor comes from fresh-ground spices and a blending secret that is Kraft's alone. That's why America's favorite salad dressing makes American dishes so special. To make Penthouse Pizza: Combine 2c. buttery cracker crumbs or cornflake crumbs with ⅔ c. Parkay Margarine, melted; press into bottom and sides of greased 12-in. pizza pan. Bake at 375°, 10 min. Chill. Combine 12 chopped hard-cooked eggs, 2 T. finely chopped onion, ½ tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. pepper with enough Miracle Whip to moisten. Spread over crust. Garnish with cucumber slices cut in half, tomato wedges and pitted ripe olives. Cover and chill until serving. Cut into wedges. 8 to 10 servings.

The Most Exciting
Headache News In Years...

Doctors' Tests In Treating Nervous Tension Headaches Now Made Public

Results Prove An Extra-Strength Tablet That Needs
No Prescription Just As Effective As The Expensive, Leading Pain-Relief Prescription Of Doctors.

If you're one of the many who get tense, nervous headaches, you should find these recent medical reports of the upmost importance.

Physicians who specialize in scientific research conducted tests on 826 patients, 507 who complained of tension headaches. The results proved that an extra-strength tablet that needs no prescription (Anacin) is every bit as effective to completely relieve nervous headaches as the expensive, leading prescription of doctors. Additional tests made by other doctors verified beyond a doubt that Anacin gives the same complete headache relief as the pain-reliever so powerful it needs a doctor's prescription.

After taking Anacin, headache pain disappears in minutes so its nervous tension and pressure on nerves vanish, too. Despite its strength, Anacin is not narcotic. Not habit-forming. You can take Anacin without getting dizzy or an upset stomach. Millions of headache sufferers must consider Anacin superior because it's America's largest selling analgesic.

To obtain complete relief from pain of a tension headache—it makes good sense to take Anacin® Tablets. You get the same powerful, fast-acting headache relief as the leading prescription. Yet Anacin needs no prescription and is far more economical.

tion expenses incurred in getting yourself and your dependents to the doctor—but this is subject to the three percent test.

Charitable contributions. If you've made property contributions (such as used clothing to the Goodwill), follow IRS instructions on required supporting data. Don't hesitate to claim cash contributions for door-to-door solicitations and the like. IRS also will allow you to claim six cents a mile for travel done for charitable purposes.

Deductible taxes. In many states, car license fees are considered a personal property tax. If so, they're deductible.

Your worksheet should also show the amount of state tax withheld, plus any state estimated tax payments that you made. Be sure that you add any state tax owed on your 1969 return paid in 1970 when the return was filed. And if you received a state tax refund in 1970 because you overpaid your 1969 tax, this amount should be shown as miscellaneous income, line 39, back of form 1040.

If you've added the sales tax on a new car to your sales tax deduction, indicate this on your return with a footnote. Otherwise, IRS may wonder why you claimed a sales tax deduction above their guidelines.

Be sure to furnish complete information on all deductions claimed. If the return space is not adequate, feel free to attach your own schedules. Remember, if the data you furnish is not adequate, you may face the audit man.

Computing your tax. You have three choices here:

- You can let IRS compute your tax if your income (line 18) is $20,000 or less, and your income is limited to wages, interest, dividends, annuities and pensions. See page 2 of IRS instructions for complete details, since there are some exceptions.
- You can use the IRS tax tables if you don't itemize, and your income (line 18) is under $10,000. The tax tables will show your correct tax liability.
- You can compute your own tax by filling out Part IV on the back of form 1040. If you do, just follow the line-by-line instructions, and you should have no difficulty. However, be sure to use the correct tax rate schedule for your tax status.

Next, enter your tax (figured by whatever method you used) at line 19. Then check the tax surcharge tables in IRS instructions for your tax surcharge, which goes on line 20. Your total tax is then shown at line 21.

Claiming your credits. If you are entitled to the retirement income credit or other tax credits, fill out Part V. The total credits should then be entered at line 22 and subtracted from your total tax liability (line 21). This balance should be entered at line 23. If you're subject to self-employment tax, or the other taxes listed in Part VI on the back, fill out and put the total at line 24. Finally, at line 25 you should insert your total tax liability (before credit for payments already made).

At lines 26, 27 and 28, insert your tax withheld, your 1970 estimated tax payments, and any other payments including excess F.I.C.A. tax paid. The total of these payments goes on line 29. If the total tax paid (line 29) is less than your total tax (line 25), you owe additional tax. Enter this amount at line 30, and pay in full.

When your payments (line 29) exceed your tax liability (line 25), you have overpaid your tax, and the overpayment should be entered at line 31. You can have the overpayment refunded or credited on your 1971 estimated tax.

One suggestion: These line references may seem confusing. If so, clip out this article and save it until you prepare your return.

Final tax preparation steps. Ask someone to check your arithmetic, since math errors can be costly, but are avoided easily if you take this extra trouble. Now transfer your work copy figures to another return, and sign it. Note: Many professional tax return firms photocopy their work copies, and the photocopy is filed with IRS. Whenever you can, use this same technique because it saves time and reduces errors. Also, be sure to use the piggyback label attached to your IRS tax return package. Place this label only on the return you actually file. Your spouse should also sign if you are filing jointly. Check your IRS instruction booklet for the correct filing address.

Keep your worksheets, supporting data and your 1970 work copy, and keep it all in a 1970 income tax file. If you're ever audited, you will need these papers to show IRS how and why you reported the items questioned.

Finally, open a 1971 tax file now, and begin saving data you'll need next year. ■

In the old West, it took a little mush and a lot of courage to face another day.

Yes, hot mush helped sustain our pioneers when the going got rough. Hot mush like Wheat Hearts.

Trouble is, Wheat Hearts may be one of the least known mushes in the whole United States. And that's a shame. Because we think it's the best tasting mush anybody can cook up. And besides, it has all the good, old-fashioned virtues: good wheat flavor, good nutrition, good energy.

The New West isn't the Old West, but heaven knows, it's still pretty wild. Wheat Hearts still has a place. Especially when you want to make a fast getaway in the morning.

How to put on a big buffet

You probably wouldn't prepare a buffet dinner for less than a dozen people, so why not make it two dozen? Yes, you can give that really big dinner party in your house! Follow these simple planning steps for a smashing buffet party.

Start with the menu and give it careful attention so you can avoid many of the common pitfalls. Unless you can provide table space for all your guests, don't serve knife-and-fork food. Meatballs, bite-size pieces of meat, or fork-tender foods are easy to handle.

Guests will manage more easily with only one plate to balance. Don't plan a molded or frozen fruit salad to go on the same plate as hot food. Tossed greens, a marinated vegetable salad, relish assortment, or a fresh fruit tray are good choices. Plan to serve bread or rolls already buttered. Above all, don't plan anything that demands your last-minute attention—no hot soufflés or medium-rare steaks!

Be sure to take your kitchen space into account at menu-planning time. An oven main course that minds itself is great but chances are you don't have enough oven space to bake a vegetable dish or heat rolls at the same time. You'll also run short of shelf space if you plan too many things that must be refrigerated right up to buffet time. If the weather's right, you can use your balcony or the back porch for additional cold storage space.

If your guest list is too long to seat everyone at one or more tables, don't attempt to serve a beverage with dinner. Serve coffee later, or perhaps a fancy coffee drink in lieu of dessert. If you're set on a dessert course, consider ordering petit fours or individual-size pastries from the bakery to avoid the last-minute kitchen space jam-up.

Set up the buffet table well in advance—even the day before if space isn't required for family meals. And set out everything, including empty serving dishes, so you can plan the arrangement and make sure it will all fit on the table. Plan the flow of traffic by table setup: plates first, food items, bread or rolls, ending with forks and napkins. You may wish to roll or tuck forks into napkins so guests can pick up both at once. Go ahead and use a colorful variety of napkins—this will stretch your linen supply and make the table look festive as well.

Before borrowing extra china or flatware from friends, investigate your local rental service. In many areas, rental of these items for a short time is quite reasonable. You may wish to rent a large coffee maker, too. If you're short of serving dishes, use foil-covered kitchen trays and bowls. A ruffle of parsley or salad greens can effectively camouflage a utilitarian container.

Plan for eating space. Ideally, you would provide table space for everyone. The next best, and most practical, solution is a stack of big trays next to the buffet. You may wish to buy a supply of colorful plastic trays to have on hand. Consider lap-eating as a last resort. It's best to avoid clumsy plate-balancing except for cocktail parties or receptions.

Condition your house for the crowd. If you have small children, you'll want to take them to Grandma's for the evening or engage a baby-sitter to care for them during the party. Plan a place for your guests' coats—you can put extra hangers in the entryway closet or assign a bedroom for coats.

Remove small, fragile items from party rooms. You may even wish to move some of the furniture to another room or rearrange it to better accommodate a large group. The best way to protect your floors and furniture is to provide plenty of coasters and large ashtrays. Just before guests arrive, check bathrooms to make sure there is an ample supply of tissue, fresh soap, and guest towels.

If you've done your planning and homework well, and prepared as much of the food ahead as possible, you'll be able to relax and enjoy your buffet. ■

The beach parks of Hawaii

The convenience in Hawaii of having a clean sandy beach adjacent to your hotel can easily lure you into missing one of the most enjoyable pursuits in the islands: exploring the public beach parks. If you expect them all to be the same—white sand, gentle surf, shaded by coconut palms—you'll be surprised. The parks vary greatly. Some are famed for swimming, surfing or fishing. Others serve as botanical gardens. Some are historic. In total, you'll find that parks in Hawaii contain some of the most interesting parts of the islands.

Of all the islands, Oahu has the most parks, among them some of the world's most famed surfing spots. Within the Honolulu City limits, you'll find the snorkeling outstanding at Hamauma Bay Beach Park, a marine life preserve. Oahu's Makapuu Beach Park is excellent for body surfing, and the swimming is great at Waimanalo Beach Park.

On the Big Island of Hawaii you can, if you wish, really get away from crowds, especially in the beach parks on the southern end of the island. On the other hand, you'll find outstanding and popular swimming beaches in the South Kohala District on the island's dry side.

The islands of Maui and Kauai have some fascinating parks, including remote Kaumahina State Park on Maui, a lush green forest of tropical plants from all over the globe.

For lists and descriptions of beach parks on the major islands, write the following sources. The materials they send you can be very helpful in planning a trip to the islands.

A visit to Old Town

Now it's called Old Town. But in the early 1800s, it was San Diego, the place where California's history began.

Under Spanish, Mexican, then American rule, the town grew and prospered until 1867 when merchants moved closer to the thriving harbor four miles away. A major fire in 1872 accelerated the exodus.

Over the years San Diego grew to surround the original settlement, and many of the historic buildings of Old Town fell to ruin.

In 1968, the area bordered by Twiggs, Congress, Juan and Wallace Streets was declared a State Historic Park, and restoration began. You can still watch workmen painstakingly reclaiming the adobe washed off walls over the years and recasting it into new bricks. It's as if you were being transported back into the 1830s.

The best way to see Old Town is to walk through it. You will have no difficulty in finding your way, but if you want a guide, the Historical Shrine Foundation Society offers a free tour every Saturday at 1:30 p.m. It begins at Whaley house, 2482 San Diego Avenue, and takes one and a half hours.

Without a guide, a good starting point is the Old Town Plaza, bordered by San Diego Avenue, Wallace, Mason and Calhoun Streets. This used to be the recreational and social center of the town. Cock- and bullfights were held here every Sunday. The first American flag in San Diego flew in 1846.

Walk to Casa de Estudillo at San Diego Avenue and Mason Street. The red tile roof, thick white adobe walls and beautiful patio of the Casa make it a prime example of an early Mexican home. The house was made famous by Helen Hunt Jackson's book Ramona.

Next door is Casa de Bandini. Its original owners were famous for their spectacular parties. Now it is an art gallery, where you'll find works by the famous Mexican artists Diego Rivera and Jose Clemento Orozco.

On the other side of the plaza is the Congress Hall Site on Wallace Street. This two-st structure was built in 18 from wood brought around t Horn. It has been a salo pony express office, gambli house and post office.

The structure at 2745 S Diego Avenue was an 1832 w ding present from Jose Man Machado to his daughter. Wh the Americans arrived to c quer San Diego, she took do the Mexican flag and hid it her home. Now the old hou is vacant, awaiting restorati by the State.

A one-room wooden scho house on Mason Street, whi became San Diego's first pub school in 1865, has served a home and a tamale factory. T day it's used again for pub school night classes.

A shoe shop at 2515 S Diego Avenue is in the form home of the founder of the S Diego Union newspaper. Y can buy a copy of the first e tion for 25c at 2606 San Die Avenue, the restored Fi Home of the San Diego Unio

On the corner of San Die Avenue and Harney Stre Thomas Whaley built his fi brick house in San Diego Cou ty. A center of high society its day, it has since been us as a theater, a dairy, a fune parlor, the first Sunday Scho and as the San Diego Coun Courthouse. It's open fr 10:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. fr Wednesday through Sund and is filled with authen furnishings.

Behind the Whaley house the first prefabricated house Southern California. It w made in Maine, shipped arou the Horn, and finally put gether in 1851.

These are some of the int esting spots you'll find on y walk into history in this beau ful city. Your problem will n be one of finding interesti sights, but of finding sufficie time to enjoy them.

Oakland Museum

The Oakland Museum is musty old repository of reli but an exciting modern bui ing housing an exciting array exhibits about California, and new.

Perhaps the most fascinat is the Hall of Ecology, in which a "Walk Across California" takes you on an easy trek from the Pacific's tidal pools, across the Coast Range, through the Central Valley and on over the Sierras to the desert, giving you a vivid picture of animal and plant life in natural balance along the way. The knowledge you gain on this simulated trip will enhance any hike you take afterward.

You can also journey through the past. The Cowell Hall of California History starts with the primitive culture of the Maidu Indians and progresses through the days of the Spanish Missions, the Gold Rush and right up to the present. And at the Gallery of California Art, you'll see how man's genius has interpreted the changing times: in paintings, sculptures, all kinds of crafts, and models and photographs of architectural accomplishments.

These, along with a variety of ever-changing special exhibits, are presented in an architectural setting that is in itself a masterpiece. It's a modern version of the "Hanging Gardens of Babylon," a building that is also a park. The flowered roof-terraces climbing from floor to floor are an inviting alternative to an ordinary elevator ride.

The museum, located at 10th and Oak Streets, is open from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Tuesday through Thursday, Saturday and Sunday; from 10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. on Friday; and it is closed on Mondays. Admission is free except for some of the special exhibits and film programs.

If you are driving up from the south on the Nimitz Freeway, take the Oak Street exit and follow Oak Street north until you come to the museum. Coming from the north on Nimitz, take the Jackson Street exit, turn north on Jackson to Ninth Street and right onto Oak. You can park in the museum garage, the adjacent Auditorium lot or on the surrounding streets. AC Transit buses also serve the museum.

One-hour weekday tours of the museum and grounds are offered on a limited basis. Forty-five-minute tours of the Natural Sciences, History or Art Exhibitions leave from the Main Lobby at 11:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. Inquire at the main information desk or call 415-893-0340 for tour information and/or reservations.

Year of the Boar

It is 4669 on the Chinese calendar, and 65,000 Chinese in San Francisco are celebrating the event from January 30 through February 7.

The New Year starts on January 27 this year, with three days of traditional, home-style celebrations. Then the nine-day festival moves to the streets of Chinatown.

It will culminate in the spectacular Chinese New Year Parade on the evening of February 7. Bands, dragons, floats, firecrackers and people will explode into a pageant of color and sound to vanquish the Year of the Dog and welcome the Year of the Boar.

If you were born under the symbolic swine of the Chinese zodiacal order (1911, 1923, 1935, 1947, 1959, 1971) you are, according to tradition, chivalrous, gallant, tenacious, loyal, very honest, well-informed and a bit impulsive. You are also affectionate and kind to the people you love. You are most compatible with persons born during the Year of the Rabbit (1903, 1915, 1927, 1939, 1951, 1963) and the Year of the Sheep (1907, 1919, 1931, 1943, 1955, 1967).

Colorado's Crested Butte

There is a sense of remoteness about Crested Butte, a sunny, scenic Colorado ski resort with short lift lines and do-it-yourself entertainment. Yet it is not really remote.

Crested Butte is located about 200 miles southwest of Denver and 25 miles south of Aspen, but there are no roads over the high mountains between the two resorts. Frontier Airlines and Continental Trailways both serve Gunnison, Colorado, which is just 27

Is Nevada great for exploring?

Bet on it.

It's difficult to think of Nevada as a frontier when it has cities like Las Vegas and Reno. Beyond the bright lights and the glamor, Nevada has valleys and peaks yet unnamed . . . with vast stretches of awsome beauty.

Discover countless ghost towns . . . some very lively, and stand at the same bars where gunfighters drank a century ago. See crumbling mansions.

Strike out cross country in four wheel drive in the tracks of the pony express, Fremont, wagon trains. Nevada's mood changes at a glance . . . look in one direction at a magnificent desert sunrise . . . another and it's the high jagged sierra . . . a lush meadow is around a bend.

Exploring Nevada is a real adventure. Bet on it!

In 1882, the old mining town of Crested Butte had a population of 2000. Today, its permanent residents number about 300, but the town still retains its frontier flavor with false-front stores (some containing boutique fashions), old bars and restaurants. The City Hall and the first school, both built in 1883, are still in use. On winter evenings, the town zings to life with sleigh rides and polka parties.

The ski area overlooks this charming town from the lower slopes of 12,172-foot Crested Butte. A 7500-foot gondola plus two double chair lifts give intermediates and experts a choice of 27 miles of packed-powder trails. There is a J-bar and T-bar on the lower slopes for beginners. New lifts will be added by next season, increasing the area to 47 miles of trails.

Several modern lodges and chalets are right at the ski area, and condominiums are under construction. Other accommodations can be found 20 minutes away in Gunnison.

Portland's sanctuary grotto

Every year, nearly half a million pilgrims and tourists experience the charm and beauty of The Sanctuary of Our Sorrowful Mother in Portland, Oregon.

A few hours in this 58-acre religious sanctuary of towering firs, shaded paths and moss-covered stones will rest and enrich you, regardless of your religious beliefs.

Begun in 1924 by the Servite Fathers, the Sanctuary is located at 8840 N.E. Skidmore Street. Travel east on Interstate 80 from the city. Take the 82nd Street exit. Go north on 82nd Street to Sandy Boulevard, and signs will direct you.

There are sunken gardens of azaleas, camellias, roses and other flowers and shrubs along the entrance driveway. The spruce trees here are from the Pyrenees Mountains of Spain.

Garden paths lead along the Stations of the Cross to Our Lady's Grotto, which has been carved out of a fern-covered 150-foot cliff of solid granite. Organ music resounds daily from speakers high on the rocks.

The Chapel of Mary, east of the grotto, was built of rock quarried from the cliffside.

Also to the east of the grotto is an elevator which takes you to the 40-acre upper level of the Sanctuary. Here from the brow of the high cliff, you have a broad view of the Columbia River Valley and, on a clear day, the snow-capped peak of Mount St. Helens.

The sylvan path called the Sorrowful Mother Grove is lined with 34 lifelike wood carvings arranged in seven separate shrines. The work of an Italian professor, they are ranked among the world's outstanding examples of woodcraft.

Saint Anne's Chapel, a tiny wooden building located on this level, contains a collection of famous Madonna paintings and photographic reproductions.

The Sanctuary is ever changing. Skilled hands continue to add new plants, trees and statuary to its grounds. It is a garden devoted to meditation, love, beauty and peace—a rare thing in a big city today. ■

TRAVELING ON YOUR OWN

IN

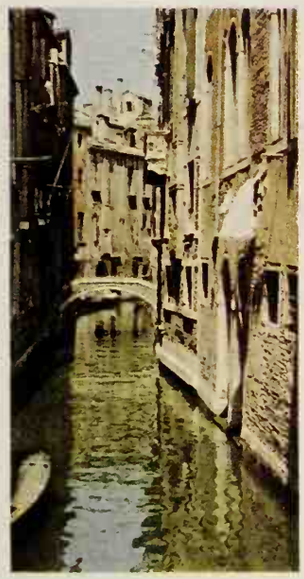
OUR EXPERT SHOWS YOU HOW



Europe's sights are strange and exciting, yet so familiar that you are always at your ease. Holland's tulips are like other beautiful tulips, but they're so abundant that the whole country becomes a painter's palette when they bloom. The Venice canals are more intriguing, and the Left Bank of Paris, with its bookstalls on the Seine, even more romantic than in the movies. On Carnaby Street, boutiques flash with the latest fashions: shopping is like shopping everywhere, but it's more fun. And when a driver goofs on the old town square of Toledo, Spain, our portly policeman, however picturesque, acts just as bossy as the traffic cop back home in Toledo, Ohio.

Photographs by Bill Helms and Pedro Guerrero

George Bush, our Editor at Large, has been to Europe so often he long ago stopped counting his trips. From his own experience, and from many conversations with other American travelers, he finds that far too many vacationers take group tours for the wrong reason—they think they'll be lost on their own.

This, says Bush, just isn't so. Traveling independently is hardly more difficult, and it can be a lot more fun.

You have no schedules to follow, no forced sight-seeing you'd rather skip. You can pursue your own interests rather than take the beaten track that someone has decided is best for the "average" tourist. You can seek out small, cozy hotels. You can shop at leisure. You can change your plans en route. You can even sleep late when you want to.

The following pages cover several recommended trips and a multitude of details that most first-timers (and even second- and third-timers) have little chance to discover for themselves—details that make European travel easy and pleasant, and ess costly as well.

LUGGAGE

Try not to take more than you can handle yourself. Porters are scarce almost everywhere you'll go.

With an economy-class air ticket, the weight limitation is 44 pounds per person, plus such incidentals as camera, toilet articles and reading matter. That's more than enough.

I never load up to the limit. This gives me a margin for things I might buy abroad. I allow room for these purchases by packing an empty over-the-shoulder bag.

Here is a luggage combination two adults can easily manage:

1. One light, medium-size suitcase, of solid build or with a firm frame all around so you can use wheel attachments that enable you to roll rather than carry it.

2. One very light bag small enough to stow under the plane seat. In case your bigger bag is misdirected, you always have this little case with basic essentials to keep you going for a couple of days. Include a light, comfortable sweater or cardigan for the plane trip.

3. One soft over-the-shoulder bag for things you want to buy en route.

4. Spare over-the-shoulder bag tucked away in luggage (carried on return trip).

For variable weather, take raincoats with removable linings rather than two different coats. Don't overload on shirts, etc. You can get laundry done within 24 hours almost everywhere.

When checking in your bags for a flight, always make sure that the clerk puts on correct destination tags.

TAKING OFF

Money: Your bank can supply you with about $10 worth of change for arrival at your first stop. You can also buy such currency packs at most of our international airports just before departure. But it isn't really necessary. There are change booths at all European airports, and you get a better rate.

You'll encounter no customs inspection on departure, but if you're carrying a foreign camera, watch or other expensive item of foreign manufacture, leave yourself enough time to register it with U. S. Customs, so you'll have no trouble when you come back. If the item is identified on an insurance floater, you can take the policy with you instead. Or if you have a receipt from the U. S. store where you bought it, that also does the trick.

Our favorite hard liquors are expensive abroad. If you must have scotch, gin, vodka, or bourbon, go to the airport's duty-free shop before departure and order your supply for delivery on the plane. Similarly, if your first stop is anywhere but Switzerland, where American cigarettes sell for about 30c a pack, order your brand for delivery on the aircraft. You'll pay $2.70 a carton, about a third of the price or even less than charged in most foreign countries.

ARRIVAL

The time to change your money is while you're waiting for your luggage. Look for a sign that says "Bank," "Cambio" or "Change." You'll get a better rate there for bills and traveler's checks than at hotels. But don't change more than you think you'll need. You'll lose some points changing it back.

If you find later that you haven't changed enough at the airport, go to a bank. If you bought more than you needed, get rid of coins locally, change the bills on arrival in the next country. Note: some countries, like Greece, Turkey, Tunis and the Iron Curtain nations do not allow export of their currencies. Here you must change leftover cash before you leave.

Make an advance reservation for your hotel at the first stop, even if after that you'd just as soon play it by ear. You don't want to hunt for a room after the long transatlantic flight. But call the hotel from the airport and make sure that your room has been vacated. Otherwise, you might find yourself parked in the hotel lobby for hours, waiting for your bed.

If there's been a mix-up with your reservation, or if you didn't make one, go to the airport hotel desk. The girl on duty will call around, and generally she'll find something even in high season.

FLYING IN EUROPE

On 17- to 28-day economy excursion tickets, you are allowed two stopovers each way, provided the total mileage fits within the generous limit set for your farthest destination.

If you're not a member of a tour group, and you change your mind along the way about where you want to go, you can have your tickets rewritten at any office of the issuing airline or at the airline you'd switch to on your new route. There is no extra charge, provided you stay within your original mileage allowance.

International air ticketry has lots of little wrinkles that allow you to make interesting side trips. For instance, you can fly on to Dubrovnik in Yugoslavia, or to Tunis in North Africa, for the price of a round-trip ticket to Rome. Or you can stretch your Paris ticket to Bordeaux, France. Even on relatively short-haul tickets, you have more possibilities for independent travel than most clerks will point out to you. On an Amsterdam ticket, for instance, you can stop over in Ireland, England, France and Spain or Portugal.

The best time to fly within Europe is around noon. Flights are less heavily booked than those in the morning and late afternoon. Also, you can depart leisurely and still enjoy much of the afternoon and the whole evening at your next stop. What's more, the airline supplies lunch.

If you want just a quick, one-day look at a city, you can save the airport tax often due on departure by making sure that you leave within 24 hours of arrival. Point this out to the check-in clerk so she'll stamp the tax exemption on your boarding pass; otherwise she might overlook it.

Customs are a mere formality in Western Europe, and no cause for concern.

TO AND FROM AIRPORTS

It generally pays to go to airports by bus. That's because specific flights are often served by specific buses, and the plane doesn't leave before its bus passengers arrive. This is excellent insurance in case of an unexpected traffic jam on the roads to the airport.

Most cities have only one airport, and you'll have no problems making connections. But there are some exceptions. Paris has two airports, at opposite ends of town. If you change planes here, make sure you don't come in at Orly Airport and leave at Le Bourget, or vice versa. It wastes time and you must transfer your own baggage. The same applies to Milan and Stockholm.

To get into a city from its airport, take the airport bus rather than a cab. (Or pick up your rental car at the airport.) Find out at the change booth where to get your bus tickets. In Vienna, incidentally, there is an excellent limo service that operates in connection with the hotel desk; it's a better deal, door to door, than the airport bus.

In Paris, during rush hours and on Sunday evenings, you'll find that cabs are hard to get at the downtown airlines terminal where the bus drops you. But rather than take that very expensive taxi ride all the way from the airport to your hotel, ask the bus driver to let you off at an intermediate bus stop where taxis are more easily available: Porte d'Orleans coming in from Orly Airport, and Place Pereire en route from Le Bourget. Then, if there's no cab, you have at least a nearby subway ("Metro") stop—and you'll find the routes so well marked you don't need a word of French. (If you must change trains at another stop, follow the sign that says "Correspondance.")

DRIVING A RENTED CAR

In the midsummer tourist rush you must reserve rented cars. At other times, however, this is generally not necessary. Not reserving can be an advantage. To wit: If you plan to return the car in another city—especially one in another country—there is often a drop-off charge of about $25. You can sometimes avoid this charge by requesting a car that's due to be returned to your destination.

When possible, rent a car that's been manufactured in the country where you plan to do most of your driving. You'll get better road service. Don't shy away from small cars. They are comfortable, have plenty of luggage room, cost less to rent than the big models and they burn less gas. That's important in Europe, where you always have to pay for the gas in rented cars, and where gas costs almost twice as much, and sometimes even more, than it does back home. (In Italy you can save on gas by purchasing gas coupons from auto club offices at the border.)

The most economical way to rent a car is to buy a package tour that combines your round-trip air fare, car rental and even accommodations in one special low price. Such arrangements are available with most international airlines, and they cost considerably less than if you set out to buy everything separately. Accommodations on these tour packages are usually "throw-aways"—they are for the most unlikely out-of-the-way places and are included as a formality to meet package tour regulations. Even if you don't use the accommodations, you'll still come out ahead.

Apart from mechanical aspects, the most important thing to check when you take possession of a rented car is that it has a "green card" in the glove compartment, along with the registration papers. Without this green card, you can't cross most borders. Don't take the clerk's word for it; make sure yourself that the card is there.

Also in the glove compartment you'll find a cardboard clock—the kind kids use to learn to tell time. You stick this cardboard clock in your windshield after setting the time when you park in a restricted zone. So long as you don't overstay the limit marked for that particular zone, you won't get a ticket.

European gas stations don't give maps; you have to buy them. Remember that, except in Britain, distances are expressed in kilometers, not miles. To arrive at mileage, multiply by .62. But, except on superhighways like the German Autobahn or the Italian Autostrada, figure that a given number of kilometers will take about as much driving time as the same number of miles back home.

For wild flowers, you can't beat the Alps. These brilliant meadows are just north of Lake Geneva in the Gruyeres area of Switzerland.

Road signs are easy to understand. Most are pictures. Ask your car rental agency for a chart that explains them. In addition, in France watch for signs on some country roads that say "Virage," meaning curve, and in Germany for any words preceded by "Achtung," meaning watch out.

EUROPE BY TRAIN

Don't judge foreign railroads by American trains. European trains are comfortable and usually clean, and some of them are very fast and luxuriurope comes in all flavors. To watch the world go by, there's o place more fascinating than a sidewalk cafe in Paris. To lay in the snow—even if only for a day or two while touring ie continent—there's no land more glamorous than Switzer- ind. No bridge has earned more admiration over the centuries ian triple-purpose Ponte Vecchio in Florence, which serves as oroughfare, marke place and cozy home all at the same me. And certainly no soldiers are as colorful as the tall uardsmen at the Tower of London; even this American oungster is intrigued.

ous, especially the TEEs (Trans-European Expresses) and certain "name" trains, like the "Settebello," a palace on wheels that sprints between Milan and Rome.

With stopoyers limited on 17- to 28-day air economy excursion tickets, rail travel is a good idea for any family that wants to see a lot of different places, but prefers not to drive.

Tickets are cheap, but if you plan on much touring your best buy is a Eurail-pass, which you must obtain before you leave this country. Every travel agent has them. The Eurailpass gives you unlimited first-class transportation in 13 Western European countries, plus free passage on some Rhine, Danube and lake steamers.

A 21-day Eurailpass costs $110. For one month, it's $140, and for two months, $200. By comparison, the Paris-Nice round trip alone costs $74.60 first-class. Your Eurail-pass does not include the British Isles; here you can get a 15-day Britrailpass for $60 in first-class, $35 in second. Again ask your travel agent, or contact British Rail-way, 270 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

Let's assume your destination is Rome. An off-season economy excursion ticket costs $429 from New York. With this ticket, you can stop, say, in London and Paris on your way to Rome, and in Frank-furt and Amsterdam on your way back. Of course, you have other stopover choices, but what about all the other places? Now assume that instead you buy economy ex-cursion tickets to Paris. En route, you can visit Ireland and England, plus Spain and Portugal. This costs $353 per ticket. Add a three-week Eurailpass for $110, and you can ride the rails all over Western Europe, even to Rome and beyond, for a total trans-portation cost of $463 per person, only $34 more than the Rome air fare.

With Europe's frequent rail schedules, train travel gives you almost as much flexibility as driving. You don't really have to plan anything in advance. If the weather isn't good in a place where it counts (like in the mountains), you simply go on, per-haps to come back later. And stopping over in small towns and villages is easy and far cheaper than in cities. Just get off the train and ask station attendants to recommend a nearby hotel. The words "good" and "hotel," with your fingers demonstrating walking, will do the trick if they can't speak English.

On night trips, your Eurailpass covers the ride but not the sleeper. First-class sleepers come high. But rather than share a lower-priced "couchette" bunk compart-ment with several other people of both sexes, you're better off—except in high season—to ride overnight in a regular com-partment, which has upholstered benches long enough to stretch out on. Get to the station well before departure, slip the con-ductor a couple of dollars and he'll reserve the compartment for you.

If your itinerary doesn't warrant buying Eurailpasses, consider going second class. It's not at all uncomfortable, and often less crowded than first. (Incidentally, if first-class is jammed, you can sit in second with a first-class ticket.)

Dining car meals are usually served "table d'hote"—that means you get a set menu, usually quite good and not very ex-pensive. But it's cheaper and more fun to

EUROPE - RECOMMENDED TRIPS

SCANDINAVIA

Here is an independent, 22-day tour which can be packaged for about $450 per person plus $485 peak-season air fare. Price, based on two persons traveling together, includes room, bath and breakfast; all transportation; sight-seeing excursions; ordinary tips and taxes.

Our itinerary not only covers Scandinavia's major cities, but also visits the northern fiords and the Arctic country, which most tourists never see. You travel to the north by regular coastwise steamer—not a cruise ship—that local people take between the little fishing villages along the way. Recommended time: the peak period of the Midnight Sun, from late May to mid-July.

This is so unusual a trip that you have to have it custom-tailored. Bennett Tours did it for me. Inquire at any office of SAS (Scandinavian Airlines), or write to SAS Tourism Department, 555 Fifth Avenue, N.Y., N.Y. 10017.

Fly to Bergen, Norway (a two-day stay), then sail to the very top of Europe by coastal steamer (4½ days, with optional shore excursions in fiord ports en route). After midnight-sun motorcoach tour of the North Cape on the Arctic Ocean, travel by bus and steamer back down the coast to Narvik, still above the Arctic Circle. On the 12th day, by first-class train to Kiruna, Sweden, and from there overnight on a first-class sleeper to Stockholm (3 days), then by air to Copenhagen (3 days, with sight-seeing in and out of the city, including Elsinore), by air to Oslo (3 days), then back to New York by air on the 22nd day.

CITY HOPPING

You don't need glorious weather to enjoy Europe's big big cities. Visit them in winter, and you will see them at their best—empty of tourists, and going about their own business and pleasures. What's more, the off-season offers real bargain prices. Almost every airline lists package tours that visit one or more cities. TWA has some excellent combination trips of two or three weeks that include all your air travel, hotels with private bath and breakfast, transfers between the airports and hotels, all basic tips and some guided sight-seeing if you like; other than that you'll be on your own.

The best two-week trip takes in London, Amsterdam and Paris for about $420 in off-season, including air fare from New York. You stay in good but not luxurious hotels; upgrade your accommodations, and the trip is $30 more. Among the three-weekers, there is a trip to Paris-Vienna-Rome-Copenhagen-London for about $590; and Lisbon-Madrid-Rome-Paris-London for about $550. Other combinations may also include Geneva and Athens.

ITALY BY CAR

This 1200-mile circle tour makes a great two-week trip, but do set aside three weeks if you can: there is so much to enjoy along the way that you'll wish to linger everywhere. And you'll certainly want to take advantage of the air-fare bargain that allows you a side trip to Yugoslavia for the Rome ticket price. That adds three days or so, for a trip total of at least 17 days.

Here is the routing: Rome, Naples, Pompeii and the Amalfi Drive (Sorrento and Positano), and back to Rome. Now cut across Italy to the Adriatic Coast, stopping at Villa Adriana and the gardens of Tivoli, just outside Rome, along the way. On the Adriatic, go from Pescara to Ravenna to Venice. (Obviously, parking is a problem here since there are no real streets. Just after crossing the causeway to the city, you have a huge garage on your right. This is your best bet, rather than the open lot beyond, since porters are available to help you carry your bags when you walk to your hotel in town.) From Venice, take the fast expressway, the Autostrada, to Padua, Lake Garda (visit Sirmione and drive up the west shore of the lake to Riva at the foot of the South Tyrolean Alps; visit the Riva waterfalls). Then on to Milan via Brescia, and from Milan by Autostrada, skirting Genoa, to Santa Margherita Ligure and Portofino on the Italian Riviera. From here on to La Spezia along the mountainous coast, then south to Pisa, inland to Florence and by Autostrada back to Rome.

Your side trip to Yugoslavia fits in best as you return from Naples, since Rome's airport lies southwest of the city. Either that, or at the end of the trip after you've returned your car. Take a plane across Italy and the Adriatic to Dubrovnik, famous walled city on the Yugoslav coast. Rent a car here for a day's excursion south to Kotor, and then inland up the mountains on what may well be the world's most breath-taking scenic highway to Centinje for a look at the real (not the tourist's) Yugoslavia. This whole excursion, including car rental out of Dubrovnik, should run you no more than about $30 for two persons for a couple of days.

Cost of the trip includes your Alitalia 17- to 28-day ticket to Rome and Dubrovnik, use of a small car for 620 miles, rooms with bath in a selection of 23 modern motels all over Italy, and a pass for most museums and monuments. All this comes to $525 for two weeks, $600 for three. Figure on $60 to $70 in excess mileage charges above your free allowance, plus gas, meals and expenses in Yugoslavia. If you live modestly but without skimping, $10 a day per person is about it.

Without Yugoslavia, you can take the trip on a "GIT" plan for $500.

RHINE AND ALPS

Lufthansa also has a deal where you use a rented car for unlimited mileage as part of your air-fare package. You pay about $337 for two weeks, $425 for three weeks. You can make this arrangement at just about every major German airport, but for the greatest variety and charm, I would recommend an 800- to 1100-mile circle that includes Frankfurt and Munich—you can start either place, but the Frankfurt fare is $5 cheaper. The package includes hotel one night in the city of arrival.

Starting at Frankfurt, drive to Mainz and make a one-day excursion by boat or car up the Rhine to Coblenz. This is the most famous stretch of the great river, and well worth it. Then turn around and drive south, roughly following the Rhine. I prefer the western banks, partly in France. Visit Strasbourg, then cross back into Germany, cut through the Black Forest to Schaffhausen, Switzerland, to see the Rhine Falls. Then on to Zurich, Lucerne, along the Lake of the Four Cantons and over the Klausen Pass to Linthal and Sargans. You follow Alpine valleys here, but it's easy driving—through the principality of Lichtenstein, on into Austria and across the Arlberg Pass to Innsbruck. Going on to Salzburg, swing southeast through the Glockner Range to Spittal, Radstadt, and the Salzkammergut, with its lovely Alpine lakes. Then on to Munich, and from here along Germany's "Romantic Highway" through medieval towns back to Frankfurt.

THE BRITISH ISLES

Two weeks are enough for a wonderful circle tour of England, Scotland and Wales, with a quick visit to Ireland by boat across the Irish Sea. Our recommended itinerary covers all the places you've heard about, from lively London to the windblown highlands. Make it three weeks and it'll be even better.

Either way, your best bet is BOAC "Combination Holiday," which packages your air fare with six nights in a London guesthouse and some London sight-seeing, plus one or two weeks' use of a car for touring the country. The two-week costs about $338, the three-week $387. Your meals, hotels outside of London and the trip to Dublin are extra. Living modestly but comfortably, figure on spending about $12 a day per person, including gasoline. If you don't care to drive, you get 1000 free railroad miles.

The basic trip covers London, Windsor, Oxford, the Cotswolds, Stratford, the mountains and coast of Wales (including Caernarvon Castle), the boat trip from Holyhead to Dublin and back and Chester. Then, by sticking to the west, you can skirt the industrial midlands on your way to Scotland. Similarly, avoid Glasgow by staying to the west, and head straight for the Firth of Clyde. Then drive along Loch Lomond, cross the Trossach Mountains to Perth and continue to Edinburgh. On your way south, stay toward the east, driving through Newcastle, York and Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex.

All prices shown here are approximate, and they are based on New York as your starting point. Give or take a few dollars, they will probably go into effect April 1 for off-season travel, pending approval by the different countries. If they are not approved, you can figure on spending $25 to $50 less. Either way, summer rates are higher—about $60 more. Where car rentals are included in fly-drive packages, you may usually substitute rail travel at the same price.

PARIS AND RIVIERA

This 1500-mile car itinerary covers Paris, the Château region, the Riviera, the highest Alps, and the wine country.

Again, it's a trip that packages a rented car (unlimited mileage) with your air fare from New York. Cost: about $360 per person, for 2 weeks; $410 for three weeks. Check with Air France or your travel agent.

Here is the route: Paris, Versailles, Chartres, Tours, the Château country along the Loire, Bourges, Vichy, Avignon, Marseille, Cannes, Nice; then up the Route Napoleon through Grasse (perfume and ceramics), to Digne, Grenoble and along the glacier-capped mountains to Chamonix.

Take Europe's highest cable car to the 13,000-foot top of the Aguille du Midi and across the Mont Blanc glaciers to Point Heilbronner on the Italian side. Return by cable car and continue your drive from Chamonix through the Mont Blanc tunnel into Italy's Aosta Valley, then cross the St. Bernard Pass to Switzerland and round the Lake of Geneva past Montreux, Vevey and Lausanne to Geneva. Don't reserve hotel space ahead of time. That's because the weather may be good on one side of the mountains and bad on the other, and you might as well stay where the sunshine is.

From Geneva, drive to Macon. From here, north to Dijon, take the back roads through the vineyards, tasting wine along the way. Continue to Reims to visit the famous champagne cellars. Return to Paris.

SOUTHERN SPAIN

Most of Spain is a harsh tableland, severe and melancholy, with none of the warmth Mediterranean countries are supposed to have. To find that lushness and still get a sense of that peculiar Spanish feeling of fire burning in ice, you must come down from the arid tablelands to the golden shores that face Africa. Distances are huge by European standards, and our 1300-mile itinerary covers only a small part of the country. But it's as much as you can have in two or three weeks.

Fly Iberia to Madrid and pick up your rented car on a $375-$425 package tour, which also includes the first night in a good Madrid hotel room with bath. Stay away from hotels where tourists go, and you can eat well and sleep soundly for less than $5 a day per person.

Our itinerary takes you from Madrid south to Toledo and Ciudad Real in the ochre-colored windblown highlands. Then down to Cordova and Seville in the coastal plain, where the Latin life begins to show; thence to Malaga, Granada, Cartagena, and Alicante, crossing coastal ranges and dipping to the sea at villages and towns which in the last few years have become international resorts, with skyscrapers and sun worshipers from northern countries. Continue north to Valencia and then east, back into the interior, with a last sight-seeing call at Cuenca en route to Madrid.

(Free train travel may be substituted for the car rental but doesn't lend itself well to this itinerary.)

THE MEDITERRANEAN

The highlight of this trip is a 7-day cruise through the Greek islands to the coast of Turkey, which is richer in the relics of antiquity than any other place in the world.

The cruise starts from Athens. The rest of the trip—getting to and from Athens—is a matter of choice. On a three-week round-trip ticket, you may make two stopovers each way. My suggestion is that on the way out you stick to the Mediterranean area, visiting Barcelona and Rome. On the way back, stop off in Paris and London or Madrid and Lisbon or Vienna and Amsterdam—you name it. Figure two or three days at each stop, including Athens, or allow more time on the Mediterranean and fly back directly from Athens. Excursion air fare, New York to Athens is $495. The cruise runs about $220 to $470, depending on accommodations. Figure on a total cost, including hotels, meals, transportation and extras, of $1200 per person, opting for medium-priced accommodations. It's not a cheap trip—but it's fantastic.

Go by air (Pan Am or Iberia) to Barcelona. Visit the bikini beaches of the Costa Brava, to the monastery of Montserrat, the Basque country of the Pyrenees. Then fly to Rome. Excursions: Tivoli and Villa d'Este; the historic towns of Serveteri, Tarquinia and Viterbo; then by air to Athens to see the city and board the "Jason," luxurious motor vessel of the Epirotiki Line, for your cruise to Crete, Santorini, Rhodes, Ephesus and Istanbul.

THE LOW COUNTRIES

Here's an itinerary that shows you what modern Europe—the Common Market Europe—is all about. It covers Holland, much of whose land is newly claimed from the sea; Belgium, where modern economic politics take place behind post-medieval walls; Germany's booming industrial Rhineland around Cologne; Paris, which clings to beauty in an age of pragmatism; and that strategic pivot of power, the hills and forests of Luxembourg, Belgium and Northern France, that have been fought over for more than 100 years and still retain their loveliness.

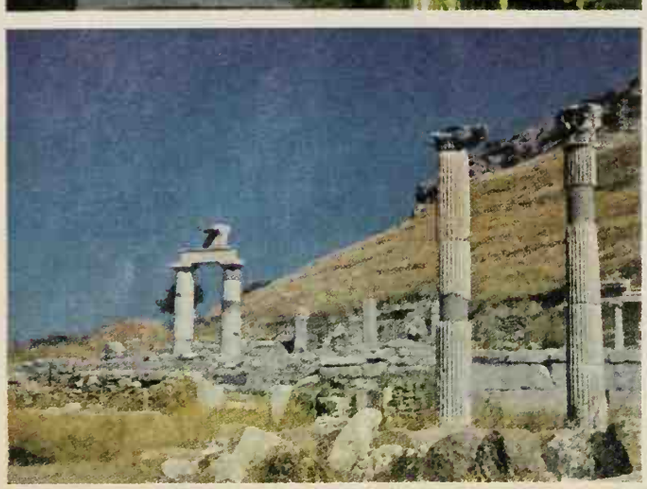
Again, this trip is based on having the car rental tied in with your air fare. You fly KLM to Amsterdam; and the car, with unlimited mileage, is part of the $408 package price for a three-week tour ($65 more in summer). The price also includes arrival night in an Amsterdam hotel and "throwaway" guesthouse coupons for the other nights.

The best time to go is about the third week in April, when the tulips are in bloom. Be sure to see them at the Keukenhof, a vast garden outside of Amsterdam. Other times, go to the flower auctions at nearby Aalsmeer instead.

To really enjoy Amsterdam, get a copy of "Amazing Amsterdam" from KLM; and for the rest of the country, a copy of "Happy Holland." Both are excellent paperbacks.

Our itinerary takes you from Amsterdam to Utrecht and Apeldoorn. Then, en route to Arnhem, don't miss the Dutch National Park, the Hogeveluwe. Here, in the midst of a natural preserve, is Europe's most exciting museum, the Kröller-Müller, with its nearly 300 Van Goghs, plus Picasso, Mondrian, Seurat, Braque, etc. From there, on to Maastricht. (If you take this trip in the winter, which is not at all a bad time for it, be sure to take in the rousing Maastricht carnival in early February, during which all these sober burghers become totally, uninhibitedly wild.) From Maastricht you cross the German border en route to Cologne down the Rhine past Bonn to Coblenz. If it's spring or summer, make a one-day side trip along the most picturesque stretch of the Rhine to Mainz, either by river steamer or by car on the north bank. Spend the night in the wine town of Assmannshausen; you'll like it better than the more famous Rüdesheim, which has become a tourist trap.

Back to the circle tour at Coblenz, turn south through the vineyard valley of the Moselle to Trier and Luxembourg, then through the forests of the Ardennes to Sedan and down to Reims and Epernay, for visits to the famous champagne cellars of the area. On to Paris, and from there to Rouen, Amiens, Brussels, Antwerp, Rotterdam and The Hague. Visit the miniature city of Madurodam here. Now, if you are short on time, return directly to the airport just north of The Hague. Otherwise make the big circle around the Ijsselmeer, one of the famous dike projects, which takes a couple of leisurely days by car.



Photographs by George Bush and Bill Helms

Spring is a wonderful time to travel. Europe is less crowded then, and the weather is just great. In the Swiss Alps, the sun is hot and tanning as it glitters on the glaciers (left). Sleepy villages like Hallstatt in Austria's famed Salzkammergut lake district (top left), wake up as the land turns green and the pine forests fragrant in the new warmth. Farther south, along the Mediterranean, the air is balmy, still spring-fresh. That's the time to travel through the wild highlands of Spain (above), for visiting the many beauty spots of Italy, like fountain-filled Tivoli near Rome (top right), and for sight-seeing the relics of the ages, like the once-great Greek city of Ephesus on the coast of Turkey.

buy sandwiches, wine, fresh fruit and chocolate from platform vendors during stops.

Warning: Never drink tap water on trains. Carry or buy bottled mineral water, even for brushing your teeth.

HOTELS, GUESTHOUSES

Hotels are officially ranked by categories: luxury, first-class, second-class, etc., depending on price. This system is almost universal in Europe.

Luxury hotels are of the traditional "grand hotel" type, with attendants stumbling all over each other. Naturally you pay extra for all that service and the spacious, elegant rooms you get.

There's little if any difference between first- and second-class hotels. In fact, I prefer second class in many cases. First-class hotels are generally larger, with less time to spend on individual guests; yet they often pretend to be luxury hotels, without quite making it—and you pay a premium for their trying.

But no matter what class hotel you get into, you can usually expect a clean room, a comfortable bed and a good continental breakfast: coffee, or tea, rolls, butter and jam. If it's available and you're willing to pay an extra dollar or two, you can generally also obtain a private bathroom. Rooms without bath almost always have lavatory sinks. Biffy and tub are usually nearby on the same floor.

In resort areas, most hotels package room and meals in one price. This is cheaper than eating out, but restricts your choice. It's best to opt for "demipension," which gives you breakfast plus one other meal, and it's up to you from day to day whether you stick around for lunch or dinner.

Guesthouses serving breakfast only are identified as "garni" in Switzerland, "meuble" in France, "Frühstückspension" in Germany and Austria. Often they are excellent buys.

Key person at your hotel is the head porter, or "concierge." He is not a porter in the usual sense, i.e. he doesn't carry your bags, but he's the guy who fixes everything, from theater tickets to excursions. Get sick and he'll call a doctor. Leave your mail with him, and he'll put stamps on it. If you want a package sent home, he'll arrange to have it wrapped and posted. At the end of your stay you'll get a bill from him for his disbursements on your behalf. You add a tip, of course.

When I'm staying at a hotel for more than a day or two, or when I know that I'll require a variety of porter services, I tip the man immediately on arrival. A couple of dollars is enough to get him started in good humor. Again, depending on the extent of his services, I tip him again when I leave. That, and a gratuity equivalent to 10c to 20c per bag to the man who brings the luggage to your room, are the only basic tips required at the average hotel. You do not tip the clerk who shows you to your room.

At resort hotels, you are also expected to leave some money for the chambermaid and your table waiters. The equivalent of two dollars each is enough for several days' stay.

Note: Always carry soap and toilet tissue. Many hotels in Europe still do not supply soap, and the toilet paper, even in excellent hotels, often is of poor quality.

SHOPPING

Your duty-free exemption for import to the U. S. of items you bought or were given abroad is $100 per person; in a family you can combine the exemptions. Antiques over 100 years old, religious and educational items, works of art and books are not dutiable. In addition, you can bring back one quart of alcoholic beverage per adult (over 21) duty-free.

Say you're thinking of buying a stereo set that costs $110 and weighs 20 pounds. If, as a result of prior purchases, you are already over your duty-free limit, the import duty on the set will be about 10 percent. Also, since it will probably put you 20 pounds over your luggage limit, you'll have an excess baggage charge of around $40. Net additional cost: $51. Is it worth buying under these circumstances? The answer is yes (presuming it's worth buying at all).

Here's how: You remove from your luggage 20 pounds of personal belongings that originated in the U. S. and which you won't need immediately on your return. Have them wrapped at your hotel and shipped insured, at a cost from Central Europe of about $5. You buy the stereo, take it with you as part of your luggage, declare its true value of $110. Your additional cost, at the most, will be about $15. And if it's your only import, you probably won't have to pay any duty at all. Be sure you have a receipt for all items involved.

Every country has its own special bargains. Guidebooks can tell you all about that. But in addition you may buy certain products from all over the world at very low prices in "duty-free shops" at most international airports. These airport bargains include spirits, cigarettes and perfumes, and sometimes even watches, linens, woolens, cameras, projectors, radios, etc. Caution: not all airport shops are duty-free. Make sure before you buy.

Liquor and cigarettes are the most common duty-free items. American cigarettes about $2 to $2.50, and you can bring back any amount you like. Now assume you're at a Paris airport, and you see champagne at the amazingly low price of $4.25. Should you forgo your liquor allowance and buy champagne instead? The answer is no. Buy both. Your liquor bottle (one per adult) will be admitted duty-free, and the champagne will only cost you a duty of about 90 cents a bottle.

Shannon, Ireland, and Amsterdam in the Netherlands offer by far the best duty-free deals in photo and audio equipment, and their Swiss watches are cheaper than in Switzerland where you must buy them in regular stores.

If your last European stop is Lisbon, Athens or Rome, fill your needs at earlier airports, for these three do not have duty-free shops. By the same token, London airport is not very good for shopping: its duty-free shops are jammed and they are often out of items.

FOOD AND DRINK

Water: Okay to drink in all big Western European cities, and just about anywhere in the British Isles, Scandinavia, the Low Countries, Germany, Switzerland and Austria. I never drink tap water or use ice cubes in the rural areas and small towns of Italy, Spain, France, Greece, Yugoslavia; or anywhere in North Africa, the Middle East, Turkey and on the Mediterranean islands. Buy mineral water for drinking and for brushing your teeth.

Food: In the Mediterranean countries I am careful about custards, cream fillings, jellied meats and jellied fish, mayonnaise dishes and shellfish. Anywhere else I eat everything that looks good.

Milk: Trust cold milk only in Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Scandinavia, the Low Countries and British Isles. With your breakfast you'll usually get boiled milk anyway, so that's okay.

Coffee: Where hotels offer you a choice between American and local-style coffee, take the local. Europeans just don't know how to prepare our kind.

Bill Helms

Lunches in the open air are a European summer specialty. Buffet served on garden terrace of Hotel Juana at Juan-les-Pins (near Cannes) is among the best on the French Riviera. At fine resort hotels like this, it often pays to opt for arrangement that includes room and meals.

Wine and beer: Except on cially festive occasions, I k to open wines. They are aper and often better than -priced bottled brands. You'll like the beer almost rywhere. Try local brands t, and you probably won't tempted to spend extra for higher-priced imports. Spirits: Try the local aperi- and brandies. They are far aper than American-style nks, often less alcoholic, and 'll like their taste.

MAIL FROM HOME

If you have no advance reservations but know t you will touch certain cit- have your mail addressed you at the post offices. The rnational phrase for this pose is "Poste Restante" t General Delivery). Such l is always held at the main t office; you'll need your sport to get it.

Many Americans get their l at American Express of- s in the leading cities. That's , too, especially if you hap- to land in a nearby hotel, waiting lines are often ger than at the post office.

HAT ABOUT THE KIDS?

Take your youngsters along if otherwise a Europe- rip is impossible for you. In , once they get into their s you should take them you. Baby-sitters are easi- vailable almost everywhere, at much lower rates than ome. In most cases, the ho- porter will be able to make necessary arrangements. etter yet, ask the chamber- d to look in until she goes of luty, and then to stay in th room until you get back. T s has always worked just fi for us, and I don't remem- be it ever costing more than at it $2 for a whole evening. T additional advantage of ch nbermaid-sitters is that yo children can get acquaint- ed ith them before the sitting st s. ■ napkin fuzzy liquid whisper misty chicken velvet zigzag punch camel

Can your child read these words?

Your child will learn how to read these and more than 300 other words after working with the very first record of The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

Try out this Phonics Course FREE FOR TWO WEEKS with your child in your own home—without risking a penny. Mail the coupon below.

If your child is a poor reader, if he has not been able to keep up with his class in school—here is a way that you can help him. Many parents have seen their poor readers gain up to a full year's grade in reading skill in just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

As soon as your child starts playing the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well. It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonies method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts sounding out the letters he hears himself saying the word. He's reading.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters of the alphabet and their blends. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he can read 300 words. After finishing all four records he has been taught 123 basic phonics sounds.

Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 85% of the words in the English Language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades and even in high school. Its records tell your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

Tested and Proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in four Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children a not able to grasp the "look-and-say method taught in most schools t day. Yet, many educators insist th at least 40% of our children must ha formal training in phonies—that th will never master reading without i

with the Fabulous New SAUNA BELT™

TRIM-JEANS

The Amazing Space-Age Slenderizer that is so sensationally effective it is...

GUARANTEED TO REDUCE YOUR WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS, AND THIGHS A TOTAL OF FROM 6 TO 9 INCHES IN JUST 3 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED

Here is how it works:

Mrs. Linda Saatsaz has slipped into her trim-jeans and is inflating them with the handy little pump provided. She is now ready to perform her 'Magic Torso' movements, an exercise program designed specially for trim-jeans.

After a few pleasant moments — about 10 minutes or so — doing her 'Magic Torso' movements, Linda is now relaxing for an additional 20 minutes while keeping her trim-jeans on. That is all there is to it.

Linda now slips her trim-jeans off and checks her 'after' measurements. Remarkable! Linda lost 2 inches from waist, 1 inch from tummy, 1 inch from hips, 1½ inches from each thigh for a total measurement loss of 7 inches in just 1 brief session.

"I actually lost 7 excess inches during my very first session with this incredible slenderizer and the inches came off just where I needed to lose them. I went through the program again on each of the following 2 days and the inches continued to roll off — and all without the need for dieting. Over the 3 day period, I lost a total of 4 inches from my waist — going from 29 inches down to 25 inches, 2 inches from my tummy, 2½ inches from my hips — going from 39½ inches down to 37 inches, 3 inches from each thigh — going from 24 inches down to 21 inches, for a total overall loss of 14½ inches in just 3 days with these wonder working trim-jeans."

Linda Saatsaz

THIS SUPER PRODUCT IS PRODUCING SUPER NEW SLENDERIZING FOR A HOST OF WOMEN. HERE ARE JUST A FEW:

Miss Penny Dix: "I used the trim-jeans just 3 times and took a total of 11½ inches off my hips, thighs and middle — 7 inches the very first day. No dieting and my figure has never looked better."

Mrs. Mary Lou Wilhelm: "Following the trim-jeans program, I reduced my waist 2½ inches, my abdomen by 2 inches, my hips by 2 inches and my thighs by 2½ inches each — I ate normally — it took just 3 days — and the inches have stayed off."

Miss Carol Arrighi: "I used your marvelous trim-jeans a few minutes a day for 3 days in a row and reduced my waist from 26 to 24, my tummy from 31 to 29, my hips from 36 to 34 and my thighs from 23 to 21. My new measurements are just perfect for my height."

TRIM-JEANS — THE SPACE AGE SLENDERIZER WITH RESULTS THAT ARE OUT OF THIS WORLD. The trim-jeans are a marvel of ease, comfort and efficiency. Once you have slipped them on, you are ready for the most astounding experience in rapid slenderizing you have ever known. Only trim-jeans has the unique features of design, including the exclusive super sauna-lock that permits the constant snug fit and solid support in all 4 areas — waist, tummy, hips and thighs — without which truly sensational results are not possible. We recommend that the trim-jeans be used a few minutes each day for 3 days in a row when you first receive them and then several times a week until you have achieved your maximum potential inch loss. After that, for maintenance you can use the trim-jeans about twice a month or as often as you feel the need.

THE MOST REVOLUTIONARY GUARANTEE IN SLENDERIZING HISTORY. So many users of the trim-jeans obtain 'instant reducing' — are inches slimmer, inches trimmer in from just 1 to 3 sessions with this super slenderizer — are actually losing as much as a total of 7 or more inches from their waists, tummies, hips and thighs in just 1 session and up to 14 or more inches from 3 sessions. This principle produces really fantastic results. There may be variations of speed and/or degree of results due to individual differences in metabolism and body response. Not everyone may lose 7 inches in just 1 session and 14½ inches in 3 days but remember this: No matter what your metabolism, no matter what your body type, if you do not lose a total of from 6 to 9 inches from your waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 3 days, you may return the trim-jeans and your entire purchase price will be immediately refunded.

THE AMAZING TRIM-JEANS TAKE OFF INCHES WHERE THEY NEED TO COME OFF. Your trim-jeans are designed to give you just the reducing effect you need where you need it... and the price of the trim-jeans is just $13.95 and each pair carries a FULL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. Here is the slenderizer supreme — trim-jeans — which we sincerely believe to be the easiest fastest, most convenient, most sensationally effective waist, tummy, hip and thigh reducer ever discovered — with the most revolutionary guarantee in slenderizing history. Introduce a kid to an Arabian Horse, a fabled, purebred Arabian, and it'll be love at first sight. Gentle, intelligent, loyal, the Arabian's heritage goes back 2,000 years and they have an inbred way of making every kid a king. Besides that, can you think of a better way to raise a kid than with a horse . . . and eliminate many juvenile problems, too?

WHY RIP UP YOUR LAWN? PLUG IN ZOYSIA GRASS

By Mike Senkiw

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize, and lime. They rake it, scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and then its time to weed, water and mow, mow, mow . . . until summer turns the lawn into hay, or crabgass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Zoysia. Your Zoysia lawn drives out crabgrass and weeds all summer. It stays green and beautiful in blistering heat. It cuts mowing ⅔ . . . it's perfect for summer homes and "problem areas."

There's no need to rip up your old grass. Just plug in my Zoysia, let it spread into turf like a beautiful, thick, pile carpet. Won't heat or winter kill, merely goes off it's green color after heavy frosts, regains fresh new beauty every spring—never needs replacement! Every plug fully guaranteed to grow in any soil in your area.

To end lawn problems, send for free interesting facts and low prices about Amazoy incl. pre-season bonus offer. No obligation. Mail coupon to:

FAMOUS "Belt-Works-Like-A-Sauna"

SALE!

SAME AMAZING GUARANTEE

LOSE 1-3 INCHES FROM YOUR WAISTLINE IN THREE DAYS OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED!!

~~$9.95~~

NOW $3.95

SAVE $6.00—NATIONALLY ADVERTISED AT $9.95

Imagine! The belt with the very same principle that has already been tried, proven and enthusiastically endorsed by thousands, is now available for a limited time only at $3.95.

"IS YOUR GUARANTEE UNCONDITIONAL?"

A mere 15 or 20 minutes a day... morning or evening... for three short days in a row, WILL TAKE FROM 1 TO 3 INCHES OFF YOUR WAIST OR YOUR MONEY WILL BE PROMPTLY REFUNDED. We can make this unconditional guarantee because we know it works!

NO 'MAGIC'—BASED ON SOUND PRINCIPLE

Just fit and buckle the clear, vinyl, hollow belt around your waist, right against your skin. Inflate it with the attached tube until it is snugly tight. A slight twist of the tube holds the belt inflated. Instantly, the heat of your body is captured and held inside the belt, and the soothing warmth stays as long as the belt is on. Then perform the few simple isometric-like body movements illustrated on the chart we include. You'll feel your muscles tensing and working against the warm pressure of the belt. Body-building experts have been using this successful technique for years. Then relax. That's right... for the next 15 minutes or so, you relax... finish that book, or phone a friend... the rest is up to the warm belt. Remove the belt and already your waist feels tighter and firmer. Repeat this for the next two days. If you have not shed from 1 to 3 inches after 3 days, return the belt and we'll refund you every penny you paid for it.

"HOW LONG AFTER DO I USE THE BELT?"

This depends on how many inches you want to lose. It is recommended that you use the belt for a few minutes a day, two or three times a week, until your desired inch loss is complete. But hurry, order now. This special sale price of $3.95 is for a limited time only. (Limit: TWO per family, please.) One size fits all.

The man next door®

Grumpy Ned Carter doubts he will receive any Valentines in the mail this year, but he says if he does they'll probably arrive with postage due.

Burt, Jr., shares his generation's commendable interest in the environment, but he is unable to persuade his mother that hanging up his clothes would disturb the ecology of his room.

I was downstairs at my workbench the other evening when a mouse crawled out from under a pile of wood. He looked at me, then casually went about exploring, apparently convinced I wouldn't report his presence to the more excitable members of the family.

Chris attended a lecture by an interior decorator who said the furnishings of every home should have a theme. She has decided the theme that ties our decor together is survival.

Our two younger children can't understand why Rosemary said the last snow wasn't any good for building a snowman when they asked her for help—but it was just right when her current boyfriend suggested the same project.

How can anyone object to the beard of the new man in our office when his desk sits right under the splendidly whiskered portrait of Our Founder?

Christine's goal is to make sure the children have written all their Christmas thank-you notes before the first crocus peeps forth.

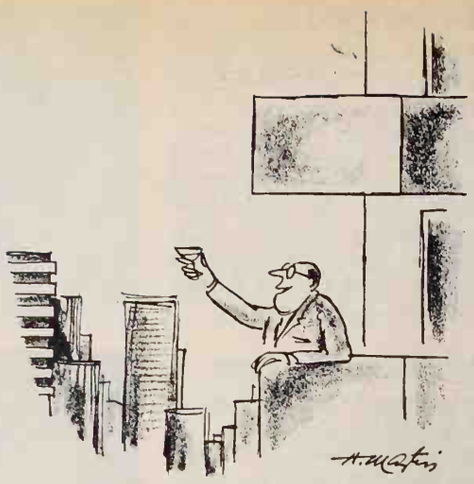
Bill Norman, discharged from the Army 25 years ago, says it took him until now to face creamed chipped beef on toast.

When teen-age Rosemary heard I was having lunch with a distinguished guest, she begged me to get his autograph. But her enthusiasm dropped to zero when she found out it was the chief justice of our state supreme court, and not a real VIP, like a disc jockey.

Judy and I made our annual midwinter visit to the zoo. There's not much to see, but she feels the animals must be terribly lonesome this time of year.

Dad Hillis says experience has taught him that a good listener is not only popular, but after a while he also knows a few things.

"Stay inside more and get some fresh air."



"Stand fast, old world! Don't buckle, proven methods! Hang in, old institutions!"

"Money isn't everything," remarks Paul Vernon, the vice-president of our bank, as he cheerfully hands out transistor radios, umbrellas, and electric toasters to new depositers.

It takes a lot of clocks to run our house. I have no idea exactly how many, but most of them are electric and they go about performing their jobs accurately and silently. About the only time we pay much attention to them is when the utility company stages one of its infrequent power failures.

But I have to confess my favorite timepiece in our house is one which must be wound once a week and reset daily if you want much accuracy.

It sits proudly on the mantel, a bit worn looking, with the gold paint chipped away in spots. The clock was in my grandparents' parlor when I was a boy, and I remember how impressed I was when Grandfather wound it with the big brass key.

Now it's my responsibility to wind the clock. I don't know of anything that can equal this simple act of stewardship for giving me the feeling, if only an illusion, of being the absolute head of the Hillis household.

Maybe I read too much into it, but I am struck by the continuity this clock represents—the hours it has ticked away for at least three generations of my family.

The children pay little attention to my performance and never discuss it. But I think Christine understands something of what I am thinking. At least when I close the round glass door and glance at her, she gives me a smile of amused perception.

This is the disposer that thinks with its head.

This is the KitchenAid Superba food waste disposer. It's a batch feed model. So you can't start it until the top is in place. Then, it starts itself. Thanks to our exclusive Magnetouch® automatic magnetic start, located in its head.

It's almost impossible to accidentally start this disposer. It's also difficult to accidentally stop it with food scraps. Like chicken bones, corn husks, or artichokes. Because if a jam ever occurs, this disposer unjams itself automatically.

Because it works with its mouth shut, it's safer. You can't accidentally drop something into the disposer while it's running.

Isn't it nice to meet a machine with the guts to tackle a tough job and the brains to do it right? See your KitchenAid dealer. He's in the Yellow Pages. Or write KitchenAid Disposers. Dept. 1GC-3, The Hobart Manufacturing Company, Troy, Ohio 45373.

Versatile electric tractor is the heart of a complete yard maintenance system.

The tractor is propelled by a 36-volt DC motor. Batteries operate the unit for about six hours and can be fully recharged in less than five on a 110-volt, 15 amp outlet.

Mower, snowblower and tiller are powered by their own motors which draw power from the tractor battery pack. Power outlet lets you use special chain saw, trimmer, drill and other tools from tractor power supply. Optional power converter accommodates conventional 110-volt power tools.

Motor maintains speed setting when going downhill. As it brakes the tractor, it acts as a generator, pumping power back into the batteries.

Mower blades stop when you flip a switch or leave the seat. You can't start the mower again until you're reseated and manually reset controls.

Electrak Electric Tractor from about $1400 at authorized dealers. General Electric Co., OPEO, 702 Corporation Park, Scotia, N. Y. 12302.

VEGA. IT DOESN'T STAND ALONE.

One big difference between Chevy's new little car and other new little cars is that Chevy's new little car is actually two new little cars.

Also a new little wagon.

Also a new little truck.

What that means is, if you don't happen to be the 2-door sedan type, you can still find happiness in a Vega.

For example, you could go with our hatchback coupe, the sporty little blue job in the picture below. Sporty, but also very handy. The whole back end opens up and the back seat folds down so you can use about half the car for cargo if the occasion ever arises. And it probably will.

Then there's the Vega Kammback wagon. It has a personality all its own. It also has: bucket seats, a fully carpeted interior, our peppy overhead cam engine, front disc brakes, 3-on-the-floor, power ventilation, all standard.

The Vega panel truck has one seat and 68.7 cubic feet of loadspace inside of it. Which is a lot of loadspace for such a little truck.

Once you've looked around at other little cars, we think you'll find it's no problem choosing between a Vega and something else.

What's tough is choosing between a Vega and a Vega.

And a Vega.

And a Vega.

CARS DUANE L. GREGG Automotive Editor

DON'T IGNORE THESE INDICATORS OF AUTO TROUBLE

Fortunately, most critical auto parts are not subject to complete failure without warning. Failure is usually preceded by a new sound or action or a loss of fluid. If you detect a change in your car's behavior, don't ignore it —find out what's wrong and have the problem corrected.

A recent California Highway Patrol study points up the importance of attention to the way your car performs. In a study of 409 fatal single vehicle accidents, almost one-third had one or more mechanical defects. Two-thirds of the defects either caused the accident or contributed to it. Also the nature of the defects indicates that the failure of the part was preceded by an ominous sound or other warning long before the accident occurred.

Brakes

The study disclosed that braking systems accounted for 35 percent of the defects found. Be alert for these indicators of brake problems on your car:

Fluid on garage floor by wheels or on inner sidewall of tire indicates a faulty wheel cylinder. This will be accompanied by a loss of fluid and, if allowed to continue, can result in "no brakes" when you need them. Also the fluid may get on the brake lining. This can cause that wheel to grab and result in loss of control when the brakes are applied.

Fluid on the floor mat near the brake pedal indicates master cylinder leakage which results in loss of fluid.

If your car requires the addition of more than one ounce of fluid every six months, there's a leak somewhere in the system—wheel or master cylinder or possibly a rusted or ruptured line.

Pedal sinks slowly to floor when you apply steady pressure but there's no visible fluid leakage. This indicates internal leakage, probably in the master cylinder. Will not result in sudden complete brake failure but should be checked immediately.

Pedal travels too far before brakes react and can't be restored to normal position by pumping the pedal. This means the fluid level is low. If pumping the pedal restores it to normal position, the brakes need adjusting.

Firm brake pedal but poor braking action. If accompanied by squealing or metallic noise when brakes are applied, the linings are probably worn out. A hard pedal can also result from wet brake linings. You can dry wet linings by light brake application while driving.

Steering

Steering system deficiencies accounted for over 26 percent of the mechanical defects found in the California survey.

Shake, shimmy or bump-bump felt in the steering wheel when on smooth roads usually indicates improper wheel balance. Out-of-balance wheels can cause shimmy and even loss of control at highway speeds. This condition also greatly increases wear on tires and suspension parts.

If a bump-bump occurs suddenly while you're driving at highway speeds, it usually indicates tire cord separation. This results in an air bubble between the outer rubber and the inner carcass. Get the tire changed, the sooner the better.

Shake, shimmy or steering backlash on rough roads is usually a sign of one of three things: worn tie-rod ends, ball joints or idler arm. The failure of any of the three will result in complete loss of steering control.

A full-time growl on a car equipped with power steering indicates a low fluid level. Usually the noise is intermittent at first, audible only when wheels are steered but it worsens as fluid level lowers. Also the car will become progressively harder to steer as the fluid level lowers. It can usually be corrected by adding fluid but the important thing is to find out where the fluid is being lost.

Car pulls to side or wanders under normal driving conditions. This means improper front-end alignment or front suspension problems (usually excessive wear). If the car pulls to one side only during braking, the cause is probably poor brake adjustment on one wheel, a leaking wheel cylinder or grease on the brake lining. A grabbing wheel is extremely dangerous, particularly in sudden stops.

Transmission

A change in shifting pattern or erratic shifting in an automatic transmission usually indicates lack of transmission fluid. While this poses no immediate threat to your safety, it can threaten your budget. Operating a transmission with inadequate fluid can lead to an expensive overhaul job. If you have to add a quart of fluid every 1,000 miles, the problem is serious enough to warrant a checkup.

Miscellaneous

A vibration or clanking noise when accelerating or decelerating at slow speeds indicates wear in the universal joints. The noise will get worse as more wear occurs but the process is slow. You'll probably tire of the noise long before the joint finally comes apart. When it does, expect an awful commotion under the car, possible underbody damage and immediate loss of power to the rear wheels.

A clicking or catching sound coming from a front wheel usually indicates a dry or defective bearing. Dry bearings can "freeze," causing wheel lockup, even the loss of a wheel.

If your car continues to bounce or sway after hitting a dip or bump, give it this easy shock-absorber check. With the car standing still, apply an up and down motion to the bumper. If the car bounces more than twice after you discontinue the motion, the shocks are suspect. Another indication of shocks going bad is excessive (a light trace is normal) fluid on the outside of the shock absorber. This means there's a fluid leak, and the useful life of the shock is over. Combine highway speed, a rough section of road and wornout shocks, and the result may well be a car going out of control.

Always replace shock absorbers in pairs—both fronts, both rears. Replacing all four at one time is most desirable.

Any time your car exhibits part-time noises or peculiarities, try to pinpoint them before taking it in for repairs. If possible, determine when or under what conditions the car acts up: Is it at slow or high speed? Is it when the engine is first started or after it has warmed up? Is it when turning (either right or left)? Passing this information on to the mechanic can help keep your repair bill to a minimum. The mechanic can zero in on the problem and spend his time making the repairs rather than test driving the car all over town trying to get it to act up.

How to be a defensive parker

If you take pride in your car's appearance, a parking lot is a poor place to leave it. Nothing short of leaving your car at home in the garage will guarantee it won't become a beat-up victim of parking. But you can reduce the risk by employing parking lot strategy.

Make a pre-parking survey as you enter a parking lot. Avoid parking in front of high-activity stores such as supermarkets and department stores. These draw large numbers of customers, most of whom will be trying to get a space right next to the exit door. A parking space in front of a specialty shop or a store that's closed is safer.

Shopping carts and the carry-out boys that operate them are another danger that lurks at the exit area of market places. Some carry-out boys can't resist trying to get a loaded shopping cart through a space the width of the cart itself. If your car is parked on one side of that space, it's likely to pick up an ugly scratch.

Don't be afraid to walk a few extra steps. The exercise will do you good, and it pays off handsomely if you are really serious about preserving the good looks of the car. The far side of a parking lot is usually uncrowded and probably being used by others who care for their cars.

Stores dealing in large items are especially dangerous. A shopper coming out with a heavy or bulky package isn't likely to be thinking about your car while struggling to load his car. Grocery stores and "one-stop" shopping centers fall in this category, as do hardware stores, lamp shops and dry-cleaning shops.

Protect at least one side of your car whenever you can. Park next to a wall, light post, telephone booth or marker pole. If a protective barrier isn't available, take the end diagonal space, and crowd the "safe" side of that spot.

Mothers with small children are always a threat to your paint job. A woman with a child in her arms has a difficult time controlling a wide-swinging door. And your car is likely to suffer multiple contusions as a whole gang of small kids pile in or out of a car. Your best bet is to avoid parking next to any car with a baby seat or toys in evidence.

Stay away from "rust buckets" and cars that are a montage of dents, scratches, broken glass and missing parts. If the owner isn't concerned about the condition of his car, you can be sure he won't worry about yours. Also, avoid new cars that are obviously unkempt. Owners of run-down new cars are just as unconcerned about a car's appearance

Why buy mutual funds?

The tail end of the 1960s was, to put it mildly, a disappointing period for mutual fund shareholders. Between the beginning of 1969 and mid-1970, the 50 largest stock funds declined, on the average, 34 percent. Losses of 50 percent and above were common among some of the more speculative "go-go" funds, which tantalized investors with a brief record of spectacular gains.

Does all this mean that the case for investing in mutual funds is exploded? It certainly does not. Let's take a searching look at this sector of the investment world, and try to separate realities from myths.

Traditionally, the basic argument for investing in mutual funds has been that they offer small investors diversification and professional management at a relatively modest cost. The merits of diversification are simple and compelling. If you invest a small sum on your own, you can buy only a few stocks, which could all turn out to be losers. A mutual fund investment gives you the benefit of sharing in the fortunes of 50 or more different companies.

But what about the vaunted merits of professional management? Why did so many of the highly paid fund managers do so badly in the 1969-70 market decline? To begin with, remember this: the 1969-70 bear market was the second worst in half a century. At its low point, the Dow Jones Industrial Average was down 36 percent. The only people who weren't seriously hurt by this historic setback were those who previously had sold all or most of their stocks and remained stubbornly in cash.

But if the fund managers, who controlled more than 50 billion dollars, had done this, they would have brought about a calamitous collapse of stock prices and perhaps a nationwide financial crisis. In other words, the funds really have no effective defense against a major bear market. Admittedly, the "swinging" managers made matters worse by indulging in irresponsible speculation, and many of them are justly discredited. On the other hand, some of the more conservative funds haven't fared as badly as the general market.

The basic truth about mutual funds is this: some do better than the market some of the time, and some do worse than the market some of the time; but most of the time, mutual funds, on the average, will behave as the market does. This is something many fund buyers failed to grasp. They were under the even for thousands who perspire heavily

A different formula has been found to keep underarms absolutely dry—even for thousands who perspire heavily. So different, it contains far more anti-wetness agent than ordinary aerosol sprays. After decades of common "deodorants," it took a chemical invention to make this truly effective protection possible—with the same safety to clothing—the same skin mildness as popular "deodorants." Called Mitchum Anti-Perspirant, it is the product of a trustworthy 58-year-old laboratory. By the thousands, women with problem perspiration are finding the protection they need —and never could find before. And fully effective as a deodorant, too, of course. If you perspire more than average—even heavily—get the positive protection of Mitchum Anti-Perspirant. Liquid or cream. Each $3. Available in Canada.

Mitchum ANTI-PERSPIRANT

misconception that mutual funds were "relatively safe"—that they couldn't go down too far.

Another prevalent misconception, which caused much grief, is that funds are a surefire hedge against inflation. Actually, when inflation gets serious enough to play havoc with the economy and the stock market, the funds are badly hit, too. They are indeed a hedge against inflation, but only from a long-term standpoint.

So much for the risk factor. Let's examine the possible rewards you'll find in mutual fund investing.

Some funds have scored gains of 50 percent or better in a single year. But anyone who buys fund shares, hoping for a short-term bonanza, is entering the speculative race on the wrong horse. Mutual funds should not be regarded as stock market sprinters, but as long-distance runners.

The genuine case for mutual funds is that, over the long pull, they are likely to give the average investor a return on his money that he could not readily obtain elsewhere. This is especially true if purchases are judiciously timed. The Investment Company Institute, which represents the mutual fund industry, has compiled figures showing the result of various methods of investing $10,000 in the years from 1960 to 1969: Series "E" government bonds, $14,581; savings accounts in savings associations, $15,234; Dow Jones Industrial Average $16,448; average of all mutual funds (with dividends and capital gains reinvested), $21,255; growth stock funds, $25,458. According to Fundscope, a publication devoted to mutual funds, this same period was the worst of the sixteen ten-year periods within the past quarter century in terms of mutual fund performance. (In the best ten-year period, 1949 to 1958, a $10,000 investment grew to $39,000.)

Obviously, there's no guarantee that the seventies will be better than the sixties. They could conceivably be worse. But judging from the historical record, the average fund investment should at least double within a decade—and could do considerably better. Exciting? No. But it should be reason enough for considering a mutual fund investment. It's important, however, to make the right approach, and here are some guidelines you should have:

THE ANATOMY OF MUTUAL FUNDS

Open-end funds—and that's the vast majority—will sell shares to you or redeem them from you any time you wish. Most are load funds, the load being a charge paid by the buyer (about 8½ percent of asset value per share) to cover commissions to fund salesman or to brokers.

No-load funds deal directly with the public through advertisement or word of mouth, and they often can't be bought through brokers. The Investment Company Institute, 1775 K Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006, will send you a list of no-load (and load) funds, but will not make recommendations. If you write to any of these funds, they'll send you a prospectus and an order form.

The most important thing about a mutual fund is its record, and on this score there's no overall distinction between the load funds and the no-loads. Some people object strongly to the sales charge, and others find that the advantages of being able to deal through a broker are worth the added cost.

Closed-end funds have a fixed number of shares outstanding, which are traded like common stocks. Because of the vagaries of supply and demand, or the reputation of management, the shares may sell above or below their actual asset value.

Management fees are what fund investors pay their management—usually a separate corporation. The fee is taken from the income of the fund, and it's usually less than half of one percent of the fund's total assets.

Some have a gift for self-expression

Suppose you're modern-minded and you want it to show. But the cold, clinical look of some "modern" furniture just isn't you. You're warmer. More vibrant. That's the nature that comes through in our "Tower Suite" collection, with glints of chrome-plated steel on elegant rosewood and pecan veneers. It expresses your practical side, too, with bright ideas like two tensor reading lamps in the vinyl upholstered headboard. What do you really know about dental health?

Are cavities the greatest threat?
Far from it. Untreated decay takes its greatest toll in children and young people, but the largest single cause of tooth loss in adults is pyorrhea or gum disease (dentists call it periodontal disease).

Gum disease not only attacks the gums, but the supporting structure of your teeth. In advanced cases, the gums actually detach from the tooth and the tooth becomes loose and falls out.

Irritating deposits (plaque) formed from substances in saliva, bacteria and food debris normally found in the mouth cause gum disease. These deposits cling tenaciously to the teeth, and if they aren't removed by careful and frequent cleaning at home, they can lead to periodontal disease. Eventually the minerals in saliva cause the plaque to harden. These hardened deposits (calculus) can then be removed only by regular tooth cleaning (prophylaxis) by your dentist or dental hygienist.

Here are the four warning signs:

- bleeding gums during brushing
- persistent unpleasant mouth odor
- inflamed or spongy, flabby gums
- loose or tipped teeth

The sooner treatment begins, the better your chances of stopping gum disease —especially if you agree to a rigorous home oral hygiene program.

Are dental X rays dangerous?
Despite all that recent scare publicity, new X ray equipment (if properly used) poses no threat whatsoever, according to the American Dental Association, and the U. S. Public Health Service.

In fact, when you're shielded (with a lead apron, for example) you are exposed to less radiation than you normally get from radioactive sands, stones and cosmic rays from outer space.

First-class dental care is not possible without X rays. They enable your dentist to detect certain conditions, such as small cavities on hidden surfaces of your teeth and diseased areas in the jawbones, which otherwise could not be discovered. If X rays weren't taken, your first warning of dental trouble would probably be pain caused by an infection of the tooth pulp (nerve). And by the time the pulp has become infected, it often is too late for your tooth to be saved.

X ray examinations also help a dentist discover teeth that are developing badly in the jaws, such as impacted teeth. Periodontal disease, too, can be discovered by an X ray examination long before its effects are visible to the dentist's eye.

Can bad breath (halitosis) be stopped by a good mouthwash?
At best it's a temporary help. Rinsing your mouth with a mouthwash or brushing your teeth with a flavored dentifrice can only mask chronic bad breath.

Halitosis is usually caused by postnasal drip, decomposed food lodged between the teeth, unclean dentures, periodontal disease, cavities or a tongue coated with a certain bacteria. None of these conditions is corrected by a mouthwash.

The culprit also may be a serious systemic disorder, such as a tonsillar infection, diabetes, gastrointestinal disturbances, chronic laryngitis, bronchitis and lung disease.

Only a visit with your family dentist or physician can determine the underlying cause of persistent bad breath.

Does fluoridated water give complete protection?
Fluoridation can't do the job alone. Lifelong use of fluoridated water cuts decay by about 65 percent. That's an impressive figure, but it's still far from 100 percent.

Also, most middle-aged people did not have the benefit of fluoridation while their permanent teeth were being formed, and that's the only time fluoride in drinking water can become a protective part of their tooth enamel.

Then, too, there's no proof that fluoridation of water gives you protection against gum disease.

Must you worry about cavities in first teeth?
You should. A youngster's first teeth (or baby teeth) should receive the same good care and attention as permanent teeth for several reasons.
- A child needs healthy first teeth in order to chew food properly and speak well.
- An infection established in first teeth can be carried over to permanent teeth.
- Premature loss of first teeth can cause adjoining teeth to drift into empty spaces and twist the alignment of incoming permanent teeth.
- A mouth crippled by painfully decaying first teeth may retard a child's social interaction and growth.

Regular dental care for your children should begin between the ages of two and three so your dentist can treat any developing cavities.

Are teeth more vulnerable during pregnancy?
No. The belief that pregnancy increases the rate of tooth decay is wrong. It's based on the false assumption that in providing calcium for a growing fetus, the mother's teeth are decalcified and thus more susceptible to decay. Clinical studies show that neither the extent of decay nor the rate of new cavities is higher in pregnant women. It's a scientific fact that the fetus does not absorb calcium from the mother's teeth.

A variation on this old wives' tale is the widely held belief that a mother loses a tooth for every child. It's also without foundation.

If cavities do increase during pregnancy, the cause is higher consumption of sweets, neglected oral hygiene or other bad habits. Poor oral hygiene (and, occasionally, hormonal changes during pregnancy) can cause periodontal disease as well.

Regular dental treatment is important during pregnancy, but there are some precautions. Tooth extraction should be postponed if possible. Special care should be taken with X rays, especially in the first three months of pregnancy. And, in the last stages of pregnancy, extensive dental treatment usually is best delayed altogether.

You should also realize [a] drinking lots of milk or tak vitamin pills won't make [h] teeth of any adult less susc tible to decay. Milk is a [g] source of calcium (and the fore plays a vital role in bu ing strong teeth), but this [a] nothing to do with preven cavities in already develo teeth. Nor does an adequ diet prevent cavities in adu a serious vitamin deficien however, may eventually co tribute to gum disease.

When a child's permann teeth erupt "slanted," th they stay slanted?
Not necessarily. Practically children go through a transi or "ugly-duckling" devel ment stage as their te change from first to second permanent) teeth. If the p manent upper and lower fr teeth come in tipped, flared winged upward, it's usuall perfectly normal conditi Lip and tongue pressure, a biting pressure as the chi dental arches develop, usua will straighten these teeth. they don't show any signs adjustment within a year eruption, you should disc the condition with your dent Very often, early orthodon treatment can easily solve problem that could call for tensive treatment later.

Can an adult's crooked tee be straightened?
Yes. Orthodontic treatme once considered valuable o for children, now helps ma adults whose faces are marr by badly aligned teeth, or ev protruding or receding jaws.

A recent estimate indica that perhaps one out of eve four orthodontic patients is adult, demonstrating that seldom too late to correct de tal deformities.

Adult accident patients a obvious candidates for orth dontic work. Older victims dental neglect, failure to place missing teeth and malo clusion (or "bad bite") are al seeking treatment today.

Two of the more comm correctable adult facial d formities are retrognathia receding chin and buck teet and prognathism (a protrudi lower jaw). However, seve retrognathia and prognath among adults require surge

Can you eliminate cavities simply by brushing after every meal?

This idea is not supported by scientific evidence. While the old saying that a "clean tooth never decays" is theoretically true, it's doubtful whether simply brushing your teeth can stop new cavities entirely. You just can't get your teeth clean enough by brushing.

The principal benefit of brushing after every meal is to remove plaque and the bulk of acid-producing starches and sugars that contribute to decay. To get results, you must brush thoroughly within minutes after eating, every time you eat. This isn't very practical. In addition, you'd have to be a remarkably skilled brusher to remove every bit of plaque and debris.

This doesn't mean you can't keep your teeth very clean, and therefore healthy. Today, you have a variety of new scientific techniques and materials at your disposal, including dental floss, fluoride toothpaste, dental sprays and special brushing techniques (see "How can you save your teeth," Better Homes and Gardens, November, 1969). By observing proper diet and oral hygiene, you can help prevent many dental problems from starting.

But you can't be a complete dental do-it-yourselfer. You still need the dentist for periodic examinations—to see how well you are performing your oral hygiene, to remove calculus, to advise you on diet and to give you other professional pointers.

Should your youngster's first teeth fall out by first grade?

Don't be alarmed if your first-grader comes home from school and tells of classmates losing first teeth while his don't even show signs of loosening.

The timetable of shedding first teeth and eruption of permanent teeth is broad and variable, says one of the nation's top orthodontists. The usual time for permanent teeth to erupt is from six to 13 years, but there can be variations on either end of that range, he says. Dental growth usually is coordinated with other phases of body development, particularly skeletal growth. If a child grows more slowly than his classmates, chances are his teeth also will require more time to develop.

Yet certain gaps in the eruption timetable should be watched closely. For instance, if a permanent upper left central incisor has erupted, the corresponding tooth—the upper right central incisor—should follow within a reasonable time. Another common problem is the emergence of a double set of teeth, with a tooth remaining in place and the corresponding permanent tooth erupting behind it. In such a case, extraction of the first tooth helps prevent the possible development of malocclusion.

An injury to the youngster's mouth also can upset the eruption timetable. For example, a blow to the jaw may impact a tooth. Instead of moving toward the gum line, the tooth turns sideways against a neighboring tooth. Surgery may be needed to bring the stray back to its normal eruption path.

Can your teeth last a lifetime?

Yes. The deep-rooted belief you must inevitably lose your teeth as you grow older ranks among the most serious of the old wives' tales about dental health.

There is no reason to resign yourself to replacing teeth with false ones. With good home hygiene and regular professional care, your teeth have an excellent chance of lasting a lifetime.

It's seldom too late to begin taking really good care of your teeth—and it's obviously well worth the effort. Dentures, efficient as they are, simply don't function as well as your natural teeth. For convenience and performance, there are no teeth like your own. ■

What should you feed your cat

Feed your cat only meat, and he'll suffer malnutrition. He might even die. Many people misunderstand this. They know that the cat is a carnivore, but forget that in the wild state a cat devoured all of his prey, including what the victim had last eaten. In fact, the viscera were eaten first to make sure the cat got the carbohydrates, vitamins and other nutrients it needs in addition to the protein and fats in meat.

Commercial cat foods

It's easy to feed your cat properly. Just remember that two types of food are available, and each serves a purpose.

Complete foods are formulated from a combination of ingredients to provide your cat with all vital nutrients. This food, plus adequate water, represents a balanced diet.

Supplement foods are not nutritionally complete and should not be fed as a major part of your cat's total food intake. These are usually canned products, and are recommended only as an occasional treat.

If you'll limit your cat to foods labeled "complete" or "fully nourishing" you can't go wrong. However, your cat will still show preferences for one form of food over another.

Canned foods, which manufacturers refer to as "moist" types, have come a long way from the foul-smelling concoctions that made you wish the cat could open the can himself. The new canned products are very appetizing and available in a variety of flavors in complete and supplement forms.

Dry foods have been familiar to dog owners for years. They're economical, easy-to-store and have great appetite appeal to cats. They're especially handy if you leave your cat home alone. Dry foods offer another benefit; their dry crunchy texture impedes the accumulation of tartar and that means the cat's teeth will need less frequent cleaning.

Soft-moist foods are extremely convenient. They require no refrigeration—you don't even have to close the package after taking some out. They resemble meat products in color, texture and taste.

How much to feed and when

A kitten's protein and food energy requirements are proportionally highest during his rapid growth period. This starts when he is four or five weeks old, right after he has been weaned and makes his first appearance in your home, and lasts until he is about six months old. Because his stomach capacity is rather limited, it is important that you feed him frequently. Four meals a day—morning, noon, night and just before bed—should be sufficient. Continue this schedule until he is five to seven months old, at which time you can eliminate the evening meal. All kittens are individuals. If yours seems disinterested in one of the meals, or is leaving a portion uneaten, he may be telling you he's ready to cut down his intake.

A five- to eight-month-old cat is an adolescent. His period of rapid growth is complete, so his nutrient needs per pound of body weight are less than a small kitten's but still more than adult cat's. Continue feeding three meals a day until he indicates he doesn't want that much, or seems to be putting on excess weight.

An adult cat needs to eat only twice a day, and some get along fine on one daily meal. Most cats are very adept at judging how much they need to eat. They seem to have more self-control than dogs. A dog craves attention. If begging gets attention, he'll beg when he isn't even hungry. A cat

What Can You Do About Today's $65-a-Day Hospital Costs?

Like everything else, the cost of being sick or hurt has gone up sharply. In California, the average daily cost of a stay in the hospital has already climbed to over $65.00 a day! And experts say hospital costs will rise even higher.

These fast-rising hospital costs have put millions of California families in a dangerous spot, because their health insurance is no longer enough to pay the bills. This means an illness or accident could cost them hundreds or even thousands of dollars out of their own pockets. It could put them deep in debt for years to come.

It's a serious problem. But fortunately, now there's a sensible, low-cost solution. Now you can add remarkable big benefit health protection that solves this problem, because it pays you the full cash benefits in addition to all other insurance benefits you collect, including group.

When covered sickness or injuries strike, you collect generous cash benefits that are tax-free. The cash comes to you, direct by check, in addition to what you collect from your other hospital, medical, or surgical insurance, including group.

This means you can use the cash any way you see fit. Pay hospital and doctor bills not covered by your other insurance. Use the cash to help pay for special treatments, drugs or private nursing care. Spend it on the bills piling up at home. Or take a vacation to get your strength back. Or, if you don't need it all to help with your expenses, you can even put it in the bank for your future security. There are no strings attached.

With today's $65-a-day hospital costs—up 300 per cent in the last 15 years—nine out of 10 Californians need added protection to prevent a financial disaster when sickness or accident strikes. That's why this add-on protection that pays tax-free cash on top of your other insurance makes mighty good sense. And you'll enjoy lif more when you know you're protecte against these big medical bills.

CONSUMER PROTECTION BILLS IN JEOPARDY

At last count, two consumer protection bills were languishing in Congress. Introduced months ago, they have not, by any stretch of the imagination, suffered from overexposure in the mass media. Nor have they attracted much attention from legislators.

The first, a cooling-off regulation, would let you cancel purchases of $10 or more from a door-to-door salesman within three business days. This protection, first introduced as a congressional bill, is now being proposed as a Federal Trade Commission regulation. Whether it's finally enacted as federal law or a trade regulation, the protection would be much the same. Sellers would be required to give buyers a written explanation of their right to cancel the sale. After receiving notice of cancellation, the seller would have to pick up any goods he had delivered within a specified time and refund any money paid toward the purchase. The FTC regulation also would require sellers to submit any disputes to arbitration.

The second bill is concerned with unit pricing. It would require that the price per single unit of weight, volume or measure be stated on products not packaged in standard sizes and quantities.

Many products, from foods to drugs, are sold in a bewildering array of sizes and quantities. In one California market, pancake mixes have been available in 17 different packages, each with its own price per package. The price per pound ranged from 17 to 33 cents. Calculating the price per pound, ounce or pint would be almost impossible without a computer.

Though quality and convenience are prime buying factors, price is vital—especially during inflation. The proposed legislation would simplify price comparisons by requiring package price and unit price on products.

"Write your congressman" is a bromide these days. Yet in this case, it makes some sense to tell the people who are directly concerned with these bills just how you feel. Send your comments to:

- Your congressman, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. 20515.
- Your senators, United States Senate, Washington, D. C. 20510.
- Virginia Knauer, the President's Special Assistant for Consumer Affairs, Federal Office Building 7, Washington, D. C. 20506.
- Director of Industry Guidance, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C. 20580.
- Local or state consumer organizations actively involved in legislative matters.

The case for consumer juries

In the last few months, 50 consumer juries have been set up across the country. These juries represent varying social, economic and geographic segments, but each is made up the same: ten housewives who meet in their neighborhoods to discuss consumer issues and problems. The discussions are taped, edited and played back to local businessmen, giving them candid answers to some often sticky consumer issues.

So far, the juries have discussed a variety of topics, from environmental hazards to women's rights. If nothing else, these sessions point up the major concerns of American homemakers.

For more information on consumer juries, write G & R Feedback, Inc., Dept. BH, La Vake House, Research Park, Princeton, N. J. 08540.■

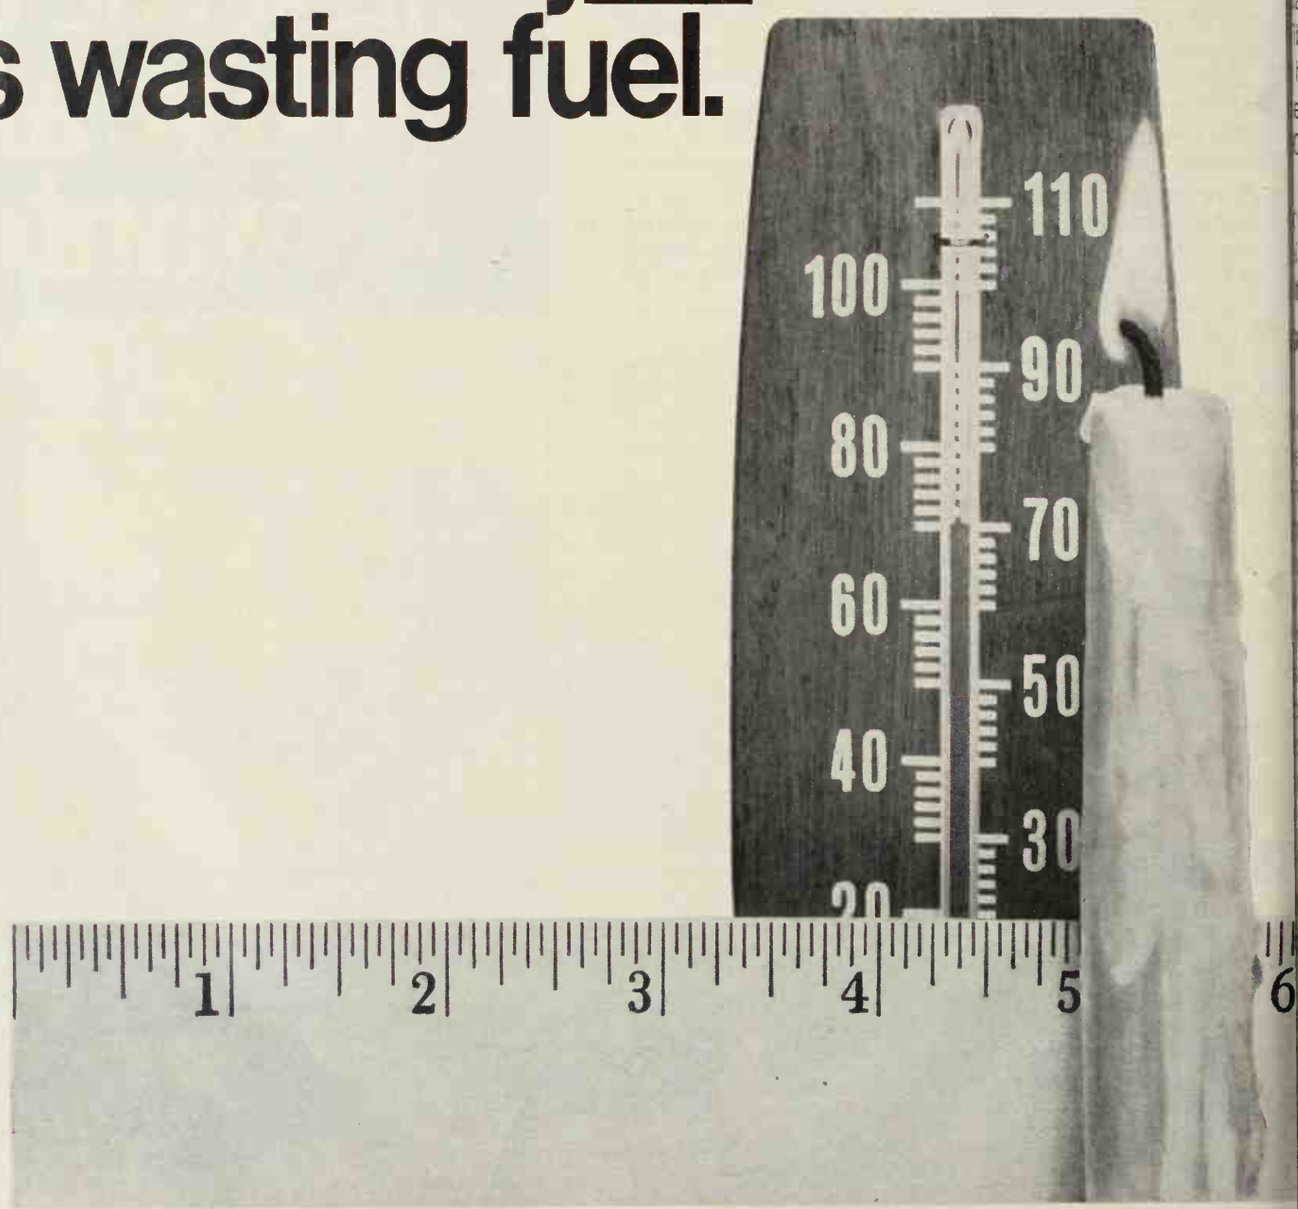
With rising fuel costs, and the urgent need to conserve energy, here's how to find out if your home is wasting fuel.



A Presidential Committee has ecently recommended that the Na- on act now to conserve energy uels. One of the best ways to do his is to make sure your home has dequate insulation.

In fact, if your home is more nan 15 years old, it probably oesn't have adequate insulation nd it may be wasting more than 5% of its fuel. Or costing almost vice as much as it should to keep our family comfortable.

If you're building a new home, ou can nip this problem in the bud, y telling your builder to use Fiber- las*6″& 3″ insulation. That's 6″ of iberglas in ceilings and 3″ in walls. helps stop fuel waste, and can cut eating/cooling costs as much as 0%.

In an existing home, it's easy o find out if you're wasting fuel, ither because of poor insulation, or ther reasons:

tart at the top.

Take a ruler up to your attic, nd measure the insulation. If it's ess than 6″ thick, you need more. emember, heat rises. 6″ of Fiber- las insulation in ceilings helps top heat from escaping through our roof—allows significant sav- ngs in fuel costs. In summer, it tops solar heat gain that forces air onditioners to run longer than nec- ssary. And finally 6″ of Fiberglas nsulation in ceilings will make your amily feel a lot more comfortable ear round.

wo thermometers let you ouble-check.

Place one thermometer gainst an outside wall and another ermometer in the center of the oom. Leave them for 4 hours, then ake readings. The thermometer on he outside wall should not be more han 5 degrees lower than the one in the middle of the room. If it is more than 5 degrees lower, it's another sign your home needs more insulation.

A candle can lead to additional savings.

You may be losing heat from openings in your home. Light a candle and hold it near the edges of windows and doors. If it flickers, you probably need caulking, weatherstripping, or storm windows and doors. They can cut your fuel costs by as much as 10%.

Check your furnace and filters.

Your furnace should be checked and adjusted at the start of each heating season. Air filters should be replaced at least 3 times a season. Dirty filters make your furnace work much harder and longer, wasting fuel.

The dollars and sense of Fiberglas insulation.

Installing 6″ of Fiberglas in your attic isn't difficult or expensive. You can do it yourself in less than a weekend. Cost for an average home is about $100. If you're building a new home, the cost of 6″ & 3″ is less than 1% of the total construction cost. In both cases, fuel savings soon pay for the insulation cost.

How much you save with 6″ of Fiberglas insulation in ceilings depends, of course, on the size and location of your home. But it's easy to get a good idea:

Send for Computer Analysis of heating and cooling savings in your area, and new booklet on reducing fuel consumption.

We will send you a free copy of a very helpful new booklet, "7 Ways of Reducing Fuel Consumption in Household Heating . . . Through Energy Conservation" prepared by the National Bureau of Standards and the Office of the Assistant to the President for Consumer Affairs. Relaxing solutions for Landscaping problems

Take a fresh look at the same old view

Photographs: de Gennaro. Landscape architect: William Kapranos

By Hamilton Mason, Garden Editor and Larry Grove, Associate

You can have a great landscape without working too hard at it. It can be simple or luxuriant. Plan it right, and either way, it will require a minimum of maintenance. Here are some of those easy solutions. Not all of the plants shown are hardy; substitutes are in parentheses.

The low-maintenance backyard (above right) was developed by the homeowners from a plan provided by the landscape architect. They took a year and a half, working as they liked, and managed to save a third of the bid price. Decking serves as a dry traffic route between terrace, living room and bedroom wing. Cedar boards, spaced one-eighth inch, are nailed to 4x4 redwood girders set on concrete building blocks to allow runoff of water.

There's no lawn to mow around this backyard patio (right). Serenity is achieved by grouping various shades of green—vinca, sedum, pachysandra. Splashes of color are only for spring: a Sargent crabapple at left and two redbuds. They're neatly tied to the house by low junipers, which also soften the patio.

Landscape architects: Edward S. Fried & Associates

The narrow stretch between a garage wall and walkway is often neglected—because the homeowners don't know how to handle it. At far right is a fine solution—with abundant varieties of plant material used harmoniously.

Azaleas (flowering quince) produce spring color, which can be followed by set-out plants of tuberous begonias or caladiums. Pink-eyed Madigascar periwinkle relieves the lengthy stretch of ajuga ground cover. Coarse-textured podocarpus (upright yew) by door adds the right touch to an otherwise blank garage wall. Variegated pittosporum (variegated dogwood) at right completes an overall woodsy effect. Shrubs need only an occasional light pruning to keep them in bounds. Do this, or you'll regret brushing against them when they are wet after a rain.

The backyard (below) really needed landscaping badly. There was no privacy between the bedroom patio and the living-room wing.

A solid fence seemed too harsh a solution, so plants of Euonymus alatus were set at 14-inch intervals in a double curve, starting at the house wall. Tapered form of the hedge has been easily maintained by shearing off new growth whenever it exceeded the desired height. The entire "wall" turns red in fall—to end the season in a final burst of color. Note the effective results obtained by having the formal hedge terminate in an informal planting.

Roses do well on the sunny side of the hedge. They're easy to care for in this narrow bed where you can get around the bushes to work with them at minimum risk of damaging plants.

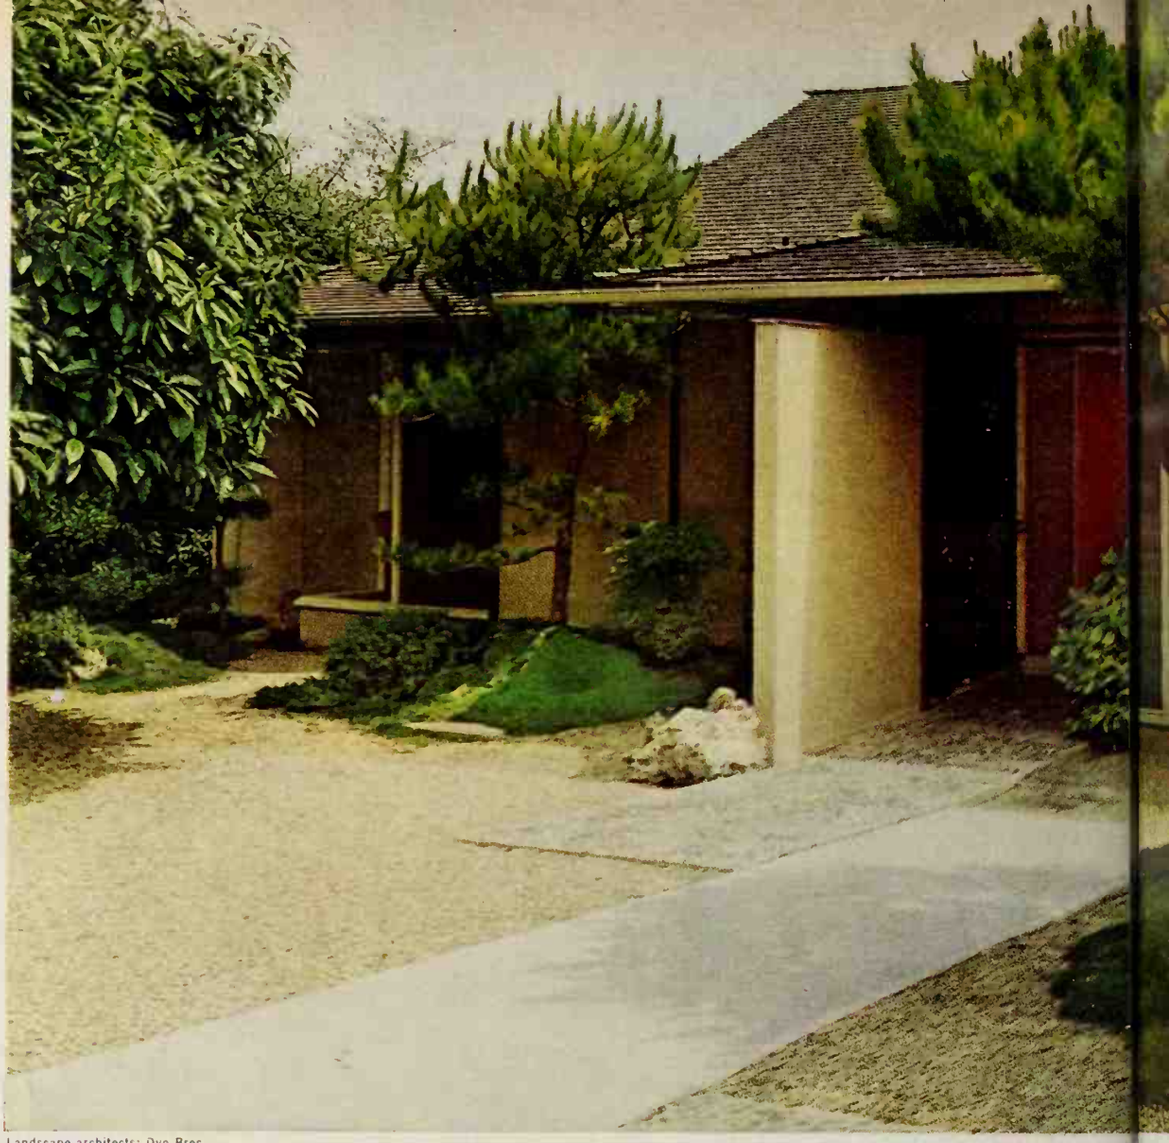
Plan a low-upkeep entrance or driveway



Landscape architects: Dyo Bros.

Just a few shrubs, trees and ground covers create the balance in the very low-maintenance front yard shown above. The tree at left is an avocado (horse-chestnut) and Monterey pines (Scotch pines) emerge from the mounds. Korean grass and babys-tears (sedum) cover mound on right, while the one on the left has junipers, nandina (Korean boxwood) and variegated pittosporum (Vicary golden privet). A tall fatshedera in a container and gold-dust tree (golden dwarf mock-orange) line the entranceway. Fine gravel surrounds the walk, which gains variety by alternating plain concrete with exposed aggregate in irregularly set modules.

To the left you see what can be done with a six-foot area between a driveway and the neighbor's lot—low-maintenance planting plus privacy screening. Weeping Chinese banyan (Nanking cherry) grows along the lot line while peach and apricot trees cut off the height of the neighboring house. A few clusters of periwinkle fit well into both sunny and shaded spots of the ornamental strawberry ground cover. Lining the driveway are dwarf boxwoods. A 2x4 redwood header runs the length of the planting area, 16 inches from the drive and in back of the hedge, so the ground cover can be kept within its own space.

The owners took advantage of a driveway-widening project (above right) to rebuild their brick walk into a softly curved approach to the front door. To avoid a ribbonlike appearance, they made the steps twice as wide as the walk. Small natural stones serve as risers, with treads 16 inches deep and a handy 16-inch "landing" next to the drive. The owners didn't skimp on plant material but there still isn't anything that takes a lot of attention. Azaleas (impatiens), pink strawberry geranium (vinca), holly, ajuga and a few marigolds provide change of color, texture and design in this location of shifting light. A rough boulder contrasts well with the smooth stone steps—thanks to mondo grass (festuca) that separates the two hard surfaces.

You can have lots of color in a low-maintenance yard (right) if you select the right flower. Here, it's First Lady marigold, which blooms repeatedly in an almost solid mass of color during the summer. At the front entrance, low boxwood hedges outline areas planted with azaleas—to provide spring color. An espaliered magnolia (yew) provides interest to the left of the entrance, and container-grown espaliered pear stands by the garage. A flowering pear shades both the entrance and part of the drive during peak heat of the day.

No "typical" lot has to stay typical

Before

Photograph: Louis Reen

Starting a landscape from scratch is a lot of work. Approach it the easiest way. Budget both your time and money by finding a landscape architect who will provide a two- or three-year plan for you to work from. To help you solve your problems, we offer two before-and-after landscape situations on these and the following pages.

You'll recognize (left) the typical back-door pad with little to set it off—no landscape plan, no privacy, adjacent lots open to each other.

The privacy problem was solved by combining a stockade fence with curving planted borders. Hemlock, flowering crabapples and hawthorns were effectively planted as a living wall to block off a neighboring house—and still provide a view for everyone.

To make something livable out of the back-door area, the owners first put up an eggcrate trellis. This allows plenty of light to keep decorative potted plants thriving. A free-form flagstone paving extends the size of the terrace so there is now plenty of space for entertaining. Steps turn what had been a problem sloping yard into two useful levels. A small pool accommodates both fish and water lilies, and container-grown plants provide movable color accents.

The effect is big, but not the maintenance

Before

The rear court (far left) of this H-shaped house should have been a great outdoor living area, but sliding doors opened onto nothing.

Wonders were effected by laying a curved brick paving on a 14-foot radius. Bricks were set on limestone screenings, but you could substitute sand for a base. The wall, made of weathered stone with bluestone coping, provides ample extra seating if needed. Euonymus ground covers soften both base of wall and foundation of house. Completing the landscaping are just a few basic plants: witch-hazel at the right corner and espaliered against the brick wall, center; dogwood in angle of house; redbud, far left. Geraniums in containers need little care and give season-long color.

The air conditioner is concealed from both front and backyards by 2 feet of six-foot-high stockade fence set in a double curve. Section directly behind the unit is removable for servicing when necessary. Separating the fence from the walkway of fine gravel is a euonymus ground cover confined by a metal edging. A Russian olive is good for breaking up a long, narrow space because it will stay small and manageable indefinitely.

As this "before" picture illustrates perfectly, it takes more than a few random shrubs to landscape a house. Here there was nothing more than a way to get in and out of the house

Now, the front has been changed into an inviting approach to the entrance. Precast aggregate-concrete squares pave all but the planting areas. A hurdle fence and lamps define the court and direct traffic to the front door (a good solution where there's an equally prominent service door). The Russian olive tree lightly shades both the entrance court and the rooms that give on it. Note how plantings of petunias and geraniums form an attractive transition from the driveway into the entry enclosure. Two winged euonymus bushes balance each other—one inside the fence, the other outside—to tie everything together and make an effective and unified whole of the landscaping.

Our pick of the colorful new flowers

Landscape architect: George Fuller

Architect: W. Ted Tyler, A.I.A.

Photographs: de Gennaro. Landscape architect: Joseph Copp, Jr. Source: Pauline Graves

By Hamilton Mason, Garden Editor

What's new isn't always good, but the flowers we're showing you here truly are. They have been evaluated for several years before being introduced.

Zinnias and marigolds (far left) bloom abundantly over a long period of time, and survive heat and dryness. You may have to spray zinnias for mildew late in the season and give marigolds an application of a miticide to counteract red spider mites, but neither job is time-consuming. Salmon-red zinnia Emperor produces five-inch blooms. Marigold Empress is an F1 hybrid with four-inch flowers.

It would be hard to get more color into small space than you see above left. Both the brilliant dianthus Queen of Hearts and the multicolored snapdragons Little Darling are All-America Selections for 1971. Both flowers grow only 12-15 inches high. Snapdragons branch naturally—no need to pinch out.

The new roses (left) are really special. Oldtimer, a hybrid tea of apricot color, puts forth blooms up to seven inches. The two-toned pink is an All-America winner for the year. It varies from one flower to the other and so is appropriately called Aquarius—an unusual grandiflora. Pilgrim, another hybrid tea, is a valuable dark red that keeps its color without "blueing."

Redgold (right, foreground) is another All-America winner. Orangy yellow flowers tinged red make a striking combination in a floribunda. Imagine a blazing hedge of this! Firelight is a fragrant coral-red hybrid tea that fully deserves being named Rose of the Year.

Town Houses

Home ownership with apartment convenience

By Stephen Mead, Architectural Editor

Our urban areas keep growing, and their land keeps shrinking. Little room is left for the kind of house with private yard in front and back that we grew up in. We simply must put more people in less space. This doesn't mean we must build beehives. It's not as bad as all that. Indeed, there are some excellent solutions. One of them is the rediscovery of the town house.

Town houses were common in our Colonial days. Then, as America exploded into the wide-open spaces, they faded into obscurity. Today, with our population squeeze, they're welcomed back in their new form which combines maximum residential density with privacy, individualized design, common green spaces and individual, secluded patios—a really fine family environment.

As you'd expect, there's a wide range of quality in town house construction. To illustrate what we believe a good town house should offer, we've chosen one from Sandpiper Cove, an advanced development located in Rumsey Island, Md.

The front exterior of this town house (above) demonstrates how side-by-side houses can still retain individuality. Each is set off by unique design, color scheme and the material used. Owners share a convenient parking area beyond the front yard.

At the rear, outdoor storage units on either side of the patio jut out beyond the house to form a sight barrier. There's no way neighbors can eye your patio or balcony.

Because a town house needs only a small lot, you save time and money on yard maintenance. Between houses, common walls made of soundproof masonry cut down on upkeep, heating expenses and construction costs. You have, in effect, many of the advantages of home ownership with all the convenience of apartment living.

The living room gives you that sense of space that comes with excellent planning. It faces the rear, and you can enjoy your garden scenery instead of having to watch the traffic.

The master bedroom (left) has its own private outdoor balcony. Here's a place where parents can slip away for a quiet moment without feeling locked in. Above the bedroom, a hidden staircase leads to attic storage.

Extra storage space, convenient bathrooms, traffic flow and optimum use of living areas are all efficiently designed into the floor plan. Note how the extra-large kitchen doubles as the laundry center. Priced in the low 20s, this 1400-square-foot town house is another example of excellent land use and house design at an affordable price.

70,000 Taxpayers Speak Out

Our property taxes are a crime . . .
The $600 exemption is laughable . . .
Polluters should be punished with taxes . . .

These comments represent just a few of the reactions we got from some 70,000 concerned readers who responded to our tax questionnaire in the June 1970 issue. This questionnaire—which required at least a half hour to complete—tapped a well-spring of thoughtful, penetrating observations on today's tax system. Obviously, not all of the comments were as scathing as those above. Yet a good many were even more biting, and understandably so.

In answering the 73 questions on taxes, from property assessments to such esoteric varieties as user taxes, these readers showed us one heartening fact. In a year of violent protests, boycotts and strikes, you still could get some deliberate, carefully considered reactions to one of the sorest spots in our society's economic framework.

It's even more encouraging that the respondents represent the action-oriented core of our nation. They're younger, better educated, surprisingly objective—even hard-nosed at times. Most importantly, they showed us they know the score on this almost impenetrable phase of family economics. We feel they've produced a definitive statement on taxes that cannot, in conscience, be overlooked by our country's legislators and opinion leaders.

To order the complete tax questionnaire report, see coupon on page 94.

THE STATEMENT

In many communities today, voters almost automatically reject school-bond issues. This is the only way to drive home the point to school officials that school costs are out of hand.

THE RESPONSES

(See Editor's note, opposite)

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
20%	29%	8%	29%	13%

THE INTERPRETATION

School-bond defeats are commonplace these days. In several communities, from Ohio to Oregon, public schools have shut down because voters refused to authorize additional funds. From the news reports and commentaries, you could get the idea that voters, especially the beleaguered homeowners, are almost unanimous in their defiance of additional school appropriations. Yet for the respondents here, the issue is far from clear-cut. Agreeing that school bond rejection is the only way to drive home the message that school costs are too high: 49 percent. Disagreeing with that proposition: 42 percent.

Property taxes go up every year; costs of public schools account for most of the increase. A ceiling should be imposed on teachers' salaries to limit this large part of the expense.

9%	13%	4%	46%	27%

82 percent of the respondents here were homeowners. In a year marked by widespread, bitter protest over rising property taxes, you would expect this group to echo that anti-tax sentiment—even where teachers' salaries are concerned. Yet 73 percent disagreed generally with the proposition, 22 percent agreed.

College costs are among the biggest expenses for many families, and currently there is no tax break on them. Because education is so important to the social and economic well-being of our country, these expenses should be fully deductible.

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
35%	31%	3%	22%	8%

Since more than half the people who answered the questionnaire have children under 18, you would expect even more than 66 percent to agree that budget-breaking college costs should be fully deductible.

Homeowners now can deduct such things as mortgage interest charges, property taxes and casualty losses. This tax advantage should continue because it is a benefit to home ownership.

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
46%	48%	2%	3%	1%

With 94 percent agreeing to this proposition, there's little question how these homeowners feel about keeping home-related deductions in our tax system. And in a similar question on homeowner deductions, 79 percent agreed that if mortgage interest, property taxes and casualty losses weren't deductible, many people probably couldn't afford to own a home.

A recent proposal would tax parents who have more than two children. In other words, they get an exemption for the first two, but must pay a tax on the third, the fourth and so on. Do you agree or disagree?

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
23%	22%	4%	29%	22%

At first glance, these figures seem to indicate that there's no strong feeling either way on this issue: 45 percent agree; 51 percent disagree. But consider that the tax plan described above actually would direct family planning through economic pressure. This means that the 45 percent who agree to it want the government to take a relatively drastic—or at least very personal—step to reduce our population growth.

No (tax) credits should be given to companies because they use pollution control devices. It should work the other way: if a company pollutes our air or water, a tax penalty should be levied against it.

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
41%	32%	4%	19%	4%

During the past year, pollution and its effects have been dramatized by the communications media, from newspapers to magazines and television. In most instances, industry has been portrayed as one of the chief culprits. From the responses shown above, there's little doubt that the message, whether correct or incorrect, has gotten through. Here 73 percent agree with the proposition that tax penalties should be levied against companies that pollute, and 41 percent of these agree "strongly."

Since lower-income groups spend a high proportion of their income on basic necessities—such as food and clothing—a sales tax on these items is unfair.

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
28%	38%	2%	26%	5%

Many economists agree with the proposition above, feeling that the poor get hit harder than higher-income families. Other economists, harking from a harder school of economics, say a general sales tax is fair because when everyone pays some tax, thus equalizing the tax burden. The respondents here evidently favor the logic of the first group of economists: 66 percent agree that a sales tax on basic necessities is unfair.

EDITOR'S NOTE: You'll find that the percentages sometimes add up to less than 100. That's because we didn't include a sixth column labeled "did not answer," which rarely accounted for more than one percent of the responses.

It is wrong for either the wealthy or the poor to pay no federal income tax. Everyone should pay at least a specified part (say 10 percent) of his income as federal income tax.

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
24%	35%	4%	28%	8%

Judging from the responses you ordinarily get on the cocktail party or bridge game circuits, almost every adult feels that the wealthy invariably get away with murder on their income taxes ("18 millionaires paid no tax at all in 1966" and so on). Often, you hear the same criticism about the lower socio-economic groups, who because of their minimal incomes, are accused of "never paying their share." Unrealistic as some of these outcries are, they're evidently a reflection of concern over the heavy tax load borne by the middle-income groups: here 59 percent agree that everyone should pay a specified part of his income in taxes—an idea that, with the passing of the "minimum tax plan," has become reality for upper-income groups.

Many Americans resent filling out an income-tax form—particularly if they claim deductions. It would be simpler to have the government compute the tax (based only upon gross income and number of dependents), then bill each person accordingly. We would all end up paying about what we do now anyway—because deductions tend to cancel out among taxpayers. Also, those who cheat on deductions could no longer do so. What do you think of this plan?

8%	18%	8%	37%	28%

Despite the widely publicized agony most taxpayers suffer through each year, fighting the great 1040 battle, there seems to be no great urge to turn the task over to the government. Agreeing with the plan, 26 percent. Disagreeing, 65 percent.

If an investor buys a stock and holds it for six months, he's ordinarily taxed on only half of any gain. This is not fair. Money made by investing should be taxed at the same rate as salaries.

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
15%	28%	6%	37%	14%

If there's any place where our frontier heritage ought to carry over, it should be here: for a calculated high investment risk, you stand a chance at greater return, and you should be allowed to keep your hard-won gains. Economists generally applaud the lower tax on capital gains, but for less romantic reasons. They say the lower tax encourages investment in business, making more money available for industrial expansion and general growth of the economy.

Yet the responses show no strong feeling about this example of a high-risk, high-return venture. 51 percent disagree that a capital gain should be taxed at the same rate as someone's salary. But 43 percent agree that it should.

A "user charge" is a tax paid only by those who use a certain service or product (i.e. the gasoline taxes that support highway construction). This tax should be expanded to other logical areas—say, for instance, supporting airport operations through a direct tax on airline passengers' tickets.

Strongly agree	Agree	No feeling either way	Disagree	Strongly disagree
20%	54%	9%	12%	4%

Considering the vast array of tax reform proposals, and the fact that this one hasn't generated great interest among voters, you might expect a fairly even split at best. Yet here 74 percent agree with the plan, 16 percent disagree. This may not constitute a mandate for the "user tax," but it does reveal a heavy current of opinion running in favor of it.

As you know, municipal bonds allow local governments to raise funds for community services at low interest cost. However, buyers of these tax-free bonds generally are the well-to-do, who turn them into very advantageous investments. Municipal bonds should not have tax-free status.

15%	29%	10%	35%	11%

Municipal bonds have long been used by investors to get a low but relatively stable interest return on larger sums of money. Recently this attracted the ire of taxpayers, largely because it has become widely known that extremely wealthy investors use the bonds as one device to avoid paying taxes altogether. But the issue is less clear-cut when the tax loophole aspect is balanced against the merits of municipal bonds as a basic means of community financing. 44 percent agree that these bonds shouldn't have tax-free status, 46 percent disagree with that statement.

The influence of the community-financing factor was apparent in another question phrased as follows: "While it's true that some large investors take advantage of tax-free municipal bonds, we should continue the exemption. This source of money is more important to communities than the fact that a few people receive a tax advantage." In that case, 53 percent agreed, 37 percent disagreed—a distinct shift in responses.

WHO ARE THESE RESPONDENTS?

- They're well-educated—23 percent attended college, another 23 percent have earned college degrees, and another one-fourth have done graduate work.
- They're younger—about a third are 25 to 34 years old, a fourth are between 35 and 44, one-fifth are in the 45 to 54 range. Only seven percent are over 65.
- They're "tax conscious"—82 percent are homeowners, more than half have children under 18 and in nine-tenths of the cases, a man is head of the household.
- Men filled out more than half of the questionnaires. (Eleven percent were filled out by both the man and wife.)

Build a buffet for plug-in parties formal & informal

Simplify your entertaining with small appliances and buffets that are designed to hold them. On these four pages you'll find both formal and informal storage, plus serving ideas to suit a crowd or just your family. You can build the handsome buffets from our project plans.

For elegant suppers and large parties, you'll need the generous storage space that this buffet provides. The two outer sections contain adjustable shelves, while the middle area is left open to hold large items such as wine racks, coffee makers, ice buckets and punch bowls.

The spill-proof top of plastic laminate slides apart at the center to extend the serving area and reveal a cutout space. A standard-size plastic pan fits the cutout and holds ice for salads and beverages.

Overall dimensions are: 5 feet long, 2 feet deep, 32 inches high. The exterior features ¾-inch oak plywood, solid oak lumber and plastic laminate. Two shades of stain and a hand-rubbed finish will bring out the wood's natural beauty. The unit can be placed beside a wall or used as a room divider. The back is saw-kerfed to resemble the doors and is finished enough to look interesting from any angle.

(Below left) You can prepare a wide range of foods from spareribs to doughnuts with a kettle like this. It's a deep-fryer, roaster, cooker, food warmer and server all in one. The attractive 5-quart appliance has non-stick interior, porcelain-on-aluminum exterior and an adjustable thermostat.

(Below center) An elegant chafing dish with reliable controlled heat will make tabletop cooking easy and enjoyable. Use for flaming desserts, vegetables, casseroles, appetizers and entrees. You can prepare foods over the heating unit or over the water pan, double-boiler style.

(Below right) Try an electric knife for easier carving and slicing. This model has a blade that can turn a 90-degree angle to let you carve turkey, ham and roasts vertically or horizontally. The model has its own scabbard and handsome tray with a cord storage compartment. You can store the tray in a cabinet or mount it vertically to save space.

By Janice Heckroth and David Ashe

For large gatherings, choose an electric percolator (far left). This one brews 15 to 35 cups of coffee. A food warmer (second left) will keep rolls fresh and warm as long as the party lasts. (Right) This electric serving dish keeps food warm 45 minutes after the dish is unplugged. It's also available with a stack unit that doubles its capacity. An electric chafing dish (right back) can prepare and serve a variety of foods.

Better Homes Project Plan 4103-1. To order, see page 106.

For family fun and impromptu entertaining, this compact buffet will serve you well. Appliances and serving accessories stored in this manner are ready to use anytime they're needed.

The narrow storage space at the top is divided to hold large beverage bottles on one side and left open on the other side for flat items. Two of the storage units below have adjustable shelves that will accommodate various sizes of appliances. The middle unit can house tall items such as candlesticks, serving trays and cutting boards.

A recessed frame on top, bottom and front holds the storage units together and gives them the illusion of floating. Screen molding edges the rectangular units, and practical plastic laminate seals the top surface.

The entire unit is 4 feet long, 18 inches deep and 32½ inches high. Basic materials are ¾-inch plywood, ½-inch plywood, ¾-inch lumber, ¼-inch hardboard, plastic laminate, screen molding and gloss enamel. Hardware includes magnetic door catches and sliding door tracks.

(Below left) Can opener/ice crusher does all of its jobs automatically. It can pierce a can, open it, lift off the lid and turn itself off. It also comes equipped with a removable blade mechanism that snaps off and on for easy cleaning. The ice crusher section serves up different grades of ice from fine to coarse, with a high-speed continuous feed action that keeps up with the party. The crusher also comes in beige and copper tones.

(Below center) This adjustable toaster will toast more than just bread. By using a special setting, you can toast convenience foods such as frozen pancakes, pizza, tarts and muffins. The simplified setting guide is easy enough for your children to operate.

(Below right) Here's a combination mini oven and toaster unit that you'll find convenient and practical. Above: Make an ordinary chair look elegant by stitching a crewel cover. This original design was created just for Better Homes and Gardens readers. Warm orange, burnt sienna and green-gold petals and leaves play on a wheat-colored background that complements the richness of wood grain.

Three basic stitches make this design easy, so don't limit yourself to just one. You also can make it as a 14x14-inch pillow. Each kit contains complete instructions, needle, yarns and linen for making pillow or cover.

Opposite above: Transform ordinary or worn-looking hassocks by dressing them in stunning slipcovers.

Each cover is elasticized for easy removal. Covers made of washable fabric such as broadcloth and Indian-head will prove most practical.

Opposite below: Wake up a dull bedroom with your own exciting designs in sheets and pillowcases. They're simple to sew and only look costly.

Fabric for sheet trim, dust ruffle and pillowcases can match wallpaper or provide contrast. Easy-to-wash cotton and blends will work best.

Left: Give your slipcovers a personal imprint with trapunto designs on the seat and back. The circular design we've shown was done by machine on ribless corduroy.

A solid color in a fabric such as twill, silk or velveteen will show off the design to best advantage. If you are a novice at slipcovering, make the cover first in muslin, then tear it apart for a pattern.

Above: A bold appliqued design can turn a bedspread into a focal point. Ours features a contemporary version of an old patchwork motif.

Make the spread from a fairly stiff, ravel-resistant fabric. Our pattern includes instructions on the design and construction of the spread.

You no longer have to live near water to enjoy fish and shellfish that taste truly fresh. New methods of freezing, canning and packing now make these gourmet favorites available all over the country. Here are a dozen new ways to make them especially delectable.

Serve a shellfish spectacular

lobster

A shiny red lobster, steaming hot and ready for eating is our idea of a great meal. Our CLAM-BAKED LOBSTER, brimming with clam-laden bread stuffing, is a feast for one or two. Serve with love (and a coverall apron or bib) to someone very special. Arrange the luscious lobster on a platter embracing a lemon cup filled with melted butter. Dig in and enjoy.

oysters

Bring on an enticing entree like our OYSTERS EN BROCHETTE. The oysters, wrapped in just-crisp bacon, share skewers with whole button mushrooms and bright green pepper pieces. Brush often with lemon-garlic butter while baking, then present to your lucky diners. For a party, serve as hot hors d'oeuvres using one bacon-wrapped oyster per skewer.

crab meat and shrimp

Crab meat and crescents of shrimp nestle in LAND AND SEA SALAD. Vying for honors with the seafood are creamy avocado slices, cherry tomatoes, green onion rings and crisp mixed salad greens. Serve this dinner-size salad with a flair. Toss with the peppy Curry Dressing at the table, or serve buffet style and let everyone help himself.

Fish facts
all you need to know

shellfish and fish buymanship

SHELLFISH can be bought fresh, frozen and canned. When available fresh, it may be live, partially prepared, or cooked and ready for eating.

Fresh live shellfish: It is important that shellfish show signs of life. Crabs and lobsters should actively move their legs. Oysters and hard-shelled clams should close their shells when tapped lightly.

Partially prepared fresh shellfish: Scallops, oysters, clams and mussels that have been removed from their shells are packed in a clear liquid. Shrimps and prawns with heads removed are also considered to be in this category.

Fresh-cooked shellfish: In the refrigerated case at your market, you'll find a selection of whole cooked crabs, lobsters and shrimp, as well as their ready-to-eat meat in a number of different forms.

Frozen shellfish are available cooked or uncooked, in or out of the shell. When buying shellfish in transparent bags, look for those without freezer burn. Packages should be without frost and wrapped tightly.

Canned shellfish: Whole shellfish, chunks of meat and smoked meat of the shellfish are available in vacuum pack cans without liquid, or liquid-packed in brine or juice.

FISH may be purchased fresh, canned and frozen. Many different kinds in various sizes and forms are on the market.

Fresh whole fish: Look for fish with elastic yet firm flesh. Eyes should be bright, clear and bulging; gills should be red if not already removed. The inside of the fish should be bright pink or red. Avoid fish with a strong odor and a dull slimy skin. If scales and fins are still on fish, ask to have them removed at the market. Frozen fish should be tightly wrapped and sealed. Check to see that fish is solidly frozen without any sign of frost inside or outside the package.

Fresh fish fillets, steaks or chunks: These should be firm and have a fresh appearance. Avoid those with dried edges and a strong fishy odor.

Canned fish: Several types come in cans. Some are packed according to size of the pieces, such as tuna, which may be fancy or solid pack, flaked or grated. Others, such as salmon, are packed by species. Chinook and sockeye salmon are the deep red species which break into large chunks; pink and chum salmon break into smaller flakes. Still other fish, such as sardines and herring, are canned in variously flavored sauces such as wine and mustard.

fishmarket vocabulary

When asking for fish or fish products, use these terms:

Whole or round: Fish as it comes from the water. Before cooking, you must scale and eviscerate the fish (remove the internal organs).

Drawn: Fish that has already been eviscerated.

Dressed or pan-dressed: Fish that has been eviscerated and scaled. The head, tail and fins are usually removed. In most markets, pan-dressed refers to the smaller fish.

Fillets: Pieces of fish cut lengthwise from sides of fish away from backbone. A fillet is generally boneless. When cut from one side of the fish, it is referred to as a single fillet.

Butterfly fillet: A piece of fish cut from both sides of the same fish and held together by uncut meat and skin from the underside of the fish.

Steaks: Cross-section slices from a large, dressed fish. Slices are ⅝ to 1 inch thick with a cross-section of the backbone included.

Chunks: Cross-section pieces cut from a large dressed fish. The only bone is a cross-section of the backbone.

Portions: Pieces of fish cut from blocks of frozen fish that are bone-free. You can buy uncooked or partially cooked portions, both with a bread coating.

Sticks: Pieces of fish cut from a block of frozen fish that is bone-free. They usually come breaded and partially cooked.

refrigerator and freezer storage

Fish and shellfish are very perishable and should be kept refrigerated from the time you buy them until you use them. For longer storage, all seafood must be kept solidly frozen.

Store fresh fish tightly wrapped in moisture-vapor-proof material or in an airtight container in the refrigerator. Use within a day or two or prepare for freezer storage.

To freeze fish cuts, dip steaks or fillets in a solution of ⅔ cup salt to one gallon water for 30 seconds. Then tightly seal in freezer paper or in a freezer container. Keep packages small; family-sized portions are ideal. Separate individual servings with two pieces of waxed paper for easy separation, or wrap each portion individually. Seal and label with contents, weight or number of servings, and date. Turn freezer control to coldest setting; freeze fish quickly. Store at –10 degrees or below. Do not freeze fish longer than six months. Slightly longer storage is permissable at extremely low temperatures, but prolonged storage affects flavor, texture and color.

Cooked fish should be stored in a covered container. It can be kept in the refrigerator up to three or four days.

Shellfish should be wrapped and stored the same as fresh fish. Live shellfish must be cooked immediately and the cooked meat should be used as soon as possible. Keep shellfish refrigerated.

How to freeze shellfish depends on the variety. Shuck oysters, clams and scallops before freezing. Pack in freezer containers, leaving a ½-inch headspace. Crabs and lobsters should be cooked before freezing. Then chill, remove meat from shells, package, label with contents and date and freeze. Use frozen cooked meat within a month. Uncooked shrimp may be frozen in shells or with shells removed. Most frozen shellfish should be used within three months.

Thaw frozen fish and shellfish in the refrigerator in the original wrapper. Plan on a one-pound package taking about 24 hours to thaw. For speedier thawing, place wrapped packages under cold running water. This method takes only one or two hours for a one-pound package. Use the thawed fish within a day. Do not let frozen fish thaw at room temperature or in warm water. Do not refreeze fish. Do not thaw frozen fish portions before cooking.

Budget-Stretching Food Ideas

You are not alone if you currently are feeling the pressure of stretching the food budget at the same time of year when meal-monotony sets in.

Something can be done. Begin now by planning.

Planning is the key to making your food dollars go further. By using creativity, resourcefulness and determination as you plan, you can achieve your economy goal and pep up mealtime as well.

IMAGINATIVE PLANNING

Put your resourcefulness and creativity to use as you begin planning. Find some new recipes. Use your magazines and cookbooks. Think up some pleasing combinations of main dishes, vegetables, salads, etc., that you haven't been using. Your goal is to make out a weekly menu plan.

Evaluate your ideas. Will your family enjoy the dishes you are considering? Nothing is a bargain if your family won't eat it.

Seriously consider quantity-buying. Do you have storage and freezing facilities to handle larger buys? Can you use the entire quantity without letting any go to waste? In your weekly menu, plan for the leftovers. You may even want to create planned leftovers. For instance, there are plenty of good uses for the chicken left when you roast two instead of one—having purchased them double-packed at a special price.

CALCULATE COSTS

Take a good look at convenience foo vs. those made from scratch. Convenien foods don't always cost more in the lo run. Ask yourself about the value of yo time spent in food preparation. Does yo family have a strong preference for one the other? Sit down and calculate the re cost of each end product. Include the co of any additional ingredients the conv nience product may require and all the i gredients in your made from scratch di

If you settle for a cheaper cut of me don't expect it to taste like the more e pensive ones, and don't cook it like an e pensive cut, either. To get the most out the meat you buy, become familiar wi the beef, pork, lamb and veal carcass. Th will give you a clue as to which cuts a likely to be more tender, as well as whi cooking methods to use for best results.

Your shopping list can be built arou your weekly menu. Check to be sure yo have all the ingredients listed for the re pes you choose. Making a notation of staple item as it runs short will speed our list-making. Arrange your list to follow your regular route through your supermarket.

FIGHT IMPULSES

The shopping list is probably the best way to control impulse buying. (You will need some of that determination as mentioned earlier.) A complete list helps eliminate repeat visits to the supermarket that could result in impulse buying. Arranging the list to eliminate back-tracking within the store also helps fight the impulse to purchase an item from a tempting display you resisted the first time.

Your list should be flexible enough, however, to allow substitution of products when you discover a good buy within the store.

As the Lenten season approaches you may find seafood, cheese and egg specials. Hams may soon be on sale, too. With that creativity of yours you can find some interesting ways to serve these nutritional products.

Add some flavor tricks to wake up a family bored with food. Spark your dishes with color. Invent your own serving tricks. Serve creamed eggs or seafood in toast baskets or on toast triangles instead of the regular slice. Pineapple and citrus slices make cheerful serving trims.

Rush spring. Serve spring salad bowls. Try the spring look of chiffon cake. Easter breads can look fancy and can be created easily from refrigerated products. You don't need a special occasion for these simple tricks. Apply them to everyday meals to relieve the monotony and create an illusion of grandeur while you really are economizing.

ECONOMICAL ENTERTAINING

Don't be afraid to entertain. Having guests does not have to ruin the budget for a month. A spring breakfast or brunch will let you take advantage of many of those Lenten season specials.

"Supper" is now a great way to entertain. When you invite guests to "supper" you are not tied to the format or pattern of a dinner party. You can put a little more of "you" in the meal. You can also serve a much more economical menu. The informality of a "supper" invitation will have your friends expecting something like spaghetti, a casserole, chili or chowder.

Apply yourself now to this challenge. Plan next week's menu with creativity, resourcefulness and determination. You can begin with some of the interesting budget-stretching ideas presented below and on the following pages of Family Food Ideas.

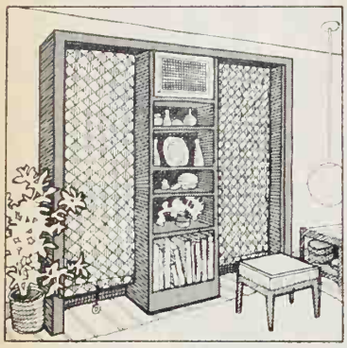
Decorating tricks with windows



Two small, nondescript windows can make a smashing impression when you treat them as one decorative unit.

Unify windows and wall space between with a ¾-inch plywood frame, 10 to 12-inches in depth. Build open shelves down the middle and fasten unit to the wall with cleats. Then choose a gaily patterned fabric and glue to roller-type window shades. Paint wooden frame a dominant color picked from the pattern of the fabric. Shelves hold books, collectibles, and tiny TV or stereo speaker.

Dream Cake. The biggest difference is in the taste.

The Dream Cake recipe not only makes mix cakes taller, they also turn out moist, fluffy, light, and rich.

What is this remarkable recipe? It calls for your favorite cake mix. Then, all you add is an envelope of Dream Whip® and two extra eggs. (You'll find the recipe at the right.)

The result is a cake so good, it will be judged superior according to these demanding criteria used by cake experts:

Score its general appearance. A Dream Cake is taller. The top is slightly rounded. The height is even at the sides. The crust will be thin and tender, with a slight sheen on top.

Check the Dream Cake texture. It will be agreeably moist and uniform throughout. Feel light and fluffy to the touch. When cut, it doesn't crumble.

Finally, try a piece for taste, the ultimate test of a great cake. A Dream Cake will be rich and fresh and slightly sweet.

The Dream Cake recipe also improves your loaf, tube and Bundt cakes. And allows you to use regular cake mix to make them.

How much better is a Dream Cake? Make one next time you bake, and judge for yourself. You'll discover how big the difference can be.

An older Worcestershire makes a wiser stew.

Add Lea & Perrins, and your stew is bound to taste better than it would with any other brand.

Because we've been making Worcestershire since 1835. From a recipe that calls for more of the good things like eschalots, tamarinds, anchovies and chili peppers.

And we age every drop in wood, naturally, like fine wine. To make a sauce that's never raw or rough. But rich, full-bodied, with far more flavor. Sure to bring out the best in stew, meatloaf, gravy, everything.

Lea & Perrins has the kind of seasoning that comes only with age.

We know what you're up against.

You tell the kids how important breakfast is.

How much the body needs food after 12 hours of not eating.

Then Johnny gulps down something cold and says he's got to rush to school.

Susie has fruit juice and insists she's not hungry.

And you keep wishing there was some way to get something good and warm inside them.

There is. Just show 'em Aunt Jemima Waffles.

Crispy and golden.

With the butter melting. And the syrup splashing down.

They're the good, hot breakfast that's quick as a cold one. Because they heat right in the toaster.

And Aunt Jemima Waffles are light. Because they're made from the original Aunt Jemima recipe.

They're the waffles more people warm up to, than any other kind.

How about tomorrow morning?

Wouldn't it do your heart good to see those breakfast-skippers eat?

The breakfast that gets 'em to eat.

ONE SKILLET DOES A DINNER MAKE...

It's sweet...it's tart...it has the hearty meaty goodness of browned pork; it's the perfect dish to take the sting out of robust appetites. The secret of its goodness is Kitchen Bouquet's special blend of delicate herbs and spices that helps seal the succulent juices inside the chops while it helps them cook dark and crisp on the outside.

Kitchen Bouquet works wonders for steak and poultry, too, broiled indoors or out. And as many good cooks know, a teaspoon of Kitchen Bouquet helps make gravies rich-looking and savory. If you've never used it, try a bottle!

PORK CHOP SKILLET

4 pork chops, trimmed
2 tablespoons honey
1 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet
4 medium-sized Louisiana yams
2 medium-sized tart apples
½ cup apple juice or cider
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg

Combine honey and Kitchen Bouquet in a large skillet; place over low heat. Turn chops to coat meat on all sides. Increase heat to medium; brown chops. Remove chops. Add a little apple juice to skillet, stirring to loosen bits. Add pared yams, cut into ¼-inch rounds, add pared and quartered apples cut into thick slices to skillet; top with chops. Pour remaining apple juice and seasoning over chops. Bring to a boil, cover and cook over low to medium heat until tender, about 45 minutes. Baste occasionally. If necessary, add more apple juice. 4 servings.

In every great cook's bag of tricks, you find the fresh lemon. How come?

Leaf through any good cookbook. From Betty Crocker to Julia Child, the fresh lemon pops up all over the place.

Why?

Because it can make the difference between good and great. It's a sign you care. And know.

The fresh, sharp taste and aroma of lemon can enhance a sauce, a dessert, a main dish. Take it from ordinary to extraordinary.

And, good cooks like the great look of lemon. Fresh, wet wedges on a platter of fish, or the rim of a glass, or nestled among vegetables are just plain stunning to look at.

So remember the Sunkist lemon. Like the experts always do.

It shows you care.

Special offer:

Would you like a copy of the new Good Housekeeping Cookbook plus the Sunkist Cookbook at a special reduced price?

You can get both for $5.00. A $10.75 value. Be sure to look for the details on the special Sunkist display at your grocers. Price slightly higher in Canada.

Chair slipcover

Yardage required: 6½ to 7½ yds. 45" fabric. For more specific measurement, measure all chair sections and add two inches at every seam line. Add 20 extra inches for tuck-in allowances (ten inches at back, five inches on sides). Allow extra yardage for welting or cord trimming and a skirt if desired.

Notions: thread, zipper for cushion cover, closing for cover (zipper, nylon tape, snap tape).

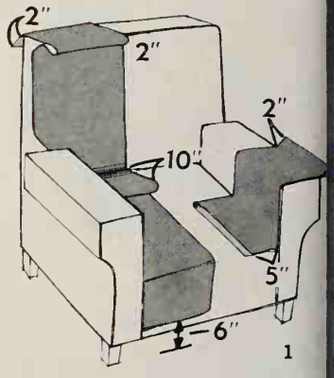
If you're not an expert at slipcovers, make one in muslin first. When you're finished, you can rip it apart and use the pieces as patterns on good fabric.

On the final fabric, work right side up when pinning the slipcover. This insures a perfect fit.

To cut fabric lengths for basic slipcover sections, start with inside back of chair. Fold fabric in half lengthwise and rest it on back of chair so it drapes down back and onto seat. Remove cushion and work on chair seat deck which will be covered with body of chair. Cushion is covered separately.

Pull fabric back so that cut edge extends two inches past far back edge of chair. Bring fabric down along inside chair back, across seat deck and down front edge. Make a mark six inches above floor. To this mark in fabric, add 12 inches (two inches for welting seam at front edge of chair back and ten inches for tuck-in allowance where deck joins back). Cut fabric at this measurement. (SKETCH 1)

Lay folded fabric across top of chair arm with cut edge extending two inches past far outside top edge and with fabric running over top of arm an down inside surface of arm Mark where arm meets deck Add five inches more for tuck-i allowance between seat deck an arm. Cut fabric at this measure ment. Do same with opposit arm. (SKETCH 1)



Place fabric with cut edg two inches above top of chai and measure from this point t six inches above floor. Cut fabri here. For outside of chair arm start with cut edge of fabric ex tending two inches beyond out side top edge of arm and mea sure to a point six inches of floor. (SKETCH 2)

Some unwritten rules on cheddar

In England, customs evolved on the proper serving of cheddar. They continue wherever fine cheddar is served. Cheddar is best freshly cut, so slice it just before serving. Bring out the full flavor of cheddar by letting it stand an hour at room temperature. Cheddar is an informal cheese, so bring it to the table for dessert—with apple pie, fruit, or from the cheeseboard. Cracker Barrel Brand Cheddar from Kraft. To know fine cheddar is to serve it well.

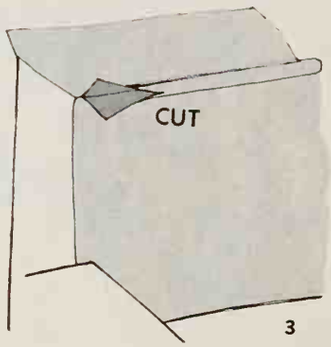
Sew up some savings

Continued

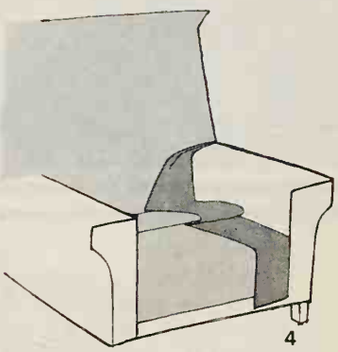
The pieces of slipcover that cover front surface of chair arms and side panels of chair back above arms are cut separately while you're fitting pattern pieces together. At this point, do the quilted design in chair back piece.

Join outside back to inside back at top seam (back edge of chair). Pin an even one-inch seam allowance here and at every seam.

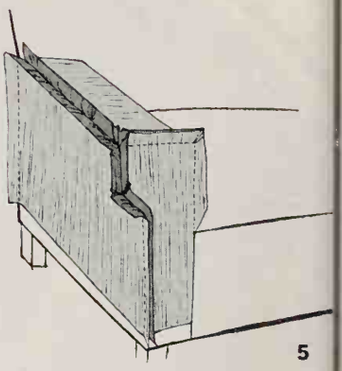
Bring front length of fabric across top of chair back. Pin a doubled one-inch fold at front edge of top to accommodate welting at this edge. When you have the seam fold pinned, cut through its center to have two pieces with a regular one-inch seam allowance. (SKETCH 3)



Bring inside back panel of fabric down inside back surface of chair and onto deck. Where back meets deck, allow ten-inch fold in fabric for tucking in. Then bring remaining fabric across seat deck and down front of chair below deck. Fabric will be wider than deck, so fold over excess width at each side of deck and down outside front. (SKETCH 4)

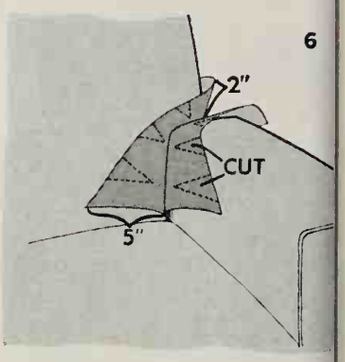


Pin outside arm section to inside arm section at top outside edge. Pin back edge of outside arm piece to chair back piece. Place piece of fabric over front arm surface and pin to outside and inside arm pieces. Cut this front arm panel, using a one-inch seam allowance on all edges. (SKETCH 5)



The side panel of the back (above chair arm) is handled the same way. Pin a piece of fabric to outside back and inside back and across top of chair back. Fit this piece to inside arm where the two join and cut a one-inch seam allowance all around this piece.

Join inside back and inside arm pieces by holding them together and making a chalk mark along the line where they meet. Trim off excess fabric, tapering allowances from two inches beyond chalk mark at top of seam to five inches at bottom. This allows for joining with tuck-in allowance. Pin these two pieces together and clip with notches two inches apart so fabric lies smoothly around curve of arm. (SKETCH 6)



Cushion cover

Place cushion on top of fabric. Chalk outline of cushion, allowing one-inch seam allowance on all sides. Cut this out and use as a pattern for cutting a second piece for other side of cushion. (Quilted design should be already worked into fabric before these pieces are measured and cut.)

Cut piece of fabric the depth of cushion boxing (side panel between top and bottom of cushion) plus two inches for seams (one on top; one on bottom). The length of this strip should measure from center of one side of cushion, around front, and to center of other side of cushion. To this measurement, add

All you need is some fabric and glue, and you've got it made.

Just buy some fabric from a 54" roll. Enough to cover your wall and the ceiling area over your bed. Allow some extra for the overhang above the foot of your bed.

Then simply glue all the fabric in place with Elmer's® Glue-All. And, if you like, border it with Mystik® Tape. (The tassels, or any other added fringe are optional.)

That's just how easy it is to make your bed.

four inches for finishing. Cut three pieces this same length and width.

Fold two of these strips in half lengthwise and pin cut edges (not the fold) of one strip to top cushion pattern piece. This folded piece should run from two inches beyond center of one side of top cushion piece to two inches beyond center of other side. Make sure folded edge is away from seam. Then pin second folded strip to bottom pattern piece of cushion. Where the two folded edges meet is where zipper should be set in.

Pin unfolded strip to both top and bottom pieces of cushion cover, using one-inch seam allowances. Fold two inches under at each end to finish the junction of front edge pieces and back zippered section. (SKETCH 7)

Sew together the pieces you've cut and fit to chair. To remove pinned slipcover from chair, remove only the pins that hold fabric directly to upholstery. Then unpin all but top two inches of one seam at back outside edge. In this seam, you'll sew zipper, nylon fastening tape, or snap fastener tape.

To cut fabric for skirt, plan on ten inches up-and-down measurement (eight inches plus one inch for hem and one inch for seam where skirt joins slipcover).

To sew skirt to slipcover, make a seam line on cover by chalking a line eight inches from floor. Stitch trim or welting along this line. Pin right side of skirt to right side of slipcover and stitch together. Hem.

Hassock cover

Yardage required for 20-inch diameter hassock: 1⅔ yds. of 36-inch fabric. Extra fabric is necessary to cover cording if self-fabric welting is used (1¼"x67" bias strip—can be pieced; add one inch to length for piecing seam).

Notions: 2 yds. medium-weight cording or 2 yds. covered cording, thread, 30 inches elastic or 2 yds. fine cording.

Cut a 21-inch diameter circle. If hassock is not standard size, place fabric wrong side up on top of hassock and trace around outside edge with chalk. Allow ½ inch extra on circle's edge when cutting.

Cut side pieces. Overall measurement should be 18" high by 66" wide—or circumference of hassock plus one inch for each joining seam (width) by height of hassock plus 5½ inches. (One-half inch seam to join side to top, four inches turned under bottom of hassock and one inch for elastic or drawstring closing.)

Cover cording for welting. If using self-fabric welt, center cording on wrong side of a 1¼" x67" strip. Fold strip in half to enclose cording and stitch fabric near cording with zipper foot.

Sew welting to top of hassock. Pin welting to circular piece, placing welting on right side of fabric with cut edges together. (SKETCH 8) Machine-stitch welting to top piece. Where welting ends meet, overlap and stitch through. (SKETCH 9)

Sew side panel to top piece. Join side pieces to form circle. Pin this to top piece, right sides together, and baste. Stitch a ½-inch seam.

Bottom of cover can be finished with elastic or drawstring. For elastic, cut a 30" piece of elastic, mark in half, then in quarters and pin to bottom edge of cover (also marked into quarters). Pin elastic on wrong side of fabric, ½ inch from outside edge. Stitch in place. Turn a double ½-inch hem to encase elastic and finish bottom edge.

For drawstring, measure ½ inch from edge and make a buttonhole perpendicular to cut edge. Size depends on size of cording used for drawstring. Turn a hem, press and stitch. Thread cording into buttonhole, through casing, and out buttonhole. Place cover on hassock and pull drawstring tight.

Quilted trapunto design

Do this before slipcover pieces for chair back and top of seat cushion are cut. When quilting is finished, cut slipcover piece to exact size. As you place design, try to center it as it will be in the finished slipcover. To be on the safe side, allow some extra fabric when blocking pieces for cover.

Materials needed: slipcover fabric, ½ yd. padding (outing flannel, sheet wadding, or light interlining), 1 yd. muslin, 1 pkg. cotton batting, thread.

Our design is a quilted circle with a scallop edge done in stuffed quilting. To duplicate this design, draw a circle on paper with a compass to the size you want. Then with the compass, divide the circumference of the circle into six equal parts. Divide once again to give 12 equal parts. Experiment with compass until you get the arc you want between each dividing point. Then draw scallops. When design is complete, transfer it to muslin with carbon paper.

The center circle of the design will be quilted by machine, so padding must be added between muslin and slipcover fabric. Cut a circle of flannel or padding fabric the size of design's inner circle and pin to muslin. Baste padding in place with diagonal lines of stitching. When padding is secured, place muslin and padding against back side of slipcover fabric (padding side in).

Pin and baste muslin and slipcover fabric together. Use light presser foot pressure, short stitches and quilting foot. A quilting attachment for the machine will help sew straight lines and even quilting squares.

Work with muslin side up to see lines of design. First sew around circumference of inside circle. Next mark one quilting line in each direction (NE to SW and SE to NW). Use a square so the lines are at perfect right angles to each other.

Sew quilting lines by machine. With a quilting attachment, just sew the first line of stitching on your drawn line, then use attachment as a guide for remaining lines.

When inside circle is quilted, sew around scallop outlines (work muslin side up). With embroidery scissors, make a small slash in the muslin backing each scallop and stuff the "pocket" with cotton. Use a knitting needle, crochet hook or a large blunt-end needle.

The amount of cotton used will determine how "puffy" your scallops are. When scallops are stuffed, hand-sew slashes.

Trim away any excess muslin around the machine-stitched design to avoid wrinkles. Proceed with cutting slipcover chair back and seat cushion pieces from your quilted fabric according to directions.

Pillowcases

Yardage required for pillowcases: (36" fabric) regular size—4 yds., queen size—4½ yds., king size—5½ yds.; (45" fabric) regular size—2 yds., queen size—2¼ yds., king size—2⅔ yds.

Yardage for sheet trim will vary, depending on size of sheet, depth required for trim, and distance between pattern repeat for matching.

When cutting fabric, make sure grain runs from top to bottom of cases, not from side to side. Cases are folded and sewn differently if using 36" fabric than 45" fabric. Using 45" fabric is most economical.

Measurements for various size cases: (36" fabric) regular size—21" wide by 72" long, queen size—21" wide by 80" long, king size—21" wide by 92" long; (45" fabric) regular size—42" wide by 36" long, queen size—42" wide by 40" long, king size—42" wide by 46" long.

To sew regular-size cases, fold in half, right sides together. If working with 36" fabric, fold 21"x72" piece of fabric to measure 21"x36". For 45" fabric, fold 42"x36-inch fabric to measure 21"x36" with fold on one side.

With 45-inch fabric, stitch one end and open side to form case. With 36-inch fabric, stitch two open sides. Use ⅜-inch seam and overcast. Hem cases by folding up 2½ inches, then folding over again for double hem. Press and stitch in place.

Sheet trim

Cut fabric strip one inch longer than width of sheet and one inch deeper than desired depth of trim. Allow an extra inch for piecing fabric.

When strip is pieced, press under ½ inch on all sides. Trim off excess on corners where turned edges overlap. Place trim strip on top of sheet. If fabric pattern has an "up" and "down," remember top edge of sheet will be the bottom edge at foot of bed when bed is made and sheet turned back. Pin down strip and topstitch.

Dinette table cover

Yardage required: 1⅓ yards of 45-inch fabric. Notions: thread and 4½ yards cording for drawstring.

Lay fabric on tabletop, wrong side up. With chalk, mark outline of table, then cut fabric 4½ inches larger than outline on all sides. Round off corners to eliminate excess fabric.

Apply applique trim next, if desired. Place cover on table, right side up. Pin on designs and baste to cloth. Straight stitch around designs and remove basting.

With zigzag satin stitch, work over straight stitch line, outlining each piece. Pull threads to inside, tie and clip.

Make buttonhole ¾ inch from cover's bottom edge and perpendicular to edge. Turn ½ inch under and press down on all sides. Turn a one-inch hem and press before stitching. Insert cording through buttonhole, thread through casing and out buttonhole. Place cover on table and draw cording tight to fit.

Dinette chair covers

Yardage needed: 2¼ yds. 45-inch fabric for two chairs and cording covering. Notions: thread, 12 snap fasteners, 2 yards elastic, 6½ yards cording to be covered with welting.

If you haven't sewn many slipcovers, fit the cover in muslin first, then rip it apart and use the pieces as a pattern.

Place fabric wrong side up on chair seat. Draw around outside with chalk. (Ball-point pen works well on muslin.) Cut fabric, allowing for ½-inch seam on all sides.

Cut boxing strip (side portion of chair seat). Length of boxing strip should be circumference of chair seat plus an extra inch for seam. If more than one piece of fabric is required to reach circumference measure, allow an extra inch for joining seam.

Boxing strip should be as deep as chair seat from top surface to bottom edge, plus two inches (½-inch seam for joining top piece and boxing strip, 1 inch to turn under lower chair seat edge and ½ inch for finishing). Cut strip to cover cording—1¼ inches wide and as long as boxing strip.

Cover welting cord by centering medium-weight cording on wrong side of bias strip. Fold strip in half to enclose cording and pin welting to top piece of chair seat. Place cut edges together with welting on right side of fabric. Stitch in place.

Join boxing strip to form one continuous piece. Pin to top piece, right sides together, and stitch.

Divide a yard of elastic in half, then in quarters. Divide circumference of boxing strip in quarters, then pin elastic to unfinished bottom edge. Attach elastic to fabric with long zigzag stitch.

Loosen screws in bottom of chair seat and attach cover. When cover is firmly in place, tighten screws.

Place fabric on front of chair back. Secure with masking tape while drawing outline. Most chairs have welting, so draw up to welting seam. Outline top and sides. Wrap fabric around bottom edge and mark where back posts connect with chair back. Mark across outside bottom edge (or edge nearest you). Follow same procedure on back of chair—two Continued

In pursuit of tranquillity, go to our wilderness rivers—the streams with enough current and enough navigational hazards to discourage casual, fast motorboating either upstream or down. These rivers—or the sections of them where civilization has not yet arrived—are among the last refuges from the mechanization of just about everything people engage in, including recreation.

Floating along, it's easy to make peace with the world and yourself. Plunging through a big rapid, with a white-knuckled grip on the gunwales and the stinging explosion of cold water in your face, is the quintessence of exhilaration. And making camp on a river beach, away from roads and trails, takes you back to that wonderful age when, in the vast unmapped regions of the New World, daring voyageurs canoed the only trails there were.

Here is a look at some of the most attractive possibilities. These are the waterways that are wild, or at least they seem to be when you are on them. Some can be navigated safely without assistance or advance know-how; on others, there is no way to make your first run, at least, without guides or even professional boatmen. Some are easy canoe cruises; others include tumultous rapids requiring special capsize-resistant craft that can survive an occasional hard collision with a rock.

Wild Rivers

Yes, we still have some wilderness waterways. Here we tell where they are and how you and your family can discover them

The north woods of Maine

For 92 miles the legendary Allagash River dashes, swirls and coasts between fringes of native forest, pressed in by pulpwood logging but protected from actual intrusion by some 200,000 acres of state-zoned buffer strips comprising the Allagash Wilderness Waterway. It takes at least ten days to paddle your own or a rented canoe from the outlet of Telos Lake to the New Brunswick border. You can hire an outfitter to equip, supply and guide you, or join a conducted 12-day trip (you still paddle, but all necessities are provided) for $310 per person. Detailed advice is offered by the State Park and Recreation Commission, State Office Building, Augusta, Maine 04330.

The Eastern Seaboard

One of the best river discoveries is Virginia's Rappahannock, which still flows, as if by some miracle, through roadless wilds for 21 miles of its course between Remington and Fredericksburg. The swift water, sometimes enclosed by wooded bluffs, is less crowded than many streams much farther from metropolitan centers, and you will have no trouble finding a solitary place to camp about halfway along the ten-hour float. You can rent a canoe at Fletcher's Boat House in Washington for $4 a day, take it to Warrenton, near the put-in point, and spend the night there before you shove off. For free maps and camping information, write to the Virginia State Travel Service, 911 East Broad Street, Richmond, Va. 23219.

The Ozarks

A map of the Ozark region of Missouri and Arkansas shows the land so blanketed with reservoirs that it is hard to believe any free-flowing rivers remain. Yet three fine ones have escaped damming, and may be permanently protected from it. In Missouri, segments of the Current River and its wilderness tributary, Jack's Fork, make up the Ozark National Scenic Riverways. On summer weekends, the gentle upper reaches of the Current swarm with canoes trundled in on car tops or rented from outfitters on the banks. There is considerably more solitude on the Jack's Fork, and on the Current downstream from the confluence, where it is bigger and faster, and more suited to guided parties in flat-bottomed johnboats. To the south, the charming Eleven Point River is even less frequented. Get detailed information from Ozark Scenic Riverways, Box 448, Van Buren, Mo. 63965, and from the Supervisor, Mark Twain National Forest, Belerest and East Trafficway, Springfield, Mo. 65802.

Mountains along the southern edge of the Ozark Plateau. Like the Current River to the north, the more remote Buffalo affords float trips lasting as long as a week.

Western Whitewater

West of the Great Plains, rivers vary greatly from place to place and season to season. At times you can navigate the spectacular Big Bend canyons of the Rio Grande on inner tubes, while in Cataract Canyon of the Colorado even the most capable old-timers must wait for the critical few weeks between springtime's unmanageable floods and late summer's rock-strewn shallows. Motors, prohibited or impractical on many eastern and midwestern streams, are commonly used, often to the detriment of the people who use them as well as those who do not. In the West, as everywhere else, hand-propelled craft still are the aristocracy of boatdom.

For watching wildlife and looking back on history, one of the great wilderness floats is on 155 miles of the upper Missouri through the scenic badlands of north-central Montana, between Fort Benton and Robinson Bridge (U.S. Highway 191). It stands to reason that you should have no trouble going down the river Lewis and Clark went up, if you have a boat with you. If not, you can rent one from Bob Singer, Box 1212, Fort Benton, Mont. 59442, or take a powerboat jaunt with him down the same stretch in as little as three days.

The Snake and its Tributaries

Where the Snake River forms the boundary between Oregon and Idaho, it flows through Hells Canyon, the deep and fabled Grand Canyon of the Snake. The biggest rapids of Hells Canyon are now stilled under three reservoirs, but its downstream half remains undammed for the time being. It is possible, if you know what you're doing, to launch a boat or inflated raft just below Hells Canyon Dam and float down the churning Snake to the lower end of the canyon. You go about a hundred miles before you encounter much civilization.

For most boaters, the way to go in is to push upstream from Lewiston, Idaho. You buck a strong current, forcing your way up through swirls and rocks in one of the nimble jet boats of Hells Canyon Excursions (Box 368G, Lewiston 83501) or in the powerful inboard that delivers mail to the canyon's scattered ranches (Rivers Navigation Company, also in Lewiston at 1115 Eleventh Avenue). All-expense overnight trips to comfortable camps as far as 90 miles up the river cost $60 to $85 per person, with half fares for children under 12.

The glorious Salmon, still called The River of No Return despite the fact that powerful boats can go up it, is just about everything you would expect a wild river to be. Big and exceedingly active, it rushes through more than 70 miles of pure mountain wilderness, between piny banks where you can expect to see (or hunt, in season) bear, deer, elk, mountain goat and bighorn sheep. Large steelhead and other trout are abundant. You can travel the Salmon in the various types of craft used on other rough Western rivers. Or let the river provide all your motive power by taking one of the float trips conducted by pioneer riverman Don L. Smith (North Fork, Idaho 83466). His roomy rubber boats are steered deftly through the chutes, rapids and falls with long, fore-and-aft sweeps.

Sweep boats are also at home on the Salmon's celebrated Middle Fork, a steep mountain torrent too confined and rocky for large-powered craft. The 117-mile navigable section of the Middle Fork is second only to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado in its challenge to the adventurous. Usually it's negotiated by commercial guides in five days at prices averaging about $260 per person. For a list of boat operators on the Salmon and on the shorter but even more remote Selway, write to the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association, Box 95, Boise, Idaho 83701.

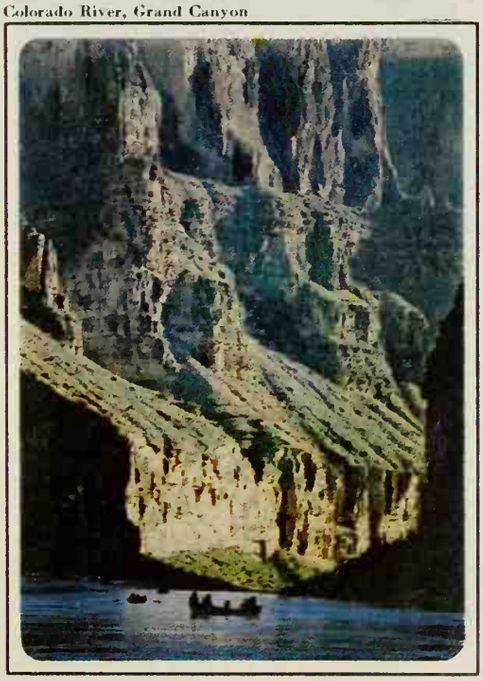
The Rogue

Oregon has several navigable wild rivers, including—if you catch them at high water—stretches of the Deschutes, John Day, Grande Ronde (shared with Washington) and Owyhee, all in the semi-desert country east of the Cascade Range. But the favorite by far—and one of the top favorites anywhere, especially for white-water drift-fishing for steelhead is the lower Rogue, where it cuts through the Coast Range as it nears the ocean. Traditional craft here are the comfortable, sturdy plywood dories developed for the rapids of the Rogue and McKenzie rivers, but inflated rubber boats are also used. The list of guides offering trips of three to five days on the wildest, most challenging part of the Rogue, between Galice and Agness, is a long one. You can get it from Grants Pass and Josephine County Chamber of Commerce, 131 N.E. E Street, Grants Pass, Oregon 97256.

An interesting innovation on the Rogue is the opportunity to paddle very buoyant inflatable canoes down 40 miles of the river yourself in a party led by a competent guide in the same kind of boat. You break the two-day trip with an overnight stay in a wilderness lodge. You can get a folder on these "Orange Torpedo Trips" (so called for the color and shape of the canoes) by writing to G. D. Bentley, P.O. Box 1111, Grants Pass, Oregon 97526.

Havasu Creek, Grand Canyon

Colorado River, Grand Canyon



California

The lower Klamath is never far from a road, and the Middle Eel has a railroad beside it most of the way. However, both streams provide good, challenging runs of two to three days in attractive canyons hemmed in by steep hills. The swift, tricky Stanislaus, with more than its share of raging cascades, still flows through a pure wilderness canyon in the gold country of the Sierra Nevada, but it won't much longer. Its last untamed stretch of 15 miles or so will be stilled when the New Melones Dam, now under construction, is completed.

The pioneer guide on these streams is Bryce Whitmore, Wilderness Water Ways, 4 Live Oak Circle, El Sobrante, Calif. 94803.

Wilderness World, an organization that conducts river trips all over the world, has an especially active 1971 schedule on California's Stanislaus. This outfit also schedules trips on the Klamath and on Oregon's Rogue River. Write 1342 Jewell Avenue, Pacific Grove, Calif. 93950.

Kanab Creek, Grand Canyon

Havasu Creek, Grand Canyon

The Sacramento River is not often thought of as a wild stream, yet much of its course between Redding and Colusa is away from the sights and sounds of civilization, and often it's walled in by tall cottonwoods thickly curtained with wild grape vines. For a large river exposed to a good deal of human enterprise, it is remarkably clean, and you can run it yourself on just about anything that will float. Don't try to cover the whole thing at one time. Without a motor, it would take a week.

The Green River

The Colorado River and its principal tributary, the Green, are in a class by themselves. Here are the biggest boatable rapids in the world, in colorful, precipitous scenery that has to be seen to be believed.

On the Utah-Colorado border just south of Wyoming, the Green River flows southward from Flaming Gorge National Recreation Area through the stunning red Canyon of Lodore. It's joined by the lovely Yampa, which alternately hurries and dawdles in meandering vales and gorges between smooth overhanging cliffs of pale Weber sandstone. Echo Park, the rivers' meeting place, gained wide attention during the bitter and at least temporarily successful fight to eliminate Split Mountain and Echo Park dams from the Reclamation Bureau's controversial Upper Colorado Basin Project.

Below the walled-in flats of Echo Park, the Green enters Whirlpool Canyon, winds peacefully through Island Park and Rainbow Park, and finally tumbles through Split Mountain in half a dozen boisterous rapids. You can choose from a variety of raft trips of one to six days, beginning either at the Gates of Lodore on the Green, or Deerlodge Park on the Yampa. One and two-day trips begin at Echo and Rainbow parks. With especially delightful exploring and camping, the Yampa float is possibly the very best of all choices for a family's first major river trip. Get tour information from the Superintendent, Dinosaur National Monument, Dinosaur, Colo., or the Utah Travel Council, Council Hall, Capitol Hill, Salt Lake City, Utah 84114.

The most remote and least frequented section of the Green River is south of Dinosaur National Monument, between the Utah towns of Ouray and Green River. The thing most likely to shake your faith in the judgment of pioneer river explorer John Wesley Powell is that he named the sylvan heart of this majestic region The Canyon of Desolation. There is one drawback: Mosquitos are worse in this stretch than anywhere else in the Colorado system. But there is plenty of compensation, if only in the sense of proprietorship you feel as you drift along day after day with the woods, wildlife, riffles, clear side streams, deserted pioneer ranches, and noble cliffs, spires and arches all to yourself. With sound preparation, you can do this on your own, in a week. To go with a conducted group, join one of the outings of the Sierra Club, 1050 Mills Tower, San Francisco, Calif. 94104.

The Mighty Colorado

The placid Green oxbows its way through rising flat-topped terrain to join the Colorado in Canyonlands National Park. Upstream from the confluence, both rivers are calm enough for ordinary canoes. In fact, you can rent canoes for ten days or so of lazy cruising down the Green, and then be met by a powerboat for the shorter run back up the Colorado to U.S. Highway 6 at Moab. Downstream from the confluence is Cataract Canyon, no place to be without expert guidance.

Upstream from the confluence, part of the Colorado's canyon is scarred by a highway from Moab to a potash mine on the north bank. Although some mining roads do reach and parallel the Green River in places, its winding course through Labyrinth and Stillwater canyons is much longer than that of the Colorado in Canyonlands National Park and it makes a better trip. For further information, write the Superintendent, Canyonlands National Park, Moab, Utah.

The Grand Canyon

The Colorado's current dies in Cataract Canyon, where dead and dying treetops projecting above the water indicate the upper limits of Lake Powell. Below Glen Canyon Dam, 185 miles downstream, the water discharged from the power plant flows freely through the Grand Canyon until it reaches the doldrums of upper Lake Mead, which extends into the lower end of the Canyon for 40 miles. The river's course through the Grand Canyon measures 280 miles, but you go another 32 miles down Lake Mead before you come to the landing at Temple Bar.

You simply do not go through the Grand Canyon without knowledge and skill. The National Park Service, which controls the steadily growing river traffic there, is extremely reluctant to issue a permit to anyone who has not experienced the Grand Canyon's unique hazards by going through at least once with a seasoned guide.

It is the longest wilderness waterway in the world, and its total challenge to the boater amounts to at least the sum of the problems presented by all the rest of American white water combined. At river level, the Canyon is exceedingly rocky, thorny, hot in summer, and sometimes so windy you can't see for flying spray and sand. Good campsites are few and heavily used. The rapids, to the first-timer at least, are fearsome to hear, see and run. Yet often the people who are quick to speak of the inner Grand Canyon as a hostile environment return to its churning brown river again and again. Spend two or three weeks in its shadowy gorges and you, too, may be captivated once and for all.

Many tour operators take passengers through the Grand Canyon; some 9000 people rode the river last season. All of the commercial guide outfits except one use inflated rafts. You can hasten through the Canyon on a bulging "baloney boat" in as little as 8½ days, for $300 or more, depending on which operator you choose. Get a list of names and addresses from the Superintendent, Grand Canyon National Park, Grand Canyon, Ariz., and then send for their descriptive literature.

Available to the public for the first time this year will be 19-day trips in the decked-over, unsinkable dories that have become well known through Sierra Club films and publications. You can ride every rapid in these spirited rowboats, which will be taking small parties on leisurely 19-day cruises through the Grand Canyon from May through October. For complete information, write to Grand Canyon Dories, P.O. Box 99423, San Francisco, Calif. 94109.

The only other completely motorless operation, using small (10-man) rafts, is Gooch-Wendt Expeditions, 1310 20th Street, Santa Monica, Calif. 90404.

The Grand Canyon voyage is without question the trip of a lifetime, so make your choice carefully. For one thing, you will miss the secluded natural wonders away from the river if you don't have time to hike to them. And the binoculars you take along won't be of much use if you're on a craft so crowded and noisy it scares the wildlife away.

San Francisco's new ferry service

"Congratulations! By riding this ferry today you have done your part to make the air cleaner for all of us."

So reads a leaflet distributed at the ferry station in San Francisco. The Golden Gate Bridge Transportation District has recently revived ferry service between Sausalito and San Francisco, after causing its demise with the completion of the Golden Gate Bridge some 30 years ago. Eventually, though, they realized that one way to reduce traffic jams on the overloaded bridge would be a passenger ferryboat—and the commuters are delighted with it.

You will be, too. In half an hour, the ferry brings you across the Bay to Sausalito, where you may shop, browse and have a good meal at one of the excellent waterside restaurants before returning to the city.

The boat leaves the Ferry Building at the bottom of Market Street, heads out into the Bay not far from the Oakland Bay Bridge, then turns northwest along the big piers where you'll see big ocean liners and Navy ships moored. The view of the city is everchanging as the boat moves across the waters, passing forbidding Alcatraz Island currents. The usually rough waters and wind cause spray, so take a windbreaker or coat along.

One-way fare is 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for youngsters. There is snack bar service on morning runs, bar service on afternoon runs.

For information on the ferry's schedule, call 415-982-8833.

Apache Trail wild flowers

From March to May, the deserts and hillsides of Arizona teem with wild flowers, creating a show of color that's worth a special trip. Even in dry winters, localized showers bring out islands of color on the desert floor. You'll see poppies, buttercups, lotus, shooting stars, lupines, mallows, delphiniums and many others.

One of the best ways to see this display is by driving the world-famous Apache Trail, which winds through gorgeous mountain scenery along the reservoirs of the Salt River.

Go east from Phoenix on Highway 60 to Apache Junction, where the trail begins. Then drive northeast on Route 88. After you pass Canyon Lake and the little town of Tortilla Flat, the paved highway turns into a gravel road.

If you're a "flatlander," you might find the going down Fishcreek Hill a little scary, but otherwise it's a fairly easy drive that takes you past Apache Lake to the Theodore Roosevelt

Is Nevada great for Western lore?

Bet on it.

The old West holds a warm place in every American's heart. In fact the whole world is enchanted with the legends of gunfighters, mining booms and wagon trains.

Nevada is the last refuge of Western lore. It's as close to "the way it was" as you can get. Not a movie facade, but tradition.

The tracks of those big Conestoga wagons are still imbedded in rock along some old trails. Cowboys aren't for decoration. They're part of the state's ranching economy. The Indian holds on hard to his heritage. A rodeo still draws more people in Nevada than a world figure. The Cartwrights may be fiction, but the land of their adventures is still wild and beautiful.

A map of Nevada's 80 ghost towns will keep you busy for weeks. But you don't have to go looking in remote places for Western lore. It's everywhere. On the busiest city streets you rub shoulders with it. On the open road there's no speed limit, but you'll find yourself slowing down to that time over 100 years ago.

If you want to know what the West was like, come to Nevada and see the way it is. You won't forget it. Bet on it!

of man's favorite retreats for 20,000 years. North America's earliest known resident, the Sandia Man, lived here in mountainside caves while he hunted for bison, mastodon and mammoth. Eight or nine thousand years ago, the prehistoric Folsom Man called these lofty, pine-forested peaks home.

The Spanish under Coronado came here in the early 1500s looking for the fabled Seven Cities of Gold. They found no cities, but discovered 20 Indian pueblos in the immediate vicinity. Eleven such pueblos are still inhabited today.

It was the Spanish who gave the mountain its name. Seeing the red glow of sunset on the pink granite cliffs of its precipitous western side, they called it Sandia—or "watermelon" in Spanish.

Today this famous landmark, which towers forbiddingly over the floor of the Rio Grande Valley, is Albuquerque's favorite playground.

The 2.7-mile-long Sandia Peak aerial tramway, one of the longest in the world, lifts you silently and swiftly over awesome spires and rugged canyons, once seen only by hunters and rock climbers. Between the second tower and the top, you'll skim across one and a half miles of clear, unsupported cable. A thousand feet below, you can spot deer and, if you have keen eyesight, the elusive Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep. The mountain is also the home of black bear, cougar, mountain lion, lynx, and antelope, but you'll be fortunate if you spot these residents. It's not unusual, however, to hear coyotes yelping in the evening around the lower tram terminal.

This ten- to fifteen-minute ride ends at the very top of Sandia Peak with an 11,000-square-mile panorama. It's especially impressive at night, when the lights of Albuquerque, Santa Fe, and Los Alamos sparkle on the valley floor.

You can dine at the Summit Restaurant, or, if you are a winter visitor, put on your skis, pick your run, beginner to expert, and plummet through the heavily wooded eastern slopes of the mountain to the Sandia Peak Ski Lodge. There are two chair lifts and three poma lifts to bring you up again.

As a testament to New Mexico's sunny, shirt-sleeve skiing, Sandia holds its annual ski-tennis tournament the second weekend in March. Couples play tennis in the morning in Albuquerque and ski in the af-

Ski the Big Mountain

Every morning at six, the Burlington Northern's "Empire Builder" rolls into the still-sleeping village of Whitefish, Mont., bringing skiers from Seattle, Vancouver, Portland and Spokane to the vast uncluttered slopes of Big Mountain, right next to Glacier National Park.

It's a great way to go, particularly when the ski area is offering one of its many "Ski Ball" package tours. Then you find the mainliner filled with scores of skiers in a festive mood. Outside, the ski patrol and ski school staff are waiting to whisk you up to the ski area just a brief 20 minutes away.

Big Mountain has more than 20 miles of powder and packed slopes, thousands of vertical feet of skiing, six lifts and practically no waiting lines. The friendly informality of the staff practically guarantees you a good time.

It's economical, too. You get five nights' lodging and meals, six days' unlimited use of all lifts and all transportation for as little as $140.40 from Seattle, $148.40 from Portland and $127.75 from Spokane.

There also are weekend packages, including one night's lodging, meals, two days' use of lifts and transportation beginning at $64.60 from Seattle, $72.60 from Portland and $45.95 from Spokane.

Your travel agent or Burlington Northern passenger representative can give you details.

you enter and witness several live roosters in a crowing contest, you know you're in for a new kind of museum experience.

Turn right down the first corridor, and you're confronted with a giant see-through incubator, where 150 baby chicks peck through their shells each day. And that's just the beginning of a push-button, pull-lever world of knowledge and fun.

You can play tick-tack-toe with a computer, follow a phone call from Tokyo to London via cable, radiowaves, telephone lines and satellite, or be, simultaneously, in an airport control tower and the cockpit of an airplane as the pilot comes in for a night landing. You can listen to your heart beat and see it at the same time. You can trace mathematics from its earliest beginnings in ancient Asia to the far-out concepts of our space age.

Next, you can visit a transparent woman who explains, in her own husky voice, the workings of her body as each section lights up. You can trace the autonomic nervous system in an eight-foot-high Neuroman, whose loud heartbeat changes in tempo to certain nerve impulses. Or, you can send a miniature train around a moebious band (a twisted, continuous, one-surface strip), start a jet engine, find out how your automobile really works. These and many other mysteries of everyday life are explained in intriguing, meaningful ways.

And when your hands get tired of pushing buttons and pulling levers, you can relax in the white gazebos of the huge rose garden that fronts the entrance of the museum, or picnic in the adjacent park.

The museum is open everyday from 10 to 5 except on Christmas and Thanksgiving.

WESTERN TRAVEL DIRECTORY

work of the lodge's terraces to its steeply pitched roof of cedar shakes, it is a unique monument to Oregon craftsmen and artists.

The 1000-pound door swings open to a child's touch, and you enter a world of warmth and beauty, with flames roaring in the three large fireplaces of a tremendous hexagonal chimney. Through the large windows to the north, you can watch skiers cutting arcs in the pristine whiteness of Mt. Hood.

Take a chairlift ride for a better view of the lofty peaks of the Cascade Range to the south, or ride a Sno-cat up to the 10,000-foot level.

The mountain, with its nine living glaciers, is one of the most frequently climbed peaks in the world. Even the casual hiker can spend an entire summer hiking trails on and around Mt. Hood, reveling in breathtaking views, tremendous canyons and the abundant wild mountain flowers. It's a special haven for campers and fishermen, too.

A visit to the Shasta Caverns

A visit to the Lake Shasta Caverns is one of the best family side trips off Interstate 5 between Portland and San Francisco. Turn at Shasta Caverns Road 16 miles north of Redding, Calif. It's just two miles to the reception center. Tickets are $3.00 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12 years old

A catamaran called "The Cavern Queen" will take you on a 15-minute cruise across the blue waters of Lake Shasta. When you arrive at the other side, a small bus will transport you 800 winding feet up a mountainside with excellent scenic views of the area, as well as some dizzying vistas straight down.

Temperatures inside the limestone caverns are a cool and constant 58 degrees. Paved walkways and stairs bring you easily and safely from one beautiful chamber to another. The guided tours are unhurried and relaxed, giving you ample time to enjoy the colorful underground magic of crystal-studded stalactites and stalagmites, milky white flowstone and unusual and graceful forms of helictites.

Though open to the public for less than seven years, the caverns played a role in Indian legends of the region, and scientists find them excellent hunting grounds for fossils. You can still see the inscription left by the first white man to explore the cave in 1878.

At present, the most spectacular room open to the public is the almost 100-foot-high Cathedral Room with its 60-foot high yellow and white stone draperies. A new room discovered in 1964 may be open to the public for the first time this summer. Approximately 60 feet wide, 100 feet high and almost circular, the room contains all types of formations in many colors. One wall is 100 by 12[illegible] feet of solid flowstone, cascading down in a glistening white frozen waterfall. Remember to bring your camera. The caverns are very photogenic, and promise to get even better. They are still largely unexplored, and no doubt new rooms will be opened someday. ■

Eating here is half the fun.

Back around 1640, old Norman recipes met native North American foods for the first time, and something very soulful happened: French-Canadian cuisine. Perdrix aux Choux. Tourtiere. Cretons a la Canadienne.
Even if you're not much of a gourmet when you arrive in Montreal, one or more of the city's 5,000 restaurants will transform you into one, we promise you. Perhaps this transformation will take place at L'Auberge le Vieux Saint-Gabriel, where specialties of the house are prepared over charcoal in the 200-year old fireplace. Perhaps it will all happen in a restaurant that resembles an old Breton farmhouse kitchen, with a menu that features 81 different kinds of crepes. Or in the formal, gold damask surroundings of the Chateau Champlain's Le Neufchatel.
A "cook's tour" of Canada will reveal all kinds of regional delicacies. World-renowned seafoods like Restigouche salmon from New Brunswick. Malpeque oysters from Prince Edward Island. Digby scallops from Nova Scotia. Winnipeg goldeye from freshwater mid-western lakes. King crab from our Pacific coastal waters. Best enjoyed on some romantic Vancouver rooftop, while you contemplate the magnificent panorama spread out beneath you. And watch the sun slowly sink over your waistline.

Try the guitar for an ice-breaker

The guitar is more than just a social ice-breaker at parties—it's a musical ice-breaker, too. When Johnny has had it with music lessons for his violin or French horn, a guitar could be just the instrument to rekindle his interest in music—all music. Music educators know that children and instruments are mismatched occasionally. When this happens, any musical talent that's there is sidetracked if not permanently derailed. But introduce an instrument that's "in" with the group, and the response can be amazing.

Many parents and music teachers are beginning to realize that one of man's oldest musical instruments—the guitar—very often rekindles a child's enthusiasm for self-made music. Once they're interested in a guitar, students go on to involvement with other instruments too—frequently with the ones they've rejected before.

The guitar is as much a part of today's younger generation as the ukulele was a part of the 1920s. Today's teens are so taken with the guitar that one of every three amateur teen-age musicians is a strummer.

The popularity of the guitar is going a long way toward changing the old-fashioned notion that the guitar is for show and not for acquiring the basics of music. Actually, the guitar is as versatile musically as the piano, and it also offers something many instruments don't, portability.

The guitar can provide all the basics needed for an excellent start in instrumental music. One of the easiest instruments to grasp (mentally and physically) the guitar can encourage a beginner or a "switcher" by letting him master some simple chords in a few lessons. Once he's actually creating music on the guitar, he'll feel a sense of accomplishment that quite often carries over to another instrument.

Schools across the country are recognizing the usefulness of the guitar in teaching music fundamentals. In some schools, pupils in the fourth and fifth grades are plunking tunes after a few lessons.

In Oceanside, New York, guitar instruction has been going on for several years in the seventh through twelfth grades. The program was initiated t teach music fundamentals, n necessarily guitar. A class f folk guitar is also very popu

Rocky Mountain WEST

4 great states with the uncommon in common

This year, make your vacation more than more-of-the-same. Reach out for new thrills in a world that's new to you. Colorado. Montana. Wyoming. Utah. The Rocky Mountain West. The Wild West — tamed by time, but not too much. Home, still, of cowboys and Indians. Land of the great National Parks — Glacier, Mesa Verde, Bryce Canyon, Rocky Mountain, Zion, Yellowstone, Grand Teton and Canyonlands.

Lose the crowds in the vast stillness of a mountain forest. Or find them in lively, year 'rounc vacation spots. See deer on the meadows. Catch trout from the streams. Ski and hunt in season. Rodeos, pageants, festivals — the calendar is loaded with excitement. And the air, cooled by the mountains, is clear and sweet.

Does all that sound inviting? Say that you'll come.

Nothing can match the flavor of homegrown vegetables—so start digging! Here are ten most-likely-to-succeed vegetables, all suitable for small areas. Grow them in rich soil and space plants as packet directs.

Asparagus. Once established, asparagus will produce well for a decade or more with little maintenance. For best results plant a rust-resistant variety such as Mary Washington. Choose sturdy two-year-old nursery-grown crowns with large buds, and let the plants build up strength the first year. Then harvest two weeks the second year, the third season up until June 1, and until the middle of June after that. When spears reach six to eight inches, pick daily, snapping off at ground level. At end of harvest, let the spears soar into feathery ferns to store energy in crowns for next season's production.

Bush snap beans. These are easy to grow and are available in many disease-resistant varieties. Bush beans need no staking and mature a crop in seven weeks. To insure ample yield over a long period, keep new beans picked as soon as they reach six or seven inches. For a summer-long harvest, sow one row as soon as weather warms and another about three or four weeks later—and up to July 15 for a fall crop. Avoid disturbing bean plants when foliage is wet—you may spread disease spores.

Beets. Sow two packets. In early spring, sow an early variety that will be ready in 45 days. In early summer, sow a late variety to provide baby beets and greens for summer's end and a mature crop to dig for fall. Beets are best when three inches in diameter. Harvest leaves as required, but leave enough to nourish each plant.

Brussels sprouts. Sow seeds directly in the ground outdoors in late spring and harvest through the fall. Buds form in axils of the leaves along the central stem with lower ones maturing first. When the lower sprouts approach one and a half inches in diameter, watch lowest leaves for first indication of yellowing. Then break off these leaves and remove sprouts to capture the most delicate flavor.

Cucumbers. They're popular for pickling and salad makings. Pick as soon as the cucumbers reach five inches and they'll produce generously over a long period. You can expect the first picking in eight or nine weeks. Select wilt- and mosaic-resistant varieties—black-spined ones if you want them for pickling, and white-spined for summer feasting. Seed is usually sown when the soil warms in spring, but you can get an early start by sowing some seeds indoors a couple of weeks before the usual time for outdoor sowing. Use two seeds to a three-inch pot. Select strongest seedling and cut off the weaker one. Plant pot and all when soil warms. To minimize pest problems, avoid planting in the same spot each year.

Lettuce. To fill the salad bowl from spring through fall, plant early leaf and loose-headed types of lettuce as soon as frost is out of the ground. You can expect a crop in 40 days with lots of thinnings, which can be used for early salads and to cook as "spinach." At the same time, plant crisp romaine (or cos lettuce) and it will be ready when early types are gone, or bolt in summer heat. Sow a row of the early type in late summer for fall crop.

Parsnips. These delicious vegetables need a long growing season, but you can dig them until the ground is hardened by frosts. The remainder of the roots can be left in the ground for early spring use. Parsnips are hardy, and their flavor is sweeter in spring. Seed germinates slowly so mark the row for identification by mixing in fast-germinating radish seed for a two-crop row. Radishes mature quickly and will be used up while the parsnips are still small.

New Zealand spinach. Garden-fresh spinach is a delight. This variety tolerates warmer weather than the ordinary kind. You can pick tender tips all season until the first frosts hit. New Zealand spinach is less particular about soil than true spinach and needs less washing. Midspring is the time to plant, but first soak seed for 48 hours. You can harvest in about ten weeks.

Squash. Zucchini is the tastiest of the summer squashes. It can be baked, boiled, broiled, stewed with other vegetables, used as a raw dip stick or chopped into salads—and leftovers freeze well. Sow seed at bean-planting time. Expect first picking in about six weeks. You'll get lavish production until frost if you keep picking all fruits as soon as they're five inches long. Butternut is the sweetest of the fall squashes and it keeps for months if stored in a dry room at 45 to 50 degrees. Plant between tall vegetables, such as Brussels sprouts, to shade the ground, keep down weeds, and conserve space. Cut fruits in fall with two inches of stems attached for storage. They make a great pie.

Tomatoes. These are expensive to buy even in season. With small effort on your part, your plants will produce a large continuous crop until frost. You can gather mature green fruit before a hard freeze and they'll ripen indoors. Dark green ones make a good relish and piccalilli. For early fruits to use in salads, grow cherry tomatoes in containers. The main crop of standard tomatoes will be ready after midsummer if you set out four to six plants (12 to 18 if you can or make juice) as soon as soil feels warm. Pink and yellow kinds are less acid than red ones. Staking the plants allows increased yield and conserves garden space. By each plant, set a 2x2 stake six feet long and drive it 18 inches into the ground. As stems grow during the season, tie them to the stakes. Keep plants picked of all ripe fruits. ■

A well-designed driveway

If you're planning to build a new driveway or redo your o one, why not make it extra attractive as well as functiona This example provides some pointers.

When you look at the front yard above, your eye is ca tured by the symmetrical arrangement of greenery a walkways. Going almost unnoticed, however, is the careful camouflaged driveway concealed within the formal patte of squares and rectangles (below).

The driveway becomes an integral part of the patterne landscaping by doubling as borders for the ruffled patch of dichondra. To further the effect, the board-and-batte gate, which leads to the backyard, is color matched to t color scheme of the house. Behind the gate, a large concret parking pad provides an ideal spot to keep a boat or camp trailer out of sight.

When you're working out a design for your own driveway you might consider using materials other than concrete Asphalt or gravel, for example, can be used for an interestin texture effect; 2x4s placed alongside will add sharp definitio to your arrangement. For a really unusual treatment, co sider either cobblestones or bricks set in a bed of compacte sand and arranged in geometric patterns.

A scrub brush is a very durable thing.
ut put one up against our new latex paint, and our new latex paint will still look like new.

800 durable colors.

Not long ago, Wards created a new latex paint. Life Paint. It has all the ingredients of other latex paints, we just manufactured it a little differently.

So it would clean a little easier.

If you've ever tried to scrub a crayon mark off the wall, you know the problems with flat latex paint.

By the time you've finally scrubbed the mark off, you've scrubbed a shiny spot on. (Which looks worse than the crayon mark.)

And unless you want to scrub the whole wall to make it shiny, you live with spots in front of your eyes until you can repaint.

The problem is, all flat latex paints dry to form a protective coating. When you scrub the wall you polish the coating. The more you scrub, the shinier it gets.

But because we made the coating in Life Paint slightly tougher, we expected it to resist slightly longer.

Slightly longer.

1,824 scrubbings later the coating was still not polished. The paint looked like new.

The scrub brushes were another matter. Apparently they just don't make them like they used to. But then, we don't make latex paint the way we used to.

It's finally cleanable.

Which makes all other qualities of latex seem somewhat dull by comparison.

Like covering in one coat.

Which we do.

And not dripping.

Which we don't.

And drying quickly.

We do. And not smelling.

We don't.

So, if you want to paint your walls with something revolutionary, pick one of our 800 different colors of Life Paint. For their durability.

We didn't test all 800, but then they're all made the same. And we couldn't afford any more scrub brushes.

Smart ways to buy meat

Cash in on your grocer's weekly meat specials. He sometimes uses low prices on a few items as a magnet to get you into the store. As the following examples show, his specials offer an excellent way for you to save money when you buy for your freezer or locker.

Beef Chuck Pot Roast

Usually the blade cuts of meat carry low price tags and are the best value. However, in some areas it may be the "California roast," which is really a blade pot roast without the blade bone and surrounding meat. Most of the cuts have some boneless meat at one end which can be removed and still leave a pot roast large enough for the family. For variety, cut off the boneless meat and cook these pieces as individual Swiss steak, or cut into cubes for beef stew, stroganoff, or a favorite Chinese main dish.

Ground Beef

You can purchase ground beef, ground chuck, ground round, and in some markets, ground sirloin, all at different prices. For juiciness and flavor, your best buy is frequently the ground beef selling at the lowest price because it contains enough fat to give it a good cooked flavor.

Frankfurters, Sausage, and Table-ready Meats

These are all good values because there is no waste—every bite is edible—and there's something to suit every taste. Often you'll find that the unsliced varieties of luncheon meats are better values than their sliced counterparts.

Country-style Spareribs

You'll find them in most markets—they're meaty pieces from the blade end of the pork loin. When compared with the edible portions of meat on spareribs and back ribs, they are a very good value.

End-cut Pork Chops and Pork Roasts

The end cuts or first cuts, whether sold as roasts or chops, represent about half the weight of the pork loin. The retailer usually sells these cuts at cost. The remaining half, consisting of center chops, thus stands the cost of merchandising the whole loin. There is slightly more fat and bone in the blade and sirloin chops and roasts, but they will be just as tender as the center cuts. From the standpoint of cooked edible lean meat, the end cuts represent by far the best value. Buy several when on special and freeze.

Smoked Ham Half

The butt half of a smoked ham contains substantially more lean edible meat than the shank half. You can pay up to 15 cents a pound more for the butt half, and still end up with a lower net cost per pound for the boneless edible meat.

Rib Roast

Usually the first five ribs are divided into a three-rib roast and a two-rib roast. Both are good, but the three-rib roast has the edge since it contains none of the cap or cover meat. Consider buying several. Use them as they are, or for variety, ask the retailer to saw one of them into steaks. If you are planning an outdoor barbecue, ask your meatman to remove the "eye" from as many rib roasts as you'll need for the party and grind the lean meat from around the bones for immediate use or for the freezer. The "eyes" can be roasted on the rotisserie or cut into delmonico (rib eye) steaks for grilling over the coals.

Porterhouse, T-bone Steaks

When these steaks are on sale, buy a good supply. Then at home, remove the T-bone and cut each steak into three pieces: tail, tenderloin steak, and top loin steak. The top loin steak is also known as a Kansas City steak, New York cut steak, strip steak, and in many restaurants and clubs, it's called sirloin steak. Package the meat so you can serve tenderloin steaks for one meal, top loin steaks for another meal, and the tail pieces (braised or stewed) for still a third.

Sirloin Steaks

Buy several when on special. Remove the bone and cut the remaining boneless meat into individual portions. Wrap enough portions in each package for one meal and freeze.

Wrapping Suggestion

Before putting meat in the freezer, wrap it in moisture-vapor-proof material such as foil and eliminate as much air in the package as possible. Label each package with contents, weight and date.

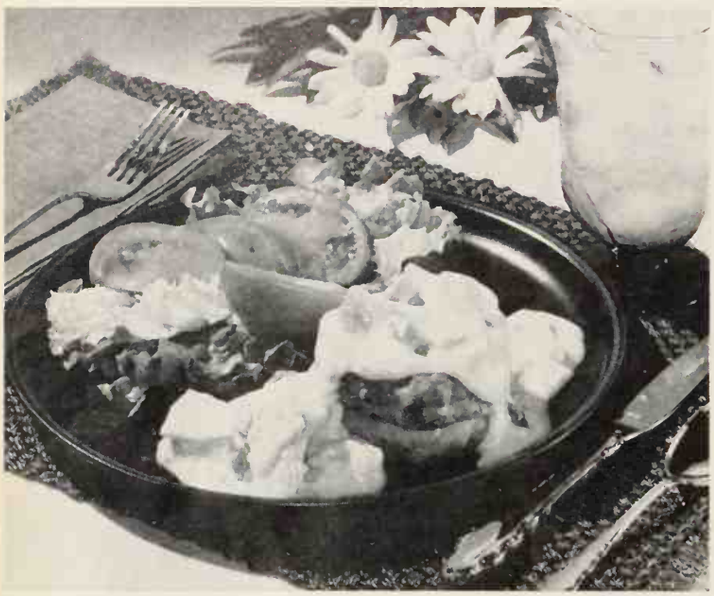
Cheese specials

Tantalizing flavor—that's what cheese can add to your main dishes. Many cheese varieties are available, from mild to nippy; some cheeses come ready-shredded to save you time. We've gathered some especially tempting recipes here.



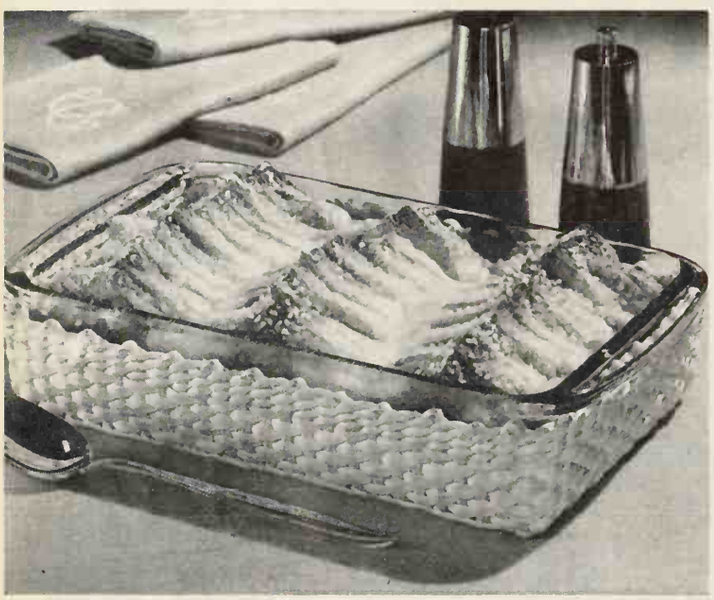
Photographs: Photography, Inc.

Tangy Tuna

Tuna and tangy cheese in cream sauce—a zesty combination that's also good over toast or biscuits—

- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1¾ cups milk
- ½ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ⅓ cup grated parmesan and romano cheese
- 1 6½- or 7-ounce can tuna, drained
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- 6 patty shells

Melt butter or margarine in saucepan. Stir in flour. Add milk, worcestershire sauce, salt, and pepper. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, till mixture is thick and bubbly. Cook 1 minute more. Stir in grated cheese. Cook over low heat till cheese melts, about 1 minute. Add tuna and pimiento; heat through. Place heated patty shells on serving plates; spoon in tuna mixture. Makes 6 servings.



Swiss Cheese Bake

An easy-to-make supper dish—richly flavored with deviled ham and Swiss cheese—

- 4 ounces process Swiss cheese, shredded (1 cup)
- 1 4½-ounce can deviled ham
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 8 slices bread, toasted

- 2 cups milk
- 4 slightly beaten eggs
- 1 teaspoon sesame seed

Mix Swiss cheese, deviled ham, and mustard. Spread mixture on four slices of toast, using approximately ½ cup for each slice. Top with remaining four slices of toast. Quarter sandwiches diagonally; arrange in three rows in 10x6x1½-inch baking dish, standing crust side down. Beat together milk and eggs; pour over sandwiches. Sprinkle sesame seed over top. Bake in a moderate oven (325°) for 50 to 55 minutes. Makes 5 or 6 servings.

Corn Rarebit

Corn and tomato juice make this an extra-special rarebit—and toaster-style corn muffins double the good corn flavor—

- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
- ¼ teaspoon chili powder
- 1 cup tomato juice
- 1 8-ounce can (1 cup) whole kernel corn, drained
- 4 ounces process American cheese, shredded (1 cup)
- ½ cup sliced ripe olives

- 4 toaster-style corn muffins, toasted

In saucepan, cook green pepper and onion in butter or margarine till tender but not brown. Blend in flour and chili powder. Stir in tomato juice and corn, blending well. Cook, stirring constantly, till thickened. Stir in shredded cheese and olives; cook and stir over low heat till cheese melts. Serve on toasted corn muffins. Makes 4 servings.

Banner Bathrooms

The compact size of the average bathroom needn't suppress your imagination or limit your decorative efforts. You can easily achieve a great many handsome effects. Experiment with a wide variety of tools: mirrors, decorative tile, a distinctive wallpaper or fabric pattern, unusual lighting fixtures and accessories and, perhaps, a touch of greenery. Even your choice of towels can make a decorative point. This good-looking trio of baths is convincing evidence of how much personality you can pack into one small room.

Top: Latticework panels over mirrored walls and ceiling give this tiny bath the quaint look of an old-fashioned garden. Panels were constructed of lattice molding and attached with magnetic catches. To clean the mirrors, simply lift out the individual panels, then snap back into place. Cabinet base was faced with 1x2 strips and painted a soft green. Two picture frame lights, installed below lavatory counter, illuminate green onyx top for a translucent glow.

Center: Don't be fooled by the country charm of this his 'n her bath. It's filled with 20th century efficiency. Overscaled wallpaper pattern in turquoise and brown sets the color scheme which is echoed in shag carpet and wooden cabinets. Placed at right angles, the double vanity accommodates two people within a small area, minus customary confusion. Funnel-shaped copper light fixtures support the rustic look as does the copper container with its dried arrangement.

Below: A counter top and backsplash of mosaic tile inspired this unusual bath. The homeowner/artist put her talented brush to work and created a series of trompe l'oeil panels for cabinet door fronts. (To get a similar effect, use a trompe l'oeil wallpaper design.) Tasseled valance was hand-painted at ceiling level for another dimensional effect. The lighting is artful too: a matching pair of china-based lamps placed on matching wall-hung wooden shelves.

Beautyrest makes 4 firmnesses to support all your softnesses.

s great to be soft and sexy and curvy in all the right places. The one wrong ace to be curvy is your spine. You want it to be straight.

And the best way to keep it that way is by sleeping on the firm mattress at supports it properly. Beautyrest.® And because everyone has a different ea of how firm a mattress should be, Beautyrest now comes in four firm-esses. Besides Normal Firm there are three Back Care models: Extra Firm, xtra Firm Plus, and Super Firm. But firmness alone can't support you prop-ly. That's the difference between a Beautyrest and hard, "boardy" attresses. It's firm, but flexible.

Beautyrest support comes from separate coils, each built into its vn separate pocket. So each one is free to separately support hichever part of you it happens to be under. By conforming to ur shape, a Beautyrest can give you more support, more comfortably, than any other firm mattress. And the best bedfellow for a Beautyrest mattress is the new, scientifically designed Beautyrest Full-Support Foundation. You can't buy more of a mattress, unless you buy more of a Beautyrest. A Queen size gives you 20% more sleeping space than an old-fashioned double bed. A King size, 50% more.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Caused By Inflammation And Infection

Also Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief In Many Cases from Pain and Burning Itch in Such Tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make bowel movements more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

Here's a plan thieves don't like

Home burglaries in 31 Southern California communities have been reduced dramatically by a simple, inexpensive method which you can help get started in your own town. The plan works like this:

- Engrave your driver's license number on your valuable possessions that burglars find most appealing—television sets, radios, stereos, tape recorders, bicycles, cameras, typewriters, electric tools, jewelry, musical instruments.
- Then, put stickers on your home's front door and other obvious places advising potential thieves that "all items of value on these premises have been marked for ready identification by law enforcement agencies."

This helps foil a thief in three ways. First, if he is stopped by police with the marked items in his possession, he cannot plead convincingly that they are his own. Second, your possessions now are easily identifiable which means "fences" who buy and resell stolen property are cool to the item; the thief gets stuck with the goods when what he really wanted was money. Third, the stickers may discourage a thief from breaking in at all.

The key to success is for a large number of citizens in a community or area to participate so thieves will know they are operating in dangerous territory.

Excellent results are possible

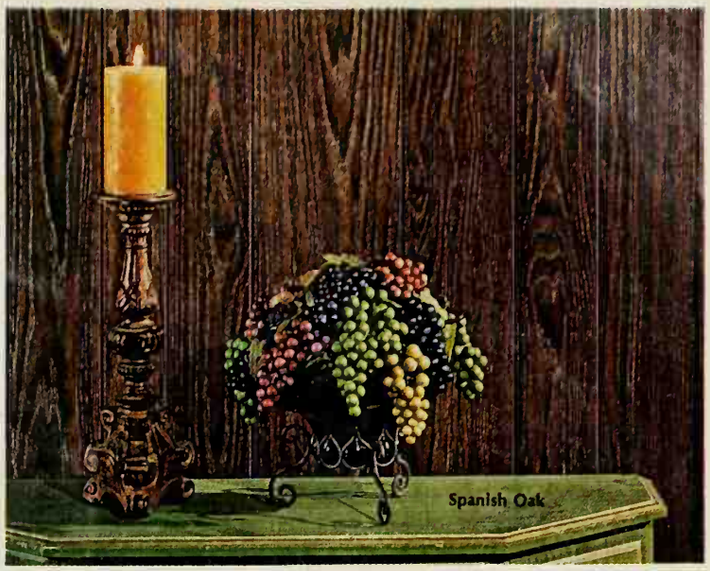
The "Operation Identification" brainstorm was originated in Monterey Park by its police chief, Everett F. Holladay, in 1963. Since then, the plan has spread rapidly. The results are startling in Holladay's city (population: 50,000) where among 4,000 participating households, there have been only three burglaries since the program was initiated. In the 6,000 non-participating homes, there have been more than 1,800 burglaries. Ironically, homeowners are quick to join after they been victimized. "If we can get everybody to participate," Holladay says, "it looks as if we will have licked the burglary problem."

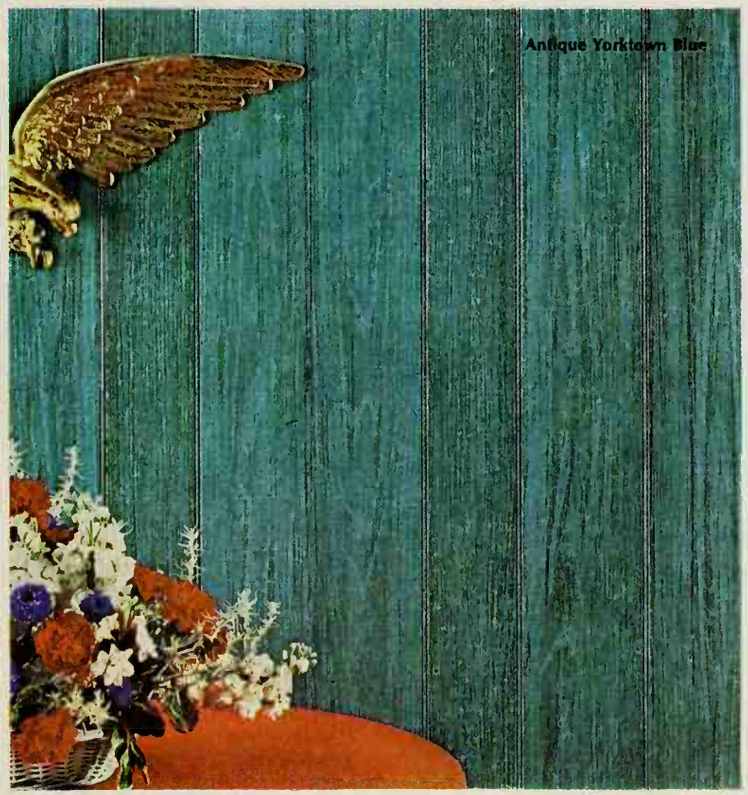
The program makes an excellent project for civic organizations. For example, in Monterey Park, the Exchange Club financed the drive—and so far its total investment is less than $300. The money was spent on a dozen etching tools with points that will work on all kinds of surfaces (about $3 each) and for printing the stickers. The tools are loaned by police to homeowners at no cost for three days at a time.

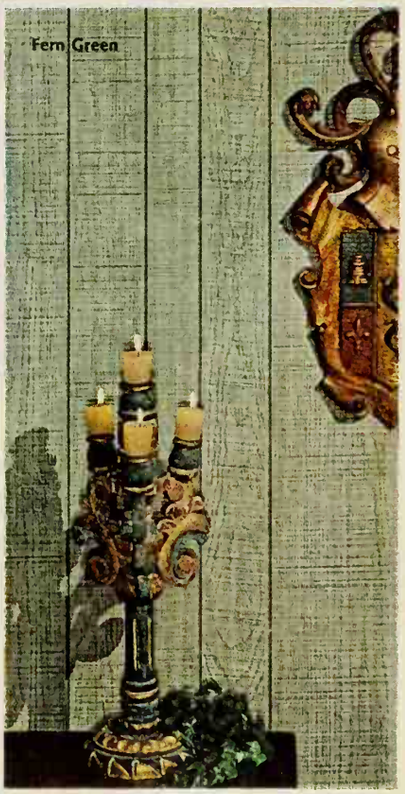
Numbers make it much easier to identify objects and track down rightful owners. Verbal descriptions are not nearly so efficient, as evidenced by police auctions across the country, where recovered stolen items are sold because ownership can't be established. The driver's license number probably is the best identification tag, even though it cannot in some states, because federal restrictions prohibit using social security number to trace individuals.

Chief Holladay offers additional recommendations to help your community establish an anti-burglary program:

- Work to obtain widespread publicity in order to gain community support and discourage thieves.
- Instruct citizens to engrave the identification number on the nonremovable parts of the item, near the manufacturer's serial number if possible.
- Give each citizen a blank form so he can list all the engraved objects and the locations of the numbers.







YOU

When you do a room, you want it to say "me." So you look for walls that will form the perfect scene-setting background . . . flatter your furnishings.

Masonite Corporation lets you indulge yourself—with an unequaled selection of exclusive panels. Such as: Antique Yorktown Blue for color; Marbletone for textured elegance; Spanish Oak for 3-dimensional graining; Fern Green for hand-sawn effects.

Speaking of hand effects, kids don't usually get along with beautiful walls. They do with Masonite brand panels, however. For unless you insist on steel, we've got the toughest walls around.

But they're not tough on your budget. An 8' x 12' wall costs less than $35. At your lumber dealer. Look for him in the Yellow Pages under "paneling," or write Masonite Corporation, Dept. BH-3, Box 777, Chicago, Illinois 60690.

lives to please himself. He'll eat to satisfy his appetite and regulate his intake to meet his body's demands.

Naturally, there is an exception to this rule. If your cat shares the house with another cat or dog, there may be competition for food. The cat soon learns that if he is to get his fair share he'll have to eat as much food as fast as he can. This develops into a habit and he'll soon eat whenever the opportunity arises. Don't let this problem develop. Make certain each pet has a dish of his own and learns that he is never to eat from the other's. You can remove temptation by placing the feeding dishes on opposite sides of the room.

All cats have different eating habits. Some eat all their food at once, others nibble and return. While you shouldn't cater to your pet's every whim, you should be aware of how he eats so you don't throw away food he was saving for a snack for later.

A self-feeding program can be a highly satisfactory means of keeping your cat well-nourished. All you have to do is provide your cat with a constant supply of food and water and allow him to gauge his own requirements. Many cats do well on this program, but a few have a tendency to overeat, especially those that share the house with another pet.

If you plan to use this self-feeding regimen, it's best to use soft-moist or dry food and start when your cat is a kitten. An older cat accustomed to a schedule eagerly awaits mealtime. Having constant access to food may lead him to eat all the time.

Adult cats don't need milk. Strange as it seems, some don't like it, others seem unable to digest it. However, if your cat does like milk, go ahead and give it to him. But don't think a bowl of milk is a substitute for a meal. It's not.

Special considerations

An orphaned or rejected kitten that isn't weaned presents a special problem. Cat's milk contains more than twice the protein of cow's milk, so cow's milk will fail as a substitute. Even human baby formulas don't have the nutrients needed to get a kitten through his first few weeks. Fortunately, your veterinarian will be able to supply you with a milk substitute formulated to furnish the same nutrients as the kitten's natural food.

A pregnant cat needs more food. If you can't have food available to her at all times, make a special point of offering her more at each scheduled feeding.

Lactation puts a tremendous burden on the nursing mother and she'll have a voracious appetite. Offer her cow's milk, or better yet, the same cat's milk substitute you'd give an orphaned kitten plus a little fresh meat, in addition to her normal balanced meal.

An older cat is less active than a younger animal, so he doesn't need as much food. But a long, active life will have established an appetite that's hard to curb. He may begin to put on extra weight. If you want to make his later years healthier and happier, cut his rations to suit his needs, despite his protests.

Spayed females and neutered males have a lower metabolic rate than reproductive animals. They're less energetic, so they burn fewer calories. Take this into consideration when you feed. While it's easy for the cat to put on excess weight, it will be hard for you to reverse the process.

Cats that go outdoors during cold weather require more calories to maintain body temperature. The winter coat helps, but it's no substitute for the metabolic adjustment required. Some cats' appetites won't respond immediately to the change in season; after a short weight loss, though, they'll eat more at each meal until their weight stabilizes again. When the winter coat has completely grown in, the cat's appetite will decrease slightly. During the spring a similar lag takes place. He may put on weight before shedding is complete and his metabolism has adjusted to the warmer temperatures.

Hunting

What you feed a cat and how much has little effect on his enthusiasm for killing birds and/or catching mice. Hunting is an instinct and it is not directly related to hunger. While food is the end result of a stalk, the cat isn't really thinking about his stomach as he sneaks up on his prey.

The hunting instinct is stronger in some cats than others. One cat will go after a bird or animal right after a filling meal. Another cat may be half starved, but still not show any desire to hunt.

If you want your cat to be a proficient mouser, keep him well fed and in the prime of health. To stop your cat from killing birds, you may just have to keep him in the house. Punishment, no matter how severe or frequent, is unlikely to deter him. Collars with bells rarely work because most cats can learn to stalk their prey without ringing the bell.

Other things cats eat

According to an old wive's tale, when a dog or cat eats grass, it's a sure sign that he has worms. A lot of people still believe it. Actually, most cats eat grass whether they have worms or not. The reason is simply that they like it, further proof that they aren't "pure" carnivores.

Catnip is not a food but an herb that chemists refer to as an alkaloid. It has very dramatic effects on most cats, sending them on a euphoric "trip" that can be a beneficial outlet for pent-up energy.

Cats enjoy bones as much as dogs do. If you let your cat have bones, follow the same precautions you would for a dog. Don't offer poultry or any other small brittle bones. They may splinter. A large beef knuckle is best. As the cat tries to chew away the last remaining portions of meat, the bone will scrape his teeth and massage his gums, something he misses with a soft-food diet.

A few don'ts

Don't feed your cat dog food. His nutritional needs are different. A cat derives more of his body energy from protein than a dog does, so a balanced cat diet will have a greater proportion of protein in relation to other nutrients.

Don't feed your cat food directly from the refrigerator. Cats don't like cold food. If you serve canned food, feed it at room temperature. Most canned foods are available in small sizes so that all of it can be fed at one feeding with none left over to become stale.

Don't feed your cat soupy food. If you add milk or broth to make dry foods more appetizing, remember a cat's stomach capacity is limited. You want it filled with food, not water.

Don't add extra nutrients to your cat's diet unless instructed to do so by your veterinarian. To work properly, vitamins, minerals and other nutrients must be in proper balance. Too much of one may negate the beneficial effect of another.

Don't let your cat get fat. A healthy cat is lean and active, a natural athlete. If you're giving your pet a good complete food and he puts on extra weight, you're feeding him too much. Although a cat's waist isn't drawn in as a dog's is, it shouldn't droop below his chest. If his belly-line is parallel to his back, he's in good physical shape.

Don't forget that water is one of the most important parts of a balanced diet. Make certain that your cat has access to fresh water at all times.

While a cat is a rugged animal, he doesn't have nine lives. Poorly nourished, he will die, not suddenly, but slowly and painfully. Do your best to feed him properly so his one life will be long and happy. ■

Investing

• With 400 funds to choose from, the first step is to determine which type fits your objectives. The main categories are Growth, Growth & Income, Income, and Balanced. (The latter, which are similar to income funds, must keep a portion of their assets in bonds and preferred stocks.)

Always keep in mind that, in the stock market, risk and prospective reward are inescapably related. Broadly speaking, income funds are "defensive," and tend to hold up better in bad markets. Growth funds are "aggressive," and tend to rise more sharply in strong markets. For most younger people (assuming they have adequate savings and insurance), growth funds are preferable.

• Size is something else to consider. The funds range all the way from million dollar "minis" to giants of one billion dollars and up. Usually, there's a relationship between size and stability. Big price changes in a few stocks can have a dramatic impact on a small portfolio. Thus, the small, aggressive funds are best left to the venturesome.

The giant funds tend to offer the greatest relative stability, but bigness is not an unqualified blessing. It limits the fund manager's choice of investments to the nation's larger companies, and often prevents him from investing in small companies in the areas of dynamic growth. It also limits his mobility in the marketplace, since it's difficult to buy or sell huge holdings of a stock without affecting its price.

Yet this shouldn't deter you from buying one of the giants. It's simply a warning against being overly impressed (as many investors have been) by size alone, and a reminder that there's much to be said for a well-managed, medium-size fund.

• The overriding consideration is a fund's performance. Never judge this over a year or two. Instead, measure a five- or ten-year period.

How do you get this information? The handiest source is a reliable broker who's taken the trouble to study the mutual fund record (which many brokers have not).

Be your own music teacher

Why keep depriving yourself of the thrill of making your own music?

Here's a pleasant way to learn at home in spare time. You play simple familiar tunes right from the start, then more advanced compositions.

Choose piano, accordion, guitar, any popular instrument.

No gimmicks—you learn to read notes, play regular sheet music.

It really works! Thousands now play who never thought they could.

It may seem odd at first – the idea of teaching yourself music. You might think you need a private teacher at $4 to $10 per hour to stand beside you and explain everything you should do – and to tell you when you've made a mistake.

But surprising as it seems, you need no such thing. Thousands of people just like you have taught themselves to play by using the lessons we give by mail. And you can too.

With our lessons, you learn to play the right way – by note from regular sheet music. Without any gadgetry or gimmickry. And all it costs you is just pennies a day.

You don't need any previous musical training. Our lessons start you off "from scratch" with clear word-and-picture instructions. A lot of the songs you practice first are simple tunes you've heard many times. And since you already know how these tunes are supposed to sound, you can tell immediately when you've "got them right."

Then you go on to more advanced pieces. By this time you can tell if your notes and timing are right, even without ever having heard the songs before. Sooner than you might think possible, you'll be able to play whatever kind of music you like. Folk. Popular. Classical. Dance tunes. Hymns.

You learn in your spare time, in the privacy and comfort of your own home. There's no one standing over you to make you nervous. And because you teach yourself, you can set your own pace. You're free to spend as much time mastering any lesson as you wish.

It's really a marvelous way to learn. As recent graduate Mrs. Norman Johanson wrote us from Maple Valley, Wash., "My daughter has taken lessons for 8 years from a private teacher, and now she asks me questions about some of her lessons. How very proud I feel when she says to friends, 'You've just got to hear my Mom play!' "

Others also enjoy her playing, Mrs. Johanson reports. She plays for herself to relax after a trying day, and for her husband when he's tired. She also plays for friends when she goes to parties. "In a sentence," she says, "it's the most soul-satisfying thing that has ever happened to me."

If you've ever dreamed of being able to play the piano, the guitar, or some other instrument, why not learn more about our convenient, economical way to learn? Send for our free booklet Be Your Own Music Teacher. With it we'll include a free Piano "Note-Finder." There's no obligation and no salesman will call. Just mail the coupon to the U.S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Port Washington, N.Y. 11050. Established 1898. Licensed by N.Y. State.

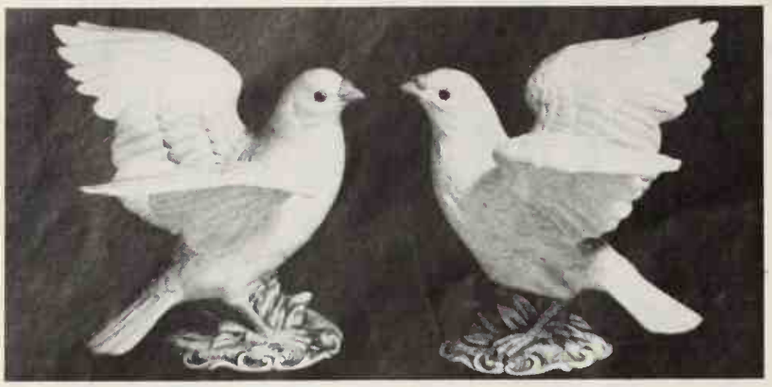
MAGNIFICENT PAIR OF PURE BISQUE TURTLE DOVES



A Superb Decorating Masterpiece in Glowing White Bisque Makes an Ideal Collector's Treasure

ONLY $4.98 A PAIR

Poised for flight, you can almost hear the softly whirring wings, the gentle cooing of these soft, white bisque turtle doves. Long a collector's item, bisque statues and figurines add a classic note of elegance and beauty to any setting. And this magnificent pair eloquently captures the luxurious charm that seems to be unique only to a fine piece of bisque. Although the delicately molded bodies are of pure white, they are overcast with that delicate pink aura so typical of bisque and are further highlighted by the worked pedestals of soft green and gentle tans. Unfortunately it is impossible to capture the finely sculptured details, the tender colorations and the aristocratic presence of this pair from the small black and white illustration here. Only when you see them in your home can you fully appreciate the dramatic eloquence they bring to any setting.

OFFER WILL NOT BE REPEATED THIS SEASON

Because these magnficent sculptures must be specially imported we urge you to order now while our supply lasts. Each pure bisque sculpture is a full 4½" high and both are yours for this one time only price of just $4.98 on full money back guarantee if you are not absolutely delighted. But hurry, this offer will not he repeated this season in Better Homes and Gardens.

The inches melted off so rapidly and right where I wanted to lose them: 2 inches off my waist, 2¼ inches off my tummy, 2 inches off my hips and 2½ inches off each thigh. No dieting, no discomfort and thanks to my trim-jeans my figure has never looked better."

Miss Carol Arrighi: "I used your marvelous trim-jeans a few minutes a day for 3 days in a row and reduced my waist from 26 to 24, my tummy from 31 to 29, my hips from 36 to 34 and my thighs from 23 to 21. My new measurements are just perfect for my height and it is just unbelievable that it took so little time and effort."

Mrs. Linda Saatsaz: "In just 3 days my waist went from 29 inches to 25 inches—my hips from 39½ inches to 37 inches and my thighs from 24 inches to 21 inches with a total overall loss of 14½ inches with these wonder working trim-jeans—and all without the need for dieting."

Here is how it works:

Miss Penny Dix has slipped into her trim-jeans and is inflating them with the handy little pump provided. She is now ready to perform her 'Magic Torso' movements, an exercise program designed specially for trim-jeans.

After a few pleasant moments—about 10 minutes or so—doing her 'Magic Torso' movements, Penny is now relaxing for an additional 20 minutes while keeping her trim-jeans on. That is all there is to it.

Penny now slips her trim-jeans off and checks her 'after' measurements. Remarkable! Penny lost 1 inch from waist, 2 inches from tummy, 1 inch from hips, 1½ inches from each thigh for a total measurement loss of 7 inches in just 1 brief session.

TRIM-JEANS — THE SPACE AGE SLENDERIZER WITH RESULTS THAT ARE OUT OF THIS WORLD.

The trim-jeans are a marvel of ease, comfort and efficiency. Once you have slipped them on, you are ready for the most astounding experience in rapid slenderizing you have ever known. Only trim-jeans has the unique features of design, including the exclusive super sauna-lock that permits the constant snug fit and solid support in all 4 areas—waist, tummy, hips and thighs—without which truly sensational results are not possible. We recommend that the trim-jeans be used a few minutes each day for 3 days in a row when you first receive them and then several times a week until you have achieved your maximum potential inch loss. After that, for maintenance you can use the trim-jeans about twice a month or as often as you feel the need.

THE MOST REVOLUTIONARY GUARANTEE IN SLENDERIZING HISTORY. So many users of the trim-jeans obtain 'instant reducing'—are inches slimmer, inches trimmer in from just 1 to 3 sessions with this super slenderizer—are actually losing as much as a total of 7 or more inches from their waists, tummies, hips and thighs in just 1 session and up to 14 or more inches from 3 sessions. This principle produces really fantastic results. There may be variations of speed and/or degree of results due to individual differences in metabolism and body response. Not everyone may lose 7 inches in just 1 session and 14½ inches in three days but remember this: No matter what your metabolism, no matter what your body type, if you do not lose a total of from 6 to 9 inches from your waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 3 days, you may return the trim-jeans and your entire purchase price will be immediately refunded.

THE AMAZING TRIM-JEANS TAKE OFF INCHES WHERE THEY NEED TO COME OFF. Your trim-jeans are designed to give you just the reducing effect you need where you need it . . . and the price of the trim-jeans is just $13.95 and each pair carries a FULL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. Here is the slenderizer supreme—trim-jeans—which we sincerely believe to be the easiest, fastest, most convenient, most sensationally effective waist, tummy, hip and thigh reducer ever discovered—with the most revolutionary guarantee in slenderizing history. So if you want trimmer, slimmer, sleeker measurements and you want them now, send for your trim-jeans today.

The BLACKEST Glad You Ever Saw!

Ataturk is about as black as a flower can be. The color is a glistening, velvety black with overtones of maroon—not a dull black but a warm, glowing black. The vigorous, robust plant has spikes two to three feet tall, carrying 16 to 18 buds. Opens 6 to 8 flowers at a time, each one 3 to 4 inches wide.

Ataturk is so different it stands out from all other glads—when your friends look at your garden, they'll ask you about Ataturk immediately.

We send you big bulbs measuring 1¼ to 1½ inches across. This is a low-priced offer to win new friends. Supply is limited, and this offer will not be repeated this season. Sorry, but we must limit orders to $1.00 per person.

MY GRASS IS No. 1

By Mike Senkiw

It's true the things people are saying about Amazoy Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass (Reg. T. M.).

It grows so thick and luxurious that walking on it is unforgettable . . . like walking on a thick, pile carpet.

Your Zoysia lawn drives out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It stays green and beautiful in blistering heat, when other grass burns out. It cuts mowing by ⅔ . . . it's perfect, for summer homes and "problem" areas.

There's no need to rip out your old grass. Plug in Amazoy Zoysia Grass and let it spread into beautiful turf that never needs replacement. It will neither heat kill nor winter kill . . . merely goes off its green color after heavy frosts and regains fresh new beauty every spring – a true perennial! Every plug fully guaranteed to grow in any soil in your area.

To end lawn problems, send for free interesting facts and low prices about Amazoy including Pre-Season Bonus Offer. No obligation.

The man next door®

Grumpy Ned Carter just received his hospital bill for a recent minor operation. He says now he understands why masks are worn in the operating room.

The Rev. George Hall says it's becoming increasingly easy to convince his flock that "money isn't everything." In fact, most people are discovering that it doesn't add up to much of anything.

Burt, Jr., wasn't entirely proud of his report card, but he pointed out that it provided plenty of evidence that he wasn't taking any "mind-expanding drugs."

Home from a business trip to Chicago, Lee Bayless predicts that any day now freeway drivers will be required to take a speed-reading course in order to read the maze of signs.

Pat Mulligan, mother of four, claims it's easy to determine when a youngster has reached the age of independence. It comes about the same time that he figures out how to turn on the television set by himself.

Chuck Griffith, our lawyer friend who has a keen eye for detail, says he has noticed that a careful driver is the one who sees the driver just ahead of him get a ticket.

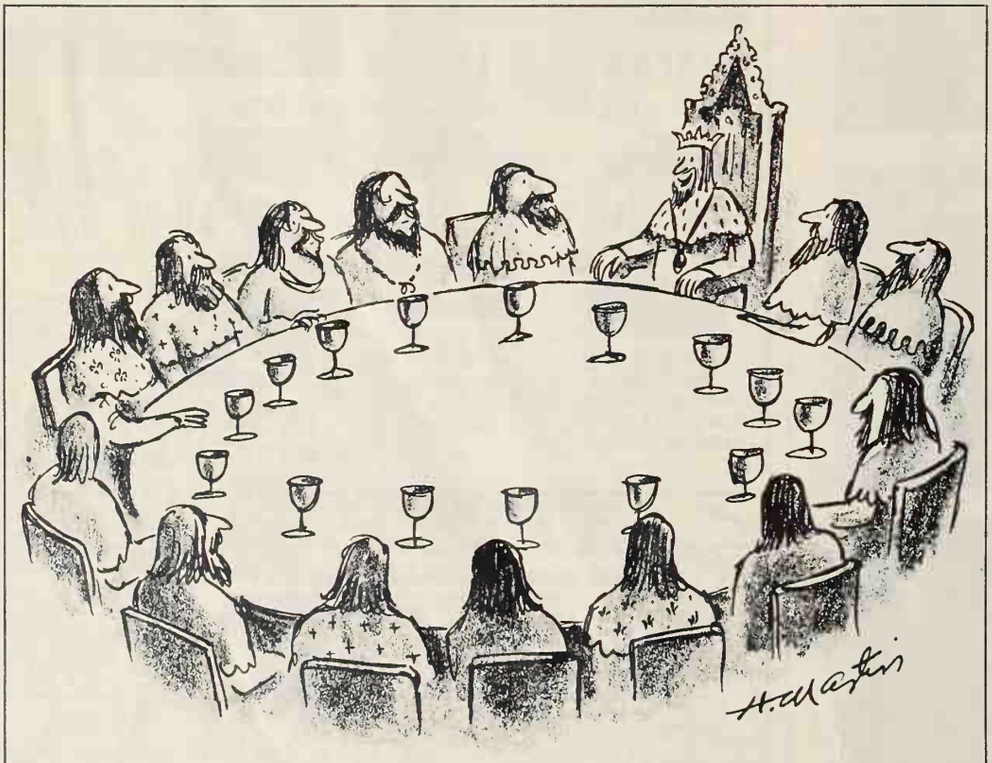
Congressman Nick Hanfli grants that politicians must be able to see both sides of an issue. But he denies that the reason is so they can figure out how to get around it.

If youngsters today can earn enough money to put themselves through college, I often wonder if they need the education.

It's easy to spot out-of-towners in the business district of our city. When the traffic light says, "Don't walk," they don't.

Maybe it's just me, but my first impression whenever I try on a new suit and step up to the three-way mirror, is, "Boy, do I ever need a haircut."

John Hardy, who recently opened a new service station, says he now is a member of the "In" crowd—insignificant, insecure and in debt.



"Now, the round table symbolizes our equality while my fancy chair and golden crown signify that I, perhaps, am just a smack more equal."

"Sideburns do not a hippy make!"

Our Rosemary teaches a Sunday school class but she is finding it difficult to convince some of the youngsters that the Devil really exists. One young cynic, still smarting from the way Santa Claus turned out, told her, "He's probably just my dad."

Spring, while not in the air, is close enough at hand to be in our thoughts. Already, our family is busy planning our first weekend trip of the year to "our cabin."

Actually, it's not our cabin, even though it overlooks what we call "our river." The cabin and property belong to an acquaintance, Jack Stillwell. It's a lovely little two-bedroom house located back in the woods, too far back to have electricity.

All of us enjoy the gaslights and the gravity-operated water system. And I love being in a place where I can step out on the porch and simply holler. I admit I've never done that, but it's nice knowing I could. I guess there's something about human nature that makes most of us yearn for the unrushed solitude and restfulness of the countryside.

Anyway, Jack—who is only an acquaintance and not a friend—is kind enough to let us use his cabin any time we want. In fact, he always seems delighted when I ask. And he refuses to take any payment for it.

Jack's not making a gesture. He means it. The only trouble is that too few people have the chance to meet people like him. Or maybe the trouble is that too few of us are like Jack.

Armstrong introduces a bright new era in floors

SOLARIAN™

It shines without waxing

(It hates waxing as much as you do)

years you've been hearing about vinyl floors that m to keep their shine without waxing.
Armstrong has never made such a claim. We know n experience that any vinyl floor will begin to lose ne gloss after a few months and require an occasional xing to restore and maintain its original shine.

For women who hate to wax

we also know how much you hate to wax floors. So set out to develop a totally new kind of floor that ily would require no wax to keep shining and less k to keep clean.
ult is Armstrong Solarian. And it's different oring ever made. The difference lies in a development from Armstrong research—the Wear Surface. This surface is an entirely ulation that will maintain its gloss far longer l floors.

Tested in homes like yours

g has successfully tested this new floor in the hens of real homes like yours for two years. occasional sweeping, damp-mopping—and no these floors are still bright and shining.

Most waxes won't adhere to new surface

Not only does Solarian not need waxing, it hates waxing as much as you do. Just as an egg won't stick to the new, coated frypans, most waxes won't stick to the Mirabond Wear Surface. More important, neither will spills or tracked-in dirt. Once over lightly with a damp mop and Solarian comes up gleaming!

An end to heel-mark problems

Even those ugly black heel marks are no problem. You'll have a lot fewer to begin with. And when one does turn up, you can wipe it right off the Mirabond surface.

After several years of wear, there may be a slight lowering of gloss in high-traffic areas. You probably won't find it objectionable. But if you should ever need it, your Armstrong retailer can supply a special Solarian Floor Finish which you can use in these areas to restore and maintain the shine the way you like it.

Ask your Armstrong retailer to demonstrate Solarian's remarkable qualities and show you its variety of sparkling designs and colors. For more information direct from Armstrong, see the box at the bottom of the following right-hand page.

Armstrong Suspended Ceilings: the beautiful cover-up

If you've got a basement ceiling with a bad case of exposed pipes, or a plaster ceiling that's cracked and peeling, or a plain, old-fashioned case of excess room height, then you should discover the beautiful cover-up —Armstrong Suspended Ceilings.

Armstrong Suspended Ceilings are the fast, economical, and attractive way to cover up anything and everything you don't want seen.

Installing one is easy. You just attach a wall molding around the room, hang the metal grid on wires from your present ceiling, and then drop the ceiling panels into place. That's about all there is to it. In fact, the whole job can be done in an average room over a weekend.

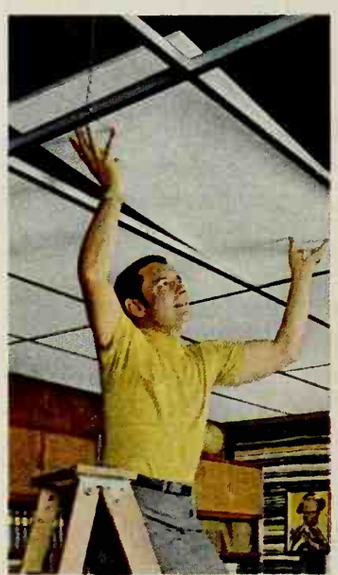
The cost? You'll be pleasantly surprised. You can do a 12′ x 14′ room, including the metal grid, for as little as $50.

Armstrong makes lots of different suspended-ceiling panels to do lots of different jobs. They're all washable. Some are vinyl coated to make cleaning easier in the kitchen. And most are acoustical, so they soak up noise in the playroom or den.

There's a wide range of surface textures to choose from. For example, the Fashiontone® panels shown above have the distinctive look of textured plaster. The metal grid comes in a choice of colors—black, white, gold, aluminum, and woodtone.

The brightest part of any suspended ceiling is an Armstrong lighting fixture. There are four different styles to choose from, all prewired and easy to install.

For more information about this versatile new ceiling system, see the box on the following page.



You can install these suspended ceilings over a weekend.

Furnishing the elegant room

New Patriarch™ by Thomasville®

ntroducing Patriarch by Thomasville—new classic furni-ure en Español.

Patriarch combines the architectural elegance of pain with romantic undertones of the Mediterranean. he result is a fresh, dramatic approach to one of today's ost popular furniture fashions.

Notice the deeply sculptured moldings on drawers nd door panels, the authentic latticework of the armoire nd scrollwork of the headboard. The hardware, with its ntiqued pewter finish, recalls the superb metalwork of ne great Spanish masters of the 16th Century.

This striking new collection for bedroom, dining oom, and living room is another example of furniture esign and craftsmanship with "that Thomasville look".

For more information on Patriarch, and other fine homasville furniture, see the box below.

Carpeting the elegant room

New Solitaire by Armstrong

There's a new kind of luxury underfoot. Solitaire. It's a shag carpet, with a shag's soft, deep warmth. But it's much thicker, much more lush than the usual shag. The result is a carpet that is richer in character, more substantial, a shade more formal. What a beautiful choice for any room where the aim is elegance!

Solitaire is the newest addition to Armstrong's line of fine carpet. Shags, plushes, sculptured and patterned carpets in hundreds of colors.

In choosing an Armstrong carpet, you needn't worry about which brand or type of fiber is best. We've selected the best fiber for each carpet and labelled it "Armstrong Approved". So both fiber and carpet are backed by one familiar name—Armstrong.

To find out more about Solitaire, or any other Armstrong carpet, see the box below.

Now what about making your Indoor World 971-new? Armstrong's new products and ew ideas can make a beautiful difference in our home. We'd like to show you how. CREATORS OF THE INDOOR WORLD

This puts the soup on.

The KitchenAid Hot-water Dispenser gives you 190° water at the turn of a knob. It's like having a built-in teakettle.

Use it to make tea, instant coffee, hot soup; to get a fast start on cooking; to thaw frozen vegetables; to warm baby's bottles; to prepare instant foods and drinks instantly.

You'll probably think of uses for it that even we haven't thought of.

This cleans up afterwards.

The KitchenAid Dishwasher-Sink is a dishwasher, a stainless steel sink and work counter, and a spacious storage cabinet with room for a KitchenAid disposer.

So it's a complete clean-up center, yet it's just 48" wide.

Install a KitchenAid Hot-water Dispenser and your clean-up center will also help put the soup on.

If you want a KitchenAid Dishwasher-Sink or Disposer or Hot-water Dispenser or all three, see your KitchenAid dealer. He's in the Yellow Pages. Or write us for more information. KitchenAid Dishwashers, Dept. 1RC-4, The Hobart Manufacturing Company, Troy, Ohio 45373.

Bayer wants you to know about pain relievers.

e makers of Bayer® Aspirin, we recognize nese are days when most people want ow more about the products they use.
hat's fine with us.
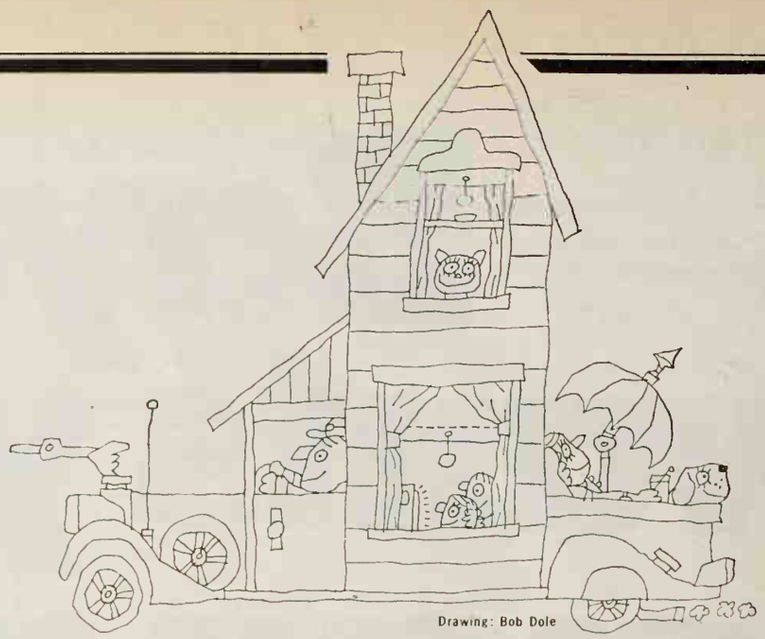
's fine with us because we believe that ore you know about pain relievers, the likely you'll be to insist on Bayer Aspirin.

For example, did you know that two Bayer Aspirin tablets bring all the pain relief power a headache can use? Did you know that Bayer is the only leading pain reliever that's all aspirin, and aspirin is what doctors recommend? Did you know that Bayer, without any additives, is every bit as fast and effective in relieving pain as those products that have additives?

We've been talking to consumer groups around the country, and we plan to talk to more, exchanging ideas and information about pain relievers. In the months ahead, in magazines and on TV and radio, we're going to be giving you some straight answers on this important subject. Because Bayer wants you to know about pain relievers.

Buying a used camping vehicle



Drawing: Bob Dole

Used campers often make excellent buys. Few are worn-out. Most were traded in because previous owners moved to larger models or different types.

You can buy from a recreational vehicle dealer or directly from the current owner. You're safer with the dealer, and here's why: He depends on volume business. In his specialized market, this means repeat business. He'll do his best to make sure you'll want to come back when it's time to trade up. Chances are he'll give you a 90-day guarantee on parts. You'll find recreational vehicle dealers listed in the yellow pages under the heading Trailers—Camping and Travel.

Buying from the current owner can be risky. The vehicle represents family good times, so it's hard for him to be realistic when pricing it. All the extras he added as custom touches mean a lot to him, but may not interest you. And once you've laid down the money and backed the vehicle out of their drive, it's yours, mechanical problems and all.

Basic shopping know-how

Outward appearance. Does the vehicle list to one side? A weak or broken spring could be the problem. But so could an under-inflated tire or soft ground under the wheel. Park the unit on a firm, level surface and take another look.

Exterior sheet metal. Look for gashes, tears or split seams in sidewalls and roof. Sheet metal repairs are expensive. If rivets have popped along seams, they'll be easy to replace. But ask yourself what popped them loose. The same force may have been enough to twist the frame.

Undercarriage. Frayed wires, bent plumbing and dented holding tanks are all outward signs of off-the-road abuse. While they can be repaired relatively easily, they may indicate that the frame or suspension was subject to more severe damage at the same time.

Interiors. Fabrics can take a beating in an RV. Expect sun bleaching, some small tears or a cigarette burn. But ragged and dirty cushions are a sure sign of neglect, and other more important mechanical things may have been neglected as well.

Discoloration along the line where walls join ceiling is a sure sign of leakage. The discoloration is easy to repair. But if the wall panel is seriously stained, the studs may have begun to rot. Repairs are not easy or cheap.

Windows and doors should open and close easily and fit properly. Water stains on paneling under windows and vents can indicate poor fit. Or they may just show that the previous owner was the type who forgot to close the windows when it rained. Really stubborn windows are another sign of a twisted frame.

Check drawers and doors on cabinets and closets. Normal use can be expected to loosen screws on hinges and locks. Unless they're tightened, you may dump your dishes when making a turn.

The floor will show wear. Don't let that bother you. A good scrubbing and waxing will bring it back to life. But while you're looking, put a little bounce in your step. Soft squeaky spots are indicators of cheap construction and/or abuse and deterioration.

If you're looking at a self-propelled unit, take the driver's seat. Is it comfortable or is it lumpy and sagging? A new seat will cost as much as a deluxe office chair. Are all the turning levers, gearshift knobs and switches in place? Do all the instruments and gauges work? Some of these are inexpensive items, but they should be taken care of while the vehicle is still in the dealer's lot. He has the necessary parts.

Appliances. An LP-gas refrigerator can cost up to $250 to repair or replace, a balky electric water pump another $25 to $40. Range and oven seldom cause trouble, but ask that a competent propane dealer check and certify that all lines, valves and regulators work properly.

Plumbing. The fixtures and plumbing in a camper are more susceptible to damage from abuse and freezing than are those in a home. Insist on a demonstration of sinks, toilet and shower. Make sure all units drain quickly and check carefully for any leaks. Have the dealer show you how the holding tank operates and make certain that it doesn't leak. Repairs are expensive because the unit has to be partially dismantled to expose plumbing.

Electrical systems. First, turn on all lights and fans using 12-volt battery source. Then couple the 110-volt outside connection to a power source and check all equipment using this voltage. If the unit also has LP fixtures, check the condition of globes and mantles and turn each of them on.

If the unit has an auxiliary battery, see if it has a full charge. Look for corroded wiring to terminals. Ask the dealer to start the auxiliary power plant if there is one. It should start easily; this is your standby power.

Tires and suspension. Tire wear is a good indicator of how the unit has been used. Worn inner edges may mean that it was constantly overloaded or that the load capacity of that particular chassis was overrated. Condition of springs and shock absorbers is extremely critical. You can't bounce a motor home or travel trailer to test the shocks as you might a car, so you'll have to trust a visual inspection. Excess oil leakage or a bone-dry shaft indicates a shot shock. A light film of oil is normal for lubrication.

Checkpoints on specific vehicle types:

Tent trailers are relatively trouble-free. Reject a unit with poor canvas or kinked bows. Replacement will run the overall cost so high that you'd be smarter to buy a new unit.

The larger tent trailers and travel trailers require a towing test. The unit should track straight and follow the car without fishtailing. If the unit weighs more than 1500 pounds, separate trailer brakes are advisable and required in many states. A trailer weighing over 2500 pounds will require having a load equalizer hitch professionally installed on your car.

Don't forget to check trailer brake and turn signal lights. Couple them to your car to make certain they work.

Pickup campers. Before mounting the unit, check the underside. A crunched corner or floor section may mean the unit has been dropped. If so, reject it. If it meets all the general inspection points listed, mount it on the truck you'll use it with and drive it before making a decision.

Motor homes and van conversions travel under their own power so the engine works harder than a car's. A good mechanical going-over is a must. Your best bet is a trip to a diagnostic center. This will give you the facts on condition of brakes, engine, drive train, etc. Be sure to check the condition of the tires. All motor homes and many of the vans require heavy-duty truck tires. A couple of the larger tires can set you back several hundred dollars.

Preparing a used camper for sale or trade-in

To get the most out of a used unit, take these steps to return it as closely as possible to its original condition.

Remove personal accessories like magazine racks, pictures and utensil holders. The next owners of your camper will want to add their own touches. Use wood putty to fill all nail and screw holes. Don't forget to scrape off those travel decals.

Replace all missing components, including burned-out light bulbs, broken lampshades and damaged gas light mantles. Make sure all refrigerator and oven shelves are in place.

Make a repair list. Touch up minor scratches, spray-paint LP tanks, fix and tighten cabinet door handles, hinges and latches. You can even replace rivets missing from the siding with an inexpensive pop-riveting tool.

But be realistic. Large dents, leaky plumbing and faulty LP gas systems need professional attention. If the repairs are extensive, it may be best to trade the unit as is. You probably won't make up the cost of repairs at trade time, and the recreational vehicle dealer can have it repaired for less.

Spruce up the interior. New window and shower curtains aren't expensive, but they'll do a lot to improve the appearance. Spot-clean cushion covers, but don't risk having them cleaned or laundered unless they're really grubby. They might shrink out of shape.

Scrub the walls and ceiling. Areas around vents are usually dirtiest, but you'll be amazed at how much dirt has accumulated everywhere. Don't forget the insides of closets and cabinets. Give appliances a real going-over. You can get the oven and burners looking like new again. Warm soda water and a mild detergent will get rid of most refrigerator odors. To remove more stubborn smells, you may have to resort to a strong disinfectant solution. Then leave the door open to get rid of disinfectant odors. Vacuum the floors and then scrub and wax them if they have a hard surface. When everything is shipshape, lay newspapers on the floor to keep it clean until the vehicle is in the dealer's lot.

Check the outside. Tighten loose latches and recaulk where sealant is hardened and cracked. Repair dangling, shredded or damaged wires or connections. Clean out external storage spaces. No one expects the battery compartment to be as clean as the refrigerator, but the dealer will be impressed if it is. Wash the exterior of the unit with mild detergent and warm water. Rinse promptly to prevent streaking. Wash underbody to remove caked-on mud and debris.

Lubricate all hinges and latches. If you have a tent-type trailer, use a special lubricant on zippers and support bows. Make certain the hitch works properly and the dolly wheels turn freely.

Try several dealer lots and check the ads in your local paper to see what other used units are going for in your area. Also check Gil's Guide, a pricing guide of the camper vehicle industry. Many dealers, finance companies and banks subscribe to it. It will give you a realistic idea of what your vehicle is really worth.

CAR OF THE YEAR.

Motor Trend magazine has named the Chevy Vega its 1971 Car of the Year.

Actually, Motor Trend magazine has named all four Chevy Vegas its 1971 Car of the Year. They say it's because of Vega's engineering excellence, timeliness, styling and overall value. Naturally, we're pretty happy about it. For lots of reasons.

One is the fact that the award came from Motor Trend. Because the people at Motor Trend know cars inside and out. And after testing 10 nominees, they chose our little Vega. Shucks.

Reason number two. This is obviously the year of the little car in the big automotive world. And while there are lots of little cars that could have been Car of the Year, only one is. Ours.

A third reason. We've been saying for months now that Vega is the little car that does everything well. Lucky for us, lots of you took our word for it and bought a Vega. Our thanks.

As for the rest of you, you not only have our word for it, you have Motor Trend's: "For the money, no other American car can deliver more."

Vega. It's a lot of little car.

- ☐ I'm interested. Please send me some literature on the Vega.
- ☐ I'm very interested. Please send me literature and contact me for a Vega test-drive.
- ☐ I'm so interested that I already bought a Vega. Please send me a Car of the Year sticker for my car window.

Beautyrest support now comes in 4 different firmnesses.
So you can go from mattress to mattress until you find the one you want.

Sometimes the softest, tiniest woman wants the most superfirm mattress around.

While the biggest, burliest man might want just the opposite.

Because everyone has a different idea of just how firm a mattress should be, we now make Beautyrest® mattresses in four different firmnesses. Besides Normal Firm, there are three Back Care models: Extra Firm, Extra Firm Plus, and Super Firm.

But firmness alone can't support you properly. That's what makes the real difference between a Beautyrest and hard, "boardy" mattresses. Because Beautyrest is firm, but flexible.

Beautyrest support comes from separate coils, each built into its own separate pocket. So each one is free to separately support whichever part of your body it happens to be under. By conforming to your shape, a Beautyrest can give you more support, more comfortably, than any other firm mattress.

You can't buy more of a mattress. Unless you buy more of a Beautyrest. Queen Size has 20% more sleeping space than an old-fashioned double bed. King size, 50% more.

For your nearest Beautyrest dealer, call 800-553-9550 free. (In Iowa, call 319-242-1867 collect.)

Try all four Beautyrest firmnesses. The one you wind up on should be the firmness that makes you unwind the most.

Free offer: For a limited time only, when you buy any Beautyrest Queen size set, you'll receive your choice of a free Queen size frame or free bed stretcher rails to convert your old double bed to Queen size. Offer expires May 31, 1971.

USING A LAWYER FOR A PERSONAL-INJURY CLAIM

In relatively small accident claims, with probable recover under $500, you may decide to be your own attorney (se "Settling a personal injury claim yourself," in our Octob 1970 issue). But say that your claim is higher, or there a special problems, and you decide to select a lawyer. Her briefly, are some guidelines on establishing a good workin relationship with an attorney.

• When to employ a lawyer. While it's generally advisab to employ a lawyer soon after your injury, there's no nee to feel rushed about doing so. This is not the same kind emergency as, say, the need for immediate medical attentio A good rule to follow is to employ a lawyer at an early sta —certainly before you find yourself discussing your case wi the other parties or their representatives. You want yo lawyer to investigate the facts of the accident, to guide yo regarding any such discussions, or most likely, to have hi handle such discussions.

• Fee. The customary arrangement is a contingent fee. Th is, your lawyer receives his compensation out of the proce collected for your injury. If there are no such proceed your lawyer receives nothing.

He probably will ask you to sign an agreement that spe out his responsibilities and his fee. The percentage of his f ordinarily is smaller if financial recovery is obtained bef a lawsuit is filed, on the theory that more legal work required after suit is brought. Often cases are settled bef they're scheduled for trial, and sometimes during trial. Whe a case goes to a full trial, there also is the possibility retrial or an appeal. Your agreement usually will provi for an increased fee percentage if recovery occurs at la stages of the proceeding.

Although the contingent fee is not affected by arrang ments among lawyers, you should be aware of a rather f quent legal practice known as forwarding. Because there a many elements to a personal injury, your family lawyer, he is not expert in this area, may recommend that anoth lawyer handle your claim, and forward the case to him. Yo family lawyer may or may not continue to participate in t case.

• Costs. You should inquire whether there are circu stances where you may be required to make any payme If so, find out how much, for what items, and when. Th are court costs (such as filing fees and expenses for tak depositions), and other costs like investigators' fees. If y should lose the case, the defendant may be entitled to judgment against you for costs (such costs are defendan "court" costs, and usually do not include the defendan attorney's fees).

Whether you lose or win in the trial court, there rarely an appeal. But if there is, what about costs like prepar the record of the trial, and printing the brief on appeal?

• Withdrawal by a lawyer. Can your lawyer withdra from the case before it's concluded? Lawyers don't ordinaril try to withdraw, but sometimes they do if there's "goo cause," or they have your consent. Your lawyer can explai whether you would be obligated to him for work done up t the date of withdrawal—and how that's determined.

• When you want to change lawyers. Suppose you'd lik to change your lawyer before the case is concluded. Can yo do so? Probably you can, although the typical agreemer does not say so, and states vary on the client's right to dis charge an attorney without good cause. However, you shoul know whether there will be any cost to you if you do, and good time to discuss this is before you sign any agreemen (You also should inquire whether your lawyer will transfe all papers and information to your new lawyer.)

• Working with your lawyer. You should expect to coop erate with your lawyer and be guided by his instructions. I most instances, you'll assist him by supplying certain fact regarding the accident, and by keeping him advised of an changes in important points of your case.

Always ask about the procedures your lawyer plans t use, as well as his timing. If it's necessary to sue, when wi suit be brought, and how long will it take to get to trial There may be settlement at any time. And because settle ment ordinarily is not made without your consent, you lawyer probably will welcome a discussion of your feelin about this.

You can, at the outset, ask about the methods your lawye will use to keep you advised of the progress of your case— for instance, his investigation, pretrial procedures, and settle ment negotiations. Often there is a long delay before a ca comes to trial, but usually the lawyer can explain why.

Your lawyer cannot advise you about everything at th time you employ him. He will have to investigate the fact do some legal research, and discuss the case with the oth side before he can advise you about a settlement figur There is no need to determine trial procedure, for exampl until the case is somewhere near a trial date. But you ca explore your financial obligations and the basic arrang ments with your lawyer when (or before) you actually enga him. ■

HIGH SCHOOL COUNSELING: HOW MUCH HELP IS IT?

Your youngster's counselor in high school doesn't just give advice on what courses to take. He often becomes extremely influential in decisions that have a lifetime impact: basic choices on career, college, sex and marriage, the draft and other vital issues. To judge whether his influence is to the good, parents should know exactly what the counselor's job involves and how he goes about doing it.

Do counselors give advice about the draft?

Not really. Many second-rate counselors give emotional advice ("I served in the Marine Corps and . . ." or, "This hideous, immoral war in Vietnam . . ."). Good counselors give no advice at all, just straight facts. It's important to recognize right from the start that counselors aren't intended as advice-givers. They're a source of information rather than of personal opinion, and they offer the facts as objectively as possible. They do not play Ann Landers by dispensing glib solutions to problems in which they're acquainted with only secondhand.

Instead, they help students make decisions on their own, mainly by calling their attention to relevant facts and alternatives they may not know about. Thus a good counselor, although he might not agree with conscientious objectors, would attempt to keep personal views well concealed. He'd make certain every student seeking shelter from the draft is aware of the possibility of qualifying as a C.O.—plus all the other pertinent alternatives, of course.

Is a counselor helpful in selecting the right college?

Very helpful indeed in most cases. Typically, this is the area of the counselor's greatest competence, and he has access to literally thousands of relevant facts and figures about almost every college in America. Often these facts are stored on computer tapes and available for comparison with little more effort than the flick of a switch. By matching this information against his knowledge of the student—not only his grades but his personality and interests—the counselor often can make sound judgments in many areas: whether the youngster would be accepted at a given college, what grades he could expect to pull down as a freshman, how hard he'd have to work, how much it would cost, the likelihood of his qualifying for a scholarship or loan there, and just about anything else the youngster might be curious about, including his odds as a six-foot forward of making the basketball team.

To be sure, many students, despite all this help, make what later proves an unhappy choice. Neither counselors nor computers are infallible predictors, and both can be thrown by intangibles. But insofar as anyone can steer a youngster to a suitable college—one he'll enjoy, do well at and profit from—a high school counselor is usually the best bet.

What's the difference—if any—between counseling and guidance?

As the terms are employed in educational circles, counseling is more personal—usually one student at a time—while guidance is a group situation: a lecture about drugs, say, or a panel discussion with an architect and 26 students contemplating that career. This distinction is blurred, however, by the existence of "group counseling," in which a number of kids who happen to share some personal problem air it in a therapy session. In most schools, there's a minimum of private consultation, largely because of the combined pressures of numbers and time. Some students see their counselors so seldom, one brief chat per semester perhaps, that they sometimes can't even remember their counselor's name.

Can counselors help students get jobs?

Very definitely. In the lingo this falls under the heading of vocational counseling or career guidance, as distinct from educational or personal counseling. Often it's the biggest benefit derived from his counselor by a student not going on to college. And make no mistake about it: this help comes in handy. Qualifying for acceptance as an apprentice plumber, for instance, can be every bit as difficult as gaining admittance into Harvard.

Do kids listen to counselors?

Not necessarily, but what's more to the point is that the counselor usually listens to them. Many students much prefer to discuss their personal problems with a counselor rather than with a parent because the counselor is less emotionally involved and therefore more inclined to hear them out.

What if youngsters and their parents disagree?

Theoretically, a good counselor tries not to take sides in family squabbles. He would much rather mediate a dispute than escalate it. But to be honest, what frequently happens in such cases is that the student and the counselor team up against the parents, simply because the parents' plan for their children are often narrow or unrealistic. Maybe they want their straight-A son to go to Yale, for example, because they're convinced that a degree from that august university is the magic key to all things good in life. Today's kids have not such shallow delusions, and the boy himself might prefer some other school or none at all. Perhaps he wants to interrupt his formal education in order to see the world firsthand. In such instances, the counselor will be inclined to support him, citing evidence that any stu-

THIS DIFFERENT KIND OF HEALTH INSURANCE KEEPS ON PAYING YOU AT HOME.

NEW "WIDE-RANGE" PLAN PAYS YOU UP TO $1,000.00 A MONTH

When you're sick or hurt and can't work, covers you both IN and OUT of the hospital...offers seven "plus features" that give you more for your money.

This is the kind of policy you, too, should have. Thousands of readers of this magazine have been surprised and pleased at the low cost of this unique plan that provides tax-free cash payments direct to you, month after month, both in and out of the hospital. They have compared available coverages and found there are, indeed, seven important reasons why this Mutual of Omaha policy protects you better!

It pays you up to $1,000.00 a month —tax-free to spend as you please—when you're laid up and can't work.

It covers you both in and out of the hospital.

There are no waiting periods! "Paycheck Protection" covers both accidents occurring and sickness contracted after the policy date.

Mental disorders are covered the same as any other sickness.

You are covered as a passenger on any kind of aircraft—even a private plane.

You are covered both on and off the job. "Paycheck Protection" pays in addition to Workmen's Compensation and Employer's Liability.

Your policy is guaranteed renewable for life. Only you can cancel this policy. Even your premium can't be changed unless changed for all policies of this form issued to persons of the same classification in your state.

Experts have singled out this kind of health insurance as the most important protection you can have for one compelling reason: it protects your most important asset—your ability to earn. Your family's entire future depends on that. Every plan you make depends on it.

Mutual of Omaha makes it easy for you to get this protection. As the breadwinner, you select the amount you qualify for (from $300.00 to $1,000.00 a month) to help take care of your regular living expenses when you're laid up. There is no restriction on what you do with these monthly "paychecks", since they are paid directly to you, tax-free to spend as you please. Use them for rent, groceries, or for any other purpose you choose. These benefits are payable for disabilities that start before retirement. Monthly in-hospital benefits are payable after retirement. Your policy does not cover losses caused by war or military service; childbirth, pregnancy or complications resulting from pregnancy.

Family life can go on normally, free from financial care, when the family paycheck is protected.

You can save up to 54% of the cost of this plan if your family is protected by short-term "sick leave" or group insurance where you work. In this case, you can have your Mutual of Omaha "paychecks" start after such benefits have been used up. Your savings, of course, depend on your age, occupation and the plan you qualify for.

THE COMPANY BEHIND A POLICY is just as important as the kind of coverage you get. Mutual of Omaha is the largest company in its field, licensed throughout the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Panama and Puerto Rico. It is currently paying out an average of more than $1,000,000.00 to policyowners every working day.

To make sure you are paid as quickly as possible, Mutual of Omaha maintains over 500 local service offices with a staff trained to the highest standards of courtesy and service. They know that their job is to pay... to cut through red tape and get your checks to you immediately. That's why Mutual of Omaha has an unequalled payments record, with more than $3 billion in benefits paid out to policyowners.

Undoubtedly, you will want more complete facts about unique "Paycheck Protection," and the extra measure of security Mutual of Omaha can give you. You can have them, entirely without obligation, together with free information about the full range of fine family plans to meet your life insurance needs now available from its affiliate, United of Omaha. WHAT IF YOU BREAK A BONE?

When you have an accident, your first question is almost instinctive: Are any bones broken?

It's an apt question. Bruises, scrapes or sprains generally heal in a few days, but a bone can take weeks or months to knit. Time may be lost from work while you are hobbled up in a cast, perhaps totally immobilized. Even after healing, you can end up with lasting disability.

There's not much you can do to prevent a broken bone, other than exercising common sense and caution. But how fast a break heals depends greatly on what you do when the injury first occurs, and how quickly you bring it to a doctor's attention.

How to spot a break

Almost any twisting or wrenching injury, fall or blow can result in a broken bone. Here are some clues to make you suspicious:

- Sudden pain and swelling in the injured area. Surprisingly, a broken bone itself doesn't hurt at all. The pain you feel with a broken bone originates with the periosteum, a tough but sensitive layer of tissue around the bone with myriad nerve endings and blood vessels. When a break occurs, this covering is almost always stretched or torn, and the result is pain.

Moving a broken bone usually results in an excruciatingly sharp pain, typically quite different from the intensified dull ache of a severe sprain or bruise.

Damage to muscles and ligaments in the region of the break results in marked swelling. Of course, less serious injuries such as sprains or torn ligaments also can cause pain and swelling, but a fracture should always be suspected until X rays have been taken.

- Limitation of motion. A broken bone seldom does its job very well. If a finger, a shoulder, or an ankle doesn't seem to work properly after an accident, you should suspect a fracture. A broken rib, for example, tends to impair breathing; the chest muscles contract to guard the break from painful motion.

You should be especially suspicious if you feel something snap during an accident, though sometimes a sprained joint or a torn ligament may cause a very similar sensation.

- Shortening or distortion of a limb. Any distortion of the length or shape of a limb strongly suggests that a bone is broken. When a long bone in the arm or leg is broken, the adjacent muscles tend to cramp or contract. This pulls the bone fragments out of their normal position.

A broken thigh, for instance may look noticeably shorter and thicker because the ends of the broken bone sometimes overlap. In the so-called "Colles' fracture" of the wrist, usually caused by falling hard on an outstretched hand, the hand may be cocked back out of normal alignment with the forearm.

Any motion other than the ordinary motion of a joint usually indicates a broken bone. Such "false motion" usually is extremely painful and can be accompanied by a grating sensation at the site of the break.

Doctors depend heavily on X rays to help identify broken bones and plan appropriate treatment. But even an X ray can fail to detect certain types of breaks. A hairline crack in a bone may at first be undetectable on an X ray, only to appear as a distinct fracture line as long as 30 days later when the bone has already begun to heal.

"Fixing" a broken bone

It's a job for doctors, no matter how simple or harmless a fracture may seem. But two first-aid measures are of paramount importance even before the doctor arrives.

First, the broken bone should be splinted or otherwise immobilized to prevent further injury. Then, simple steps should be taken to combat shock and pain.

Splinting prevents possible damage to muscles or blood vessels near the break. You usually can immobilize a fracture quite easily with anything at hand at the scene of the accident.

To splint a fracture of the leg, for example, fold a thick bedroom pillow lengthwise around the injured area. Then secure it firmly but gently above and below the fracture with neckties, belts or strips of cloth. Well-padded wooden splints, or even pieces of cardboard, can be used if the victim must be moved, particularly over a long distance.

To immobilize a broken arm, pad it well and then strap it snugly to the victim's chest or secure it in a sling. A snug cloth binder torn from a sheet and wrapped firmly around the chest helps splint a rib fracture.

Broken fingers can be splinted by placing cloth wadding in the palm and then bundling up the whole hand boxing-glove fashion, with the fingers held in a natural curved position.

Don't attempt to pull in "traction" a broken bone back to normal shape, if medical aid can be mustered quickly. Applying traction, once a widely recommended first-aid procedure, requires more practice and skill than the average person possesses. If the broken bone has penetrated the skin, clumsy attempts at applying traction can pull dirt, grease and infective organisms deep into the wound. Traction is invariably painful, and can push a fracture victim even deeper into shock.

In all fracture cases you should try to combat shock by keeping the victim quiet, warm and reassured. Mild analgesics such as aspirin may be used to help relieve pain. But be careful about giving

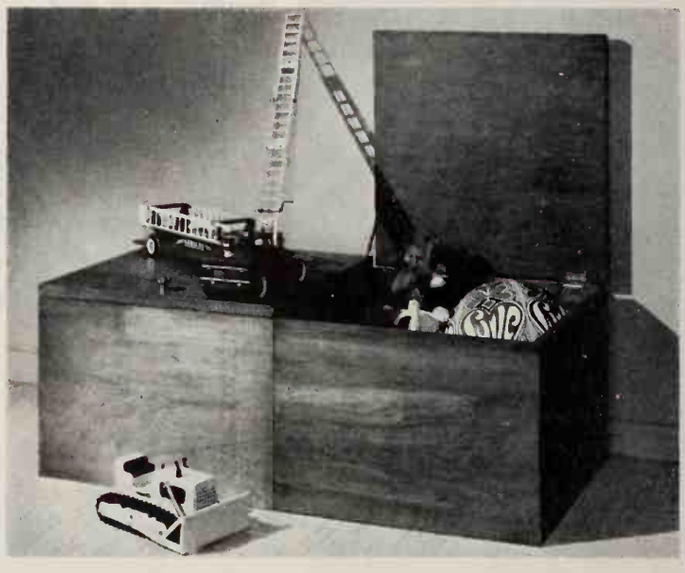
Build these boxes for storage and study



From toy chests to study desk, this unusual storage idea can grow with your child. It's composed of two units that make commodious chests when used alone, or the base for a desk when topped by a sturdy work surface.

You can build this project from two sheets of ¾-inch veneer face plywood, a sheet of ¼-inch plywood and dimension stock. Then finish it with stain and varnish. Or choose a less expensive grade of plywood and paint it.

The base units become a desk when you stand them on end and attach a recessed base and a top with a recessed apron. The unit attached to the wall folds down to provide a large drawing board; when closed, it's a bulletin board.

Each base unit is 2x2 feet and 18 inches high when used as a toy chest, equipped with a small collapsible metal bracket to hold the top open. The desk is 6 feet long, 29 inches high and 18 inches deep. The wall unit is 2x3 feet and 4 inches deep. The lid is held shut with a magnetic catch.

How to patch a shingled roof

Inspect your asphalt roof yearly, even if you haven't noticed any interior leaks. An inspection now may reveal damaged shingles that could lead to costly water damage on ceilings, walls and floors.

When water seeps through a damaged roof, it often runs along beams for some distance before soaking into a porous interior area. This makes it difficult to locate the exact source of the leak from the inside.

If the underside of your roof is exposed, examine the boards with a bright light after a rainstorm. If you see any signs of dampness, mark the spot by driving a nail through the roof from the inside. If your attic is finished, you'll have to look for the leak on the roof itself. Wait for a dry day, and be sure to wear sure-footed rubber-soled shoes. That's as far as you can go with preventive maintenance here. If there has already been a visible interior leak, concentrate on the roof area where the leak first appeared. Then search for the leak in ever-widening arcs from this spot.

You'll find the most common culprit is a curled shingle. If it isn't cracked or otherwise damaged, paste the loose end down with a coat of plastic roofing cement. Lift the shingle gently and apply a dab of cement about the size of a half-dollar. When you've finished, press the shingle down firmly.

For other repairs, try to hold off for a medium-warm morning. Asphalt shingles are too brittle to work with in cold weather and too soft to handle on hot days. If you find shingles torn or split along their exposed lower sections, patch the underside of the torn area with roofing cement. Then drive galvanized nails on both sides of tear. Make sure the nail hits wood. Cover crack and nailheads with roof cement.

Another way to repair a bad shingle is to slide a sheet of copper or aluminum under it. Cut the metal sheet a little smaller than the shingle. Cover the top side of the sheet with roof cement and slide it under the shingle until the sheet's lower edge is even with the bottom edge of the damaged shingle.

Raise the shingle above the damaged one and drive two nails through the bad shingle to secure the metal sheet below. Spot the nails high enough so that their heads will be covered by the damaged shingle. If any nailheads are exposed, cover them with roof cement.

When installing a new shingle, remove the old one by bending the shingle above the old one upward so you can pry out the nails which are holding it down.

Slide the old shingle out and slip the new shingle in. Nail it down with galvanized roofing nails placed in such a way that their heads will be covered by the shingles above.

Also examine your roof flashings in roof valleys, around vent pipes and alongside chimneys and walls. Flashings should be checked for cracks, rust and rotted sections. Look also for pieces that have pulled away from their adjoining surfaces. Where shingles overlap the flashing—on the high side of any slopes and in all roof valleys—make sure the shingles are lying perfectly flat. If any are slightly curled, apply a dab of cement under lower edge.

Where flashing sections look too weathered, cover the entire surface with an aluminum asphalt coating for added protection. Also check the ridge or hip portion of your roof carefully. This is the most exposed section for shingles, and water leaks here could go almost anywhere before soaking down to the interior level. ■

You look for a fabric you like in a pattern and color that go nicely with all the patterns and colors you already have.

Well, that's fine with us. Because we make draperies in wonderful fabrics of Avisco® rayon and cotton.

And we make them in more patterns and colors than any other drapery company in the world.

But it's not just the fabrics that make Burlington House draperies special. It's also the way they're made.

Look at Shannon, the draperies in the picture. In a single-width, floor-to-ceiling length pair, they cost about $15.

Look at the folds in the fabric. We've got a bonded backing that keeps them from getting limp and saggy.

There are mitered corners too. And extra-deep pleats. And invisible stitches. And 3″ hems.

You can get this kind of custom workmanship in Ready-Made draperies or in draperies made for your particular window size.

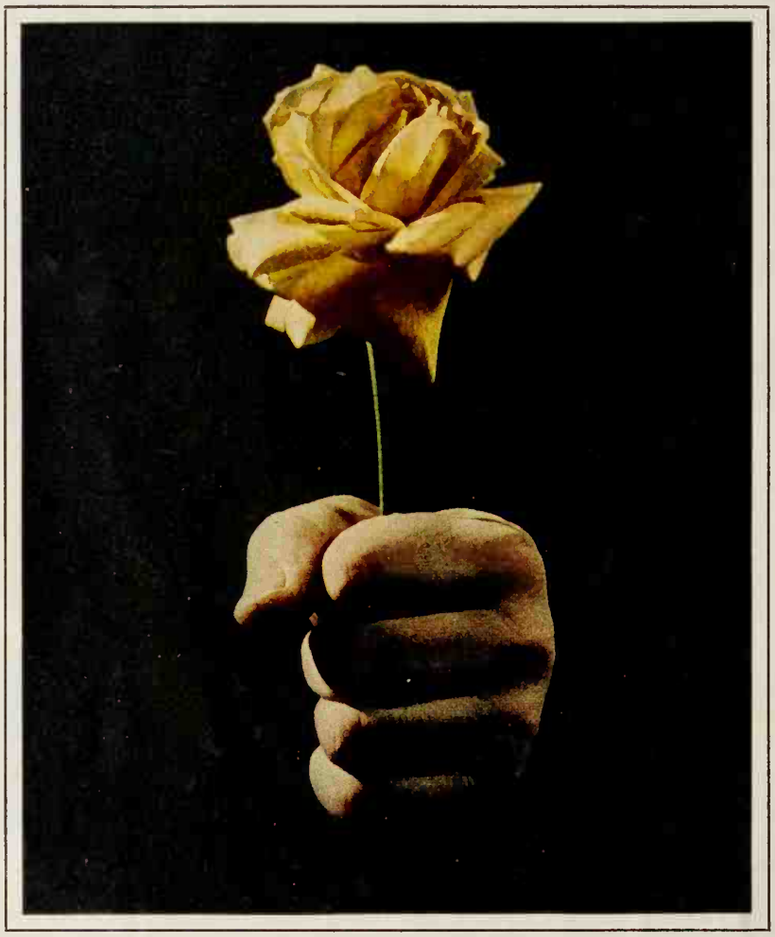
During the century and a half of our industrial revolution, man has behaved like a pig. The basic philosophy of our consumer society—use it, dump it, burn it—has been rooted in unreality. For no material on earth can really be thrown away. It can only be turned into something else. With our ingenuity and technology, we can put almost all of our industrial by-products to good use, and eventually solve the pollution problem.

But we must learn how—and soon—or we'll only make things worse. How does this learning begin? By finding out what the problems really are, by facing the realities of what can be done, and finally, by establishing priorities for action.

To start at the very beginning, the number one problem is that we are polluting ourselves to death in many complex ways. The number one reality is that there's no quick and easy way out. The number one priority is to get ourselves involved. No amount of shoulder shrugging or abandoning the problem to "the experts" will get the job done.



Photograph, Hopkins

Not that we can take over the functions of trained ecologists, economists, social scientists, engineers or researchers. Their best efforts are essential. But these efforts must be directed toward our greatest needs—not toward developing supposedly scientific rationales to protect the vested interests of whoever is paying the expert, be it industry or government. And there is a lot of that going on. In fact, one of the most perplexing problems these days is trying to guess which set of experts has the right answers. Equally perplexing is separating the real environmental concerns from the ecology fads of the moment.

In short, discussion of the environment, and indeed of man's survival, has degenerated into an incredible morass of political opportunism, government-industry dogfights, and all-around breast-beating. Compounding the confusion is the new avalanche of advertising with its ecological claims—some of them real, some questionable, and some misleading.

Perhaps the greatest danger is that all of us who should be involved will simply throw up our hands in confusion, and let the vested interests fight it out. The truth is that no one has all the answers, yet. No doubt, scientists and technicians will find the answers, but the rest of us must keep putting on the pressure for solutions that benefit us all, not just one group or another.

Obviously, the recent ground swell of interest in environment has given a few radicals the chance to sound off convincingly. Then, too, many sincere people in expressing concern have embraced fads that will amount to little. And yet if it weren't for concerned and dedicated environment crusaders of all kinds, we would be even worse off today.

The struggle is now in a crucial stage. Already our editors, in their travels around the country, too often detect apathy—or the Pollyanna belief that somehow everything will come out all right. But we cannot leave this job to government and industry. After all, it was they—encouraged often by our own demands for more and more—who caused the problems. Now we must let them hear demands for solutions, and we must keep up the pressure. But we must direct it intelligently, and base it on solid inquiry.

That is why Better Homes and Gardens is printing this article. It's the start of a series in which we'll examine the major areas of environmental abuse. We will define the problems and tell you what can be done (and when). Then we'll suggest priorities: what government can do; what industry can do; what you can do.

You won't find these articles entertaining. We do promise that they'll give you a good start on working intelligently toward preserving the environment (and yourself) through personal and community action.

AUTO POLLUTION: WHAT CAN WE REALLY DO ABOUT IT?

Cars and trucks, with their internal combustion engines, are the biggest single factor in atmospheric pollution. In some cities, they account for as much as 85 percent of the dirty air. This can't go on.

Yet it is evident that our nation could not long survive without its wheels. We have built a highway civilization and are stuck with the consequences. We have no public transportation worthy of the name. For most Americans, the family car is the only way to get to work, school and supermarket. The bitter question is, how do we keep breathing while we keep moving?

Drastic technological changes are the only answer. These changes must be insisted on by the consumer, pushed by industry and government, and they must be rigidly enforced once accomplished.

How do we clean up what is admittedly the number one air polluter while meeting vital transportation needs and avoiding chaos and collapse in the industry that provides jobs for more Americans than any other? As a first priority we have to equip today's engine with devices to cut harmful emissions. By 1980, we can cut these emissions by 90 percent and lower the overall pollution from automobiles to where it was in 1940. But that's not enough. Next step: develop other, cleaner methods of propulsive power: perhaps electric motors or steam engines. Automotive engineers are working on this now, but it will be years before invention can be translated into mass production. There are no shortcuts.

These are the inescapable realities, but they have been obscured by controversy. We must make auto pollution more than a campus cause or a political plaything. The challenge we must realistically face breaks down into three parts:

First, industry shares the blame for the trouble we're in. Now it must invest its financial and technical resources to help get us out. In fact, two big industries are concerned—automobiles and oil.

Then government is deeply involved. Sensible standards and regulations are vital, but they must be based on solid knowledge, not on political opportunism and bandwagon vote-chasing.

Finally the individual consumer must do his part. He must demand cleaner cars and cleaner fuels. That's easy enough; the rest is more difficult: He'll have to back his convictions with his pocketbook, and help pay for cleaner cars and fuels. He will even have to trade in some of his sloppy habits, like running poorly maintained vehicles that spew unnecessary filth into the atmosphere. Or insisting on souped-up, overpowered engines that provide thrills on the highway but create excessive pollution while wasting high-octane fuel in everyday driving.

Let's look at industry first. Although a good deal of blame falls on industry, it is not true that Detroit has done nothing but sit on its hands while the rest of us gagged on exhaust fumes. Until the 1950s no one even knew that automobiles were responsible for smog. It was only then that studies at Cal Tech showed how certain combustion products reacted in sunlight to cast an eye-stinging blanket over Los Angeles.

What happens is that unburned hydrocarbons escaping from gas tank, crankcase and tail pipe combine with the nitrogen oxides that result from combustion. Of course, these smog makers are not a car's only pollutants. There's also carbon monoxide, a deadly gas; and particulate matter, such as lead salts, which are found in the exhaust smoke and soot.

Among these, lead is one of the minor contributors to pollution, and don't be convinced that just by using unleaded gasoline, you're doing all you should for cleaner air. In fact, there is no consensus among the experts about the effect of lead removal on pollution.

Some oil companies marketing unleaded gasoline promote its use as a way to reduce pollution. On the other hand one of the tests reported in a Bureau of Mines study showed that some unleaded gasolines can produce more smog makers than leaded gasolines of comparable octane quality. But the question is almost academic: exhaust control devices in the 1975 models may well require lead-free gasoline to operate, while taking care of most hydrocarbons as well.

California was the first state to regulate automotive emissions. Beginning in 1961, all cars sold in that state were required to carry a simple crankcase valve that stopped 25 percent of the unburned hydrocarbons. Since 1963, when this device was installed in all cars sold in this country, the manufacturers have developed other types of smog traps to meet the increasingly strict standards of the Air Quality Act of 1967. In the 1970 models about 70 percent of the carbon monoxide has been eliminated. The 1971s generate 83 percent less hydrocarbons. This means that today's new car emits less than 700 pounds of pollutants a year, as against the more than 2000 pounds a year produced by the average 1962 car, when new.

Already today, if we had only 1970s and 1971s on the road, the automobile's share of air pollution would be more like 15 percent nationally, although some metropolitan areas would still have unacceptable levels of pollution. It will be another ten years before the attrition of older cars takes us down to that figure. Meanwhile automotive pollution will keep declining steadily though the number of cars goes up.

Automobile manufacturers are working on antipollution devices which will cut harmful emissions by 90 percent once they are perfected in the laboratory and translated into mass production. This technological breakthrough is likely to be accomplished by about 1980, but even that is not enough—for after 1980 the pollution curve may rise again as our growing population requires more and more vehicles.

So industry must develop other, cleaner methods of propulsive power. "Give us steam cars, battery cars or fuel cell engines," are popular cries today. Don't forget that steam cars were in use in 1910 but had so many disadvantages and cost so much that they could not compete. Neither could the old electric. That's why we are not driving steam cars or electrics today. No other power plant could match the all-around efficiency, convenience and economy of the piston-type gasoline engine, and no new engineering advances have made today's experimental steam and electric cars much better. Moreover, electrics would require an enormous increase in the country's generating capacity to recharge millions of auto batteries—and we're brown-out short of generating power even as it is. As for the vaunted fuel cell, it is for the foreseeable future a low-power, high-cost device suitable for a spacecraft but not the highway.

Of course, industry—and not just the big auto makers—are working hard to find viable new power sources. Gas turbine engines, for instance, have been under development for years, and there have even been experimental models that cruised incognito on Detroit's streets long before the public became pollution-conscious. Some transportation companies are also getting into the picture. Greyhound has road-tested a prototype bus with a nearly pollution-free turbine. Ten production models will go into service within a few months. Greyhound is also running a pilot study of a dual fuel system using natural gas (which produces almost no pollution) in cities, and low-pollution diesel fuel on the highways.

But don't let anybody kid you that the answer is just around the corner. All those sensational newspaper and magazine stories and TV shows to the contrary, it'll be a long time before your family car will be basically different from what it is today.

Now let's look at government's role. While the automobile industry is not the only villain, it hardly deserves all the credit for the antipollution progress to date. Without consumer pressure and resulting government regulation it is doubtful that we would have come even this far in our quest for cleaner air.

The California law of 1961 and the Air Quality Act of 1967 were the beginning. Considerably more stringent measures are now on the way, and there is no doubt that even tighter legislation will be required in the future as our vehicle population climbs to at least 160 million by 1990.

But government regulation should be related to technology; the latest legislation does not seem to be. Under the amendments to the Air Quality Act which Congress recently sent to the White House, major exhaust pollutants must be cut to ten percent of existing levels by January 1, 1975, with a one-year grace period written into the bill in case automotive engineers cannot come up with the necessary answers in time for the deadline. Any additional time would require a new act of Congress. Unfortunately, this legislation was drafted without any public hearings at which technical evidence could be presented.

The gestation period of new cars takes a couple of years even when no major changes are involved. And now, less than four years hence, production-line models are supposed to incorporate equipment that hasn't even been perfected in the laboratory.

The only argument in favor of such peremptory law-making is that it puts the car makers under the gun, and that they will work harder. Probably so, but opponents of the law point out that this legislation can end up costing billions to accomplish virtually nothing—especially in view of the fact that existing technology could fulfill the decreed target date, standards only fractionally lower than those demanded by the new law.

Most experts predict that the auto companies will probably not come up to the exacting standard, and that Congress will only end up extending the period. We agree, and we believe this law was passed in political expediency under pressure from consumer groups. We believe the lawmakers fully expect to extend the deadline. This kind of headline legislation does no one good. We suggest that from now on, all such legislative proposals be reviewed for feasibility by representatives of the National Academy of Sciences and the National Academy of Engineering.

In addition to enacting sensible legislation, the government should encourage

CAMPING with all the COMFORTS

Manufacturers of camping equipment are making it difficult for a family to really "rough it." You may impress your friends with your courage when you tell them you're going camping on your vacation, but camp stoves, catalytic heaters, and mantle-type lanterns let you take the conveniences of home along with you.

Camp stoves put an end to searching for firewood, burned meals, teary eyes, and blackened pans. Heat is as easy to control as with an ordinary range. In fact, if you're used to cooking over gas at home, you'll find it's exactly the same. Just remember that altitude, temperature, and wind will affect cooking time.

When purchasing a camp stove, make certain you choose one big enough for your family. The number of burners isn't as important as the distance between burners. Most camp stoves have burners at least 9 inches between centers, but you'll find those with burners spaced 11 inches are better for larger pans. If you feel you need an additional burner, invest in an auxiliary one-burner stove.

Mantle-type lanterns have been around for years, but they never cease to amaze the tenderfoot with their tremendous light output. There are several points to keep in mind when buying your first lantern. While the two-mantle models do not double the light of the single-mantle version, they do significantly increase the output and cost but a few dollars more. You'll find the extra light worth the added expenditure. The most popular type has a ventilator (top) with a narrow rim. The lamp floods the whole campsite with light, but the glare may become annoying if you set the lamp on a tabletop close to where you are eating. A ventilator with a wider rim eliminates the glare problem.

The catalytic heater is a relative newcomer to the camping convenience group, but it operates on a principle that's been around for years in pocket hand warmers. Fuel is oxidized on a special metal catalyst, producing heat without a flame.

Buy the heater that will meet your needs—not an extra big one "just in case." An adjustable model is well worth its extra cost. If you're planning cold-weather camping, invest in a smaller, single-setting heater as an auxiliary unit.

Gasoline or LP gas appliances?

White gasoline has long been the standard fuel for camp stoves and lanterns. Check this fuel for cleanliness; oil or foreign particles may damage your appliance. Manufacturers of camping equipment combat this problem by offering their own fuels—highly refined naphthas that are really better than white gas ever was. These are available in almost every hardware store and sporting goods department.

LP gas (liquefied petroleum) is rapidly gaining popularity as a fuel for camping equipment. Although operating cost per hour is higher than with conventional fuels, it's more convenient to carry and store. Originally it was available only in 14-ounce disposable cylinders. Now you can buy equipment made to operate off a large, refillable tank. LP gas bought from bulk petroleum dealers runs about 10 to 15 cents per pound. Ten pounds should handle all the cooking and lighting needs of a family of four for a week.

Accessories

When it comes to buying camp cookware, you'll regret it if you pinch pennies. The best outdoor cookware is Teflon coated—a feature you'll appreciate outdoors even more than you do at home. Plastic cups and dishes are another good investment. They're easier to clean than aluminum, and won't dent or break. Also, on a cold blowy day, they'll keep food and drinks warmer longer—without burning your hands.

A folding stand for your camp stove will put the burners at a height where you're used to cooking, and doubles nicely as a table base. Ovens made for camp stoves fold compactly and have heat indicators to make baking as easy as in your range at home.

Always carry spare generators for lanterns and stoves. This is the part of the fuel line where the fuel and air mixture is vaporized. It's prone to carbon accumulations, and needs periodic replacement. The part is inexpensive, easy to change, and indispensible when the old one becomes clogged.

Lanterns are safe and almost foolproof, but they are subject to breakage. A metal carrying case is a wise investment. You should always carry spare mantles, and you'll be smart to have an extra glass globe along. Special yellow globes are available in all sizes, and they're a godsend on summer evenings—they don't attract bugs.

If you use liquid fuel, get the best container you can buy, and tie a small filter funnel to it.

Safety

All heat-producing camping gear can be hazardous, but it needn't be if you use common sense.

- Always carefully read the manufacturer's instructions before using the appliance, and carry these instructions with the appliance.
- Don't use liquid fuels around an open flame, and don't refill appliances until they've had time to cool.
- Combustion (even catalytic) produces carbon monoxide and consumes oxygen. Use appliances only where you have good cross ventilation.
- Although the mantle-type lanterns are intended for light, they produce considerable heat. Treat them as carefully as you would an open flame, and don't suspend them from anything combustible (such as tent ridgepoles, dry tree limbs, etc.)
- If you use propane, have the tanks filled only by qualified dealers. Check lines and seals periodically for leaks. Liquid dish detergent spread on hose connections will bubble if gas is escaping.
- Always let the appliance cool before packing it away when you break camp. ■ know about color?

Probably more than you give him credit for.

But women are the ones who are really aware of the colors around them. In nature, for example, while the male bird may have all the gaudy plumage, it's the female who is attracted by the color. She is the one with the keen eye.

That same eye is the one that looks at your home. It's inside you somewhere and it knows instinctively what's right and what's wrong. If it says candy pink is perfect for your bedroom, then candy pink it should be.

Ask the man who borrows one.

We asked lawn mower expert, Tony P. Monaco, to describe for us his idea of the ideal lawn mower:

"It's one you sit on. After all, a man works hard all week. His body deserves a rest.

But just being able to sit on it isn't enough. Your riding mower should have an adjustable seat. After all, you may not be the only one who's ever gonna use it, and you always want to make sure the controls are within easy reach.

One I especially go for is the one Bob Stevens next door owns. It's a Jacobsen Mark II. Got some terrific things on it. Electric starting. And this automatic shift thing where when you push either up or down on the pedal, you go forward or backward. Take your foot off the pedal, and it acts like a brake. Your hands never have to leave the wheel. That's very important for your wives and teenagers.

Then sometimes when Bob's busy, I really go for that nice Ray Thiem's big Jacobsen lawn and garden tractor. It's got a grass cutting attachment, a snow throwing attachment, I'm telling you, it's got just about everything.

Yes, for my money, Jacobsen makes some ideal riding lawn mowers and tractors."

Don't be surprised if you get a big sales job on Jacobsen riding mowers from someone besides a lawn mower salesman. By some strange coincidence, the best kind you can buy just happens to be the best kind someone else can borrow.

How to make decorative concrete tiles

Photographs: Charles Pearson. Architect: Anker I. Molver. Source: Daisy Pearson

How would you like a new floor that costs little, has lots of texture and color, improves with age and never needs special care?

Not many floor materials could fit that description; stone and concrete tiles can. Ideal for entryways, patios, walkways and hearths, these tiles are very inexpensive because you make and install them yourself. It's a simple job that requires no special tools or expertise.

Where to use these tiles

If you plan on installing them on an interior surface, make certain your floor will support all the additional weight. The 18x21 by 2-inch-deep tiles shown being made on pages 134-135, for example, weigh about 50 pounds each. For interior use it's best to use the tiles as a decorative highlight rather than attempt to cover an entire floor. In the room above, for instance, the stone tiles are used only in the main entry hallway and around the living room fireplace. The fireplace mantel is also made from the same tiles, but has the extra support of two steel and wood lintel beams. Wherever you decide to use them, you'll find these tiles add an uncommon feeling of warmth and natural beauty. And since they're so easy to make, you may want to turn the whole job into a family project.

How to find the right size tile

Tile size depends mainly on the amount of area to be covered, but you may want to make several sizes to introduce pattern variety. Begin by measuring the exact length and width of the area you wish covered. Next, make a scale drawing of the dimensions on a sheet of graph paper. One inch equaling one foot is an easy scale to work with. Use this paper to experiment with the different ways various tile patterns and sizes would look like.

As an example, say you'd like to cover a 6x6-foot area. Using your scale, you'll find that nine 2x2-foot tiles will do the job. You could even use 36 1x1-foot tiles, 144 6x6-inch tiles, or a combination of all of them.

But say you have an odd-size area, such as 3¾ x 4½ feet. Change these dimensions to inches. This gives you an area of 45x54 inches. Next, divide each dimension by three and four feet respectively ($45 \div 3 = 15$, and $54 \div 4 = 13\frac{1}{2}$). This gives you a correct tile size of 15x13½ inches; 12 of these tiles will cover the odd-size area exactly.

It's harder to buy a chair than to buy a car.

Your car doesn't have to harmonize with other cars on the oad. Or go with the color scheme in your garage. Or complement our shrubbery when it's parked in your driveway.

But a chair has to get along with everything else in the room. It has to be the right size. The right shape. Have the right ıbric. And have it in the right color. Or it looks wrong.

So don't let anyone tell you it's easy to buy a chair.

What makes it less hard to buy a Drexel chair, or any Drexel pholstered furniture, is that you can take a lot for granted.

You don't have to worry about the chair standing up. The ames are all made from seasoned, kiln-dried hardwood, to revent any chance of warping.

You don't have to worry about comfort. Every chair is engi- ered to the body by putting stronger coils where the weight concentrated, and softer ones where the weight is less.

You don't have to worry about the fabric, because every one is protected with a stain-repellent finish at no extra cost.

You don't have to worry about the price, because you won't find more chair for your money. (Shop around and you'll see.)

What you do have to concern yourself with is picking the style of chair and the fabric from hundreds of patterns and colors, to work with the other things in your room. And that should be as enjoyable as buying a dress to go with a handbag, shoes and belt.

It's just that the chair will be around a lot longer than the dress. And a lot longer than the family car, too. So you can use all the extra assurance you can get.

Every piece of Drexel furniture carries the Drexel name. You'll find it in the upper drawer of every cabinet. On the underside of every table. On the deck of every upholstered piece.

Breaking the food codes

Consumer advocates have long been pressuring manufacturers to show the dates on perishable foods in plain English. A few states do require that perishable foods carry uncoded dates so shoppers can check the freshness of foods. Yet most code dating practices still are designed primarily to help the retailer rotate his stock and remove foods after certain deadlines.

Jewel Food Stores, a major food chain in Chicago, recently took a swing at unscrutable coding with a voluntary program to help consumers decipher codes. The new coding program operates in four departments—fresh meats, processed meats, dairy products, and what's loosely termed snacks. In each, display car explain the coding symbols consumers. The stores al offer customers code referen books, which list the cod used by the store, as well the codes shown on all pro ucts sold.

This decoding progra makes it relatively simple f customers to check the fres ness of foods they buy. As o of the first major efforts of t food industry to break trad tionally arcane food codes, t program is a valuable mod for other stores—and for leg lative proposals. Self-cleaning ovens: How good?

Self-cleaning ovens, first touted as something of a kitchen miracle, have been on the market for more than five years. According to industry spokesmen (and independent researchers as well), users generally say they're satisfied—but with a few qualifications.

Most often, the enchantment with self-cleaning ovens varies with the type of oven—pyrolytic or catalytic. The pyrolytic system sears off grease and foods in a special cleaning cycle at temperatures of 850 to 1,050 degrees. Although this oven comes with a higher price tag than the catalytic oven, it's more apt to please homemakers who want a spotless, like-new oven interior after cleaning.

Catalytic ovens, which cle themselves at normal cooki temperatures, dispose of m of the cooking mess. Howev as many buyers have fou the catalytic process does produce a spotless oven af each use.

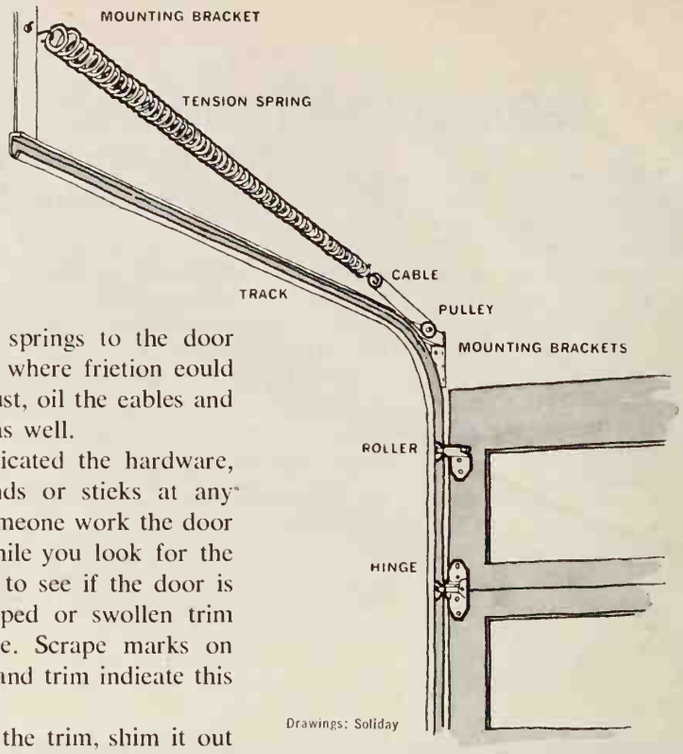
How to adjust your garage door



Drawings: Soliday

A well-balaneed garage door should remain open when it's about two feet off the ground. Above that spot it should rise slowly; below, it should gradually fall.

If your door aets balky, eheek the moving hardware. Most overhead doors have metal rollers attaehed to braekets near the door edges. These are loeated at hinge points where the door seetions eonneet. Lubricate these metal rollers and hinges onee a year; be sure you get oil on the roller shafts and bearings also. Do likewise with the traek itself by smearing grease on the inside. Pay partieular attention to the eurved seetions where binding most frequently oeeurs.

Also lubrieate the pulleys that guide the eables on each side of the traek. There are usually two pulleys, one on each side of the door. Follow the cable that eonneets the balaneing springs to the door and lubricate points where frietion eould oeeur. To prevent rust, oil the eables and the tension springs as well.

After you've lubricated the hardware, see if the door binds or stieks at any point. If so, have someone work the door from the outside while you look for the trouble spot. Cheek to see if the door is binding against warped or swollen trim pieees on either side. Scrape marks on the outside of door and trim indieate this eondition.

To fix it, pry off the trim, shim it out from the wall, then renail. Sometimes you ean get by with simply sanding the door faee slightly or scraping paint away from the inside of the molding.

A garage door ean also bind or stick because of loose bolts that hold braekets and hinges to the door and hold the tracks in plaee. This allows the door to sag or twist out of alignment. Cheek fastenings for tightness.

To work properly, the door's traeks must be perfectly parallel. Measure the distance between the tracks at several points to be sure. You'll notice the mounting brackets usually have slotted holes for the lag bolts. You can make minor adjustments if wear and tear have knocked the guide tracks out of alignment, causing the door to stick or jam.

Another problem is a cable that has slipped off its pulley. To fix, raise the door to release the cable tension and pry the cable back over the pulley rim. Then tighten as necessary.

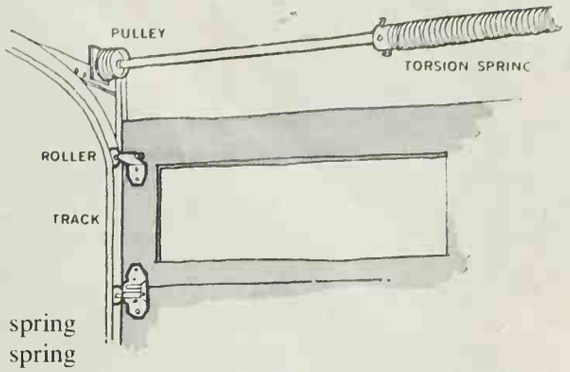
If your door moves smoothly but needs balancing, the springs may have lost their tension. Most garage doors have extension springs which stretch as tension is applied. They are at maximum stretch when the door is closed, and under little tension when the door is up. To increase the tension on the springs, tighten the cables until the door has reached the proper balancing point.

When you make the adjustments, secure the door in the open position. Be certain the door is secured tightly, so it won't crash down.

On some doors, an S-hook at the end of the cable slips into one of several holes in the track support. To increase tension on the spring, keep moving the hook one hole at a time until you've achieved the proper tension and balance. Remember to move each side equally so that the tension will be balanced.

For doors with an S-hook on the spring end, unfasten the cable, move the spring back one or two holes and reassemble. Still another variation is the cable end that goes through a cable clamp or eye-bolt-and-nut combination that locks the cable in place. On these you'll have to first loosen the nut or bolt, then pull up on the cable until you've applied the needed tension. Measure how much of the cable you pull through the eye (past its original adjustment) so that you can pull the same amount on the other side. Work about one inch at a time, then re-test the tension on the door.

If you find that no amount of cable shortening does the job, chances are that the springs need replacing. Dealers can supply springs for most doors if you can give them the make and model number.



Another type of spring mechanism is known as a torsion spring. It fits across the door top and is fastened to a bar. The door winds and unwinds the spring as the cables turn the pulleys. To increase the tension here, you must wind special plugs at each end. Because of the tremendous tension involved in this type of mechanism, let a professional serviceman handle the job.

The latching mechanism on a door that has been readjusted and realigned sometimes needs adjusting also. Loosen the slotted plate or mounting bracket and move it up or down slightly until it engages properly. ■

Color & how people live with it

Colors are very personal. If you like certain ones and feel comfortable with them, often they're right for you. We asked the homeowners whose rooms you see on these 14 pages why they chose their particular schemes. As you see, some of the reasons they gave were highly practical, others were strictly a mark of good taste.

By Peg Rumely, Home Furnishings Editor

1. Although partial to red, a New Orleans family was reluctant to use such a spectacular color in large doses. "We felt an all-red living room might be too much day after day," said the homemaker, "especially in our hot, humid climate. We wanted to show the cool side of red." Their solution was to temper red with equal amounts of royal blue. They matched the oversize proportions of their sectional sofa with a large-scale fabric pattern which they repeated on an armchair. The lively red/blue scheme was carried onto the walls with a subtle stripe. Accent pieces were chosen in undiluted shades of both colors.

2. A potpourri of pattern and bright colors gives this small sitting/guest room a truly happy atmosphere. "We wanted a cheerful room for overnight guests and a spot the whole family could enjoy, too," explained this Cambridge, Massachusetts homemaker. An updated French fabric, fashioned into tieback draperies and cornice, sets the tone of this basically traditional room which is a blend of old things given an exciting new look. Keeping pace with the high-voltage colors is a profusion of pattern on every possible surface. A chartreuse-covered sleep sofa successfully cools down this very warm scheme.

3. An energy-charged five-year-old should have a room to match his own high spirits. One New England mother gave her son exactly that. To a peppy red, white and blue scheme she added generous helpings of two very strong patterns. A regimental stripe fabric covers the walls and window shade. In place of conventional bedspreads—deeply tufted comforters in a crisp plaid. On the wall, two familiar comic strip characters register their approval.

1. Living in an older house has its own special problems. One of the most pressing is how to make scarred walls look presentable. A decorator husband solved this dilemma by using a deep-toned background color. He painted the kitchen walls a bronze olive which camouflaged defects and complemented a collection of Early American memorabilia. In place of a conventional table—a draftsman's table painted the same olive tone as the walls. High stools cushioned in calico are used for seating.

2. A Minnesota winter can be long and bitterly cold, as anyone living in that northern clime will readily agree. "Instead of waiting impatiently for the first robin to appear," said one homemaker, "we've devised our own way of beating the calendar. With green, we can enjoy spring all year round." The treillage wallpaper sets the garden mood and rattan screens, which flank a sliding glass door, support it. Bright accents of fresh yellow point up the buoyant springtime mood.

3. A dedicated antiquer from Detroit credits a Tiffany shade with both the style and colors of this guest room. "Once I'd found the shade, the whole room sort of fell into place. We painted the walls olive below the chair rail and the remainder white." This restrained use of green in the background keeps the room from appearing too heavy. Glass beads at the window recall the past as does the big brass bed. Rivaling the Tiffany shade as a focal point is a handmade rug from Portugal which brings a dash of poppy red to this verdant setting.

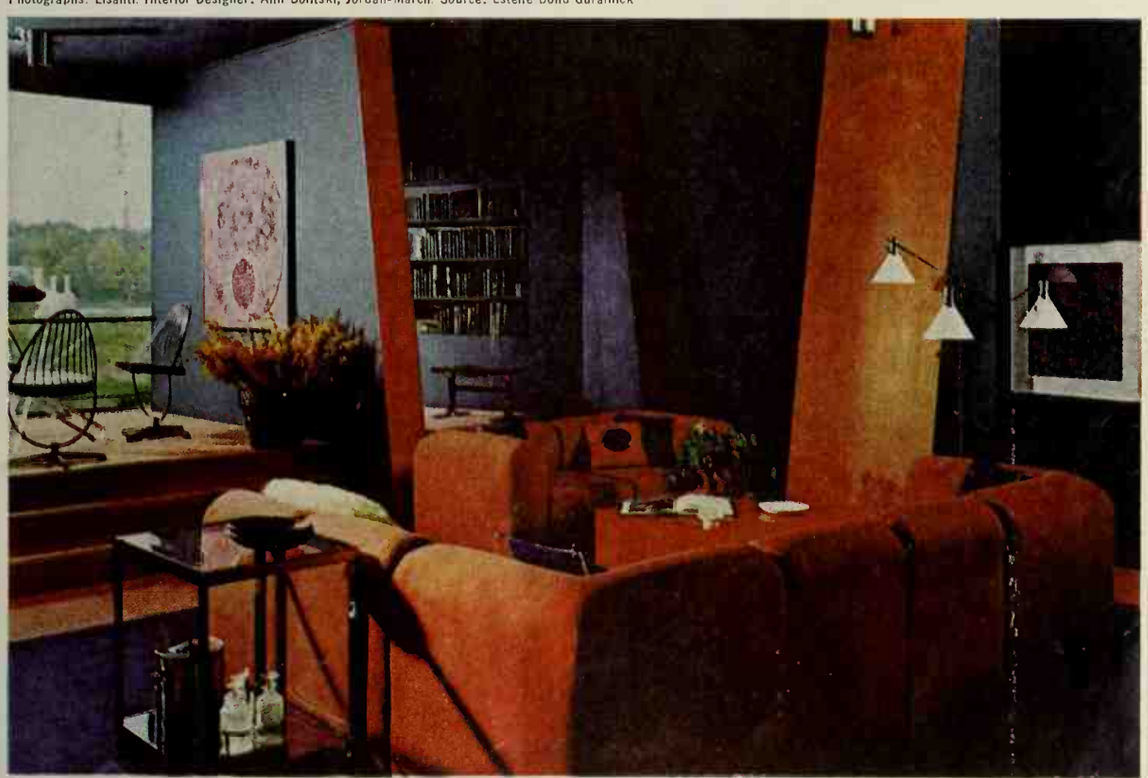
"Breezy Orange always buoys me up."



Richard Ryan for Bloomingdale's Bergen County

1. "I spend eight hours a day in a clinical-looking office," said a working wife. "When I come home at night I want to be surrounded by color—preferably my favorite one. Breezy orange always buoys me up." Given the go-ahead by her husband, she painted their downstairs den with deck enamel for that wet look. The couple constructed four plywood panels and fitted them into a ceiling track. A painted supergraphic design flows onto the solid end wall, giving the entire window wall an unbroken look. To underscore the potency of so much orange, furnishings in the den were confined to black and white.

2. This colorful "happening" occurred when a Boston teenager announced she simply couldn't live without flower-power furniture. Diplomatically guided by her mother, she played up the floral pattern (screen-printed onto the furniture) by using solid colors elsewhere in the room. Lone exception—plaid in upholstered chairs, which is quite compatible since it features the same sizzling shades. Melting into the scheme are a multi-shag rug and mushroom stools which echo the gold of the coverlets.

3. This architecturally exciting room demanded a strong color scheme to dramatize its unique character. So an East Coast family chose tangy orange to spotlight a series of canted walls. They then unleashed this lively color on vinyl tile floor, velvet-upholstered sofa and lacquered cube table. A rich background of deep purple walls, ceiling and area rug doubles the effect of this stimulating shade of orange. Sectional seating adds soft lines.

1. Lack of natural light prompted a Cincinnati family to paint their small den/guest room a bright canary yellow. "The only window in the room looks smack into the wall of a neighbor's house," said the husband, "and the atmosphere was pretty gloomy." But once this family found the courage to use a spotlight color on the background, the whole room immediately snapped into focus. Popsicle purple—for the painted Parsons-style table desk, matted pictures and sofa bed upholstery—proved a surprisingly effective accent color. A touch of kelly green in the chair cushion brings still more sparkle to the scheme.

2. "For our living room, we chose yellow because it's alive and makes us feel that way," explained a midwestern homemaker. "You never feel depressed in a yellow room." Floral stripe wallpaper accents an end wall and reappears on hinged plywood screens which flank a pair of six-foot sliding glass doors. Backsides of the screens were painted yellow to match the sheer draperies. A wallpaper-coordinated fabric upholsters a graceful wing chair. Twin armchairs in green velvet temper the brilliant yellow.

3. Some people like a feeling of serenity in the master bedroom, and they achieve it with pastels or pale tints of their favorite colors. Others, like the North Carolina couple who lives here, prefer the stimulus of strong primary colors. Here equal amounts of bright blue and yellow are pitted against each other with electrifying results. A contrast of textures also enlivens this contemporary scene—the wet look of vinyl bedspread, chair upholstery and drapery—the sheen of chrome and painted furniture—and the thickly tufted softness of a shag rug.

1. Newly married, an Indiana couple had only limited funds for decorating their first home. "We decided on a rich blue/purple for the dining room walls," said the bride, "and then painted our auction-acquired furniture chalk white. Somehow the deep-toned background brings out the best in our castoffs." The newlyweds' one brand-new purchase was an area rug in emerald green, a color they repeated in a paisley table runner.

2. Bright blue bandannas initiated the crisp color scheme in this bedroom occupied by an active seven-year-old. Explained his mother, "We wanted something different from the toy soldiers, cars and animals you usually find in wallpaper designs for children." Here a vinyl-coated wallpaper covers the walls and silhouettes the white furniture pieces. Real cotton bandannas were appliqued on a tangerine blanket, which doubles as a bedspread, and were also fashioned into a pillow cover. The tangy tangerine accent reappears on painted window frame.

3. A brilliant turquoise bathes the walls of a boy's bedroom in an Illinois home. The dominant color as well as accent hues were taken from a Marimekko fabric, the young occupant's sophisticated choice for a bedspread. Dormer was dramatized with stark white paint. The window treatment is clean and uncluttered, reflecting the overall simplicity of this decorating scheme. Frames were painted deep blue, and white slatted shades hung over the openings. Surprise color accent: bright green desk.

4. Faced with a small, dark entry, a New Hampshire family took the less obvious color route. "Instead of painting the area with a light color to make it appear bigger," said the husband, "we let blue go dark and richly dramatic." They schemed the entry around a lush navy blue patterned wallpaper which, while subdued in tone, has a vibrant quality. This same deep hue was used to paint the woodwork, front door and closet door.

1. How do you create a color scheme with masculine and feminine overtones for a master bedroom? You could begin as a man and wife in Denver did, by selecting a fabric which is pleasing to both. "In this stylized pattern," explained the wife, "we found a medley of warm earth tones which we like best since we're both naturalists." Grayed walls foster a feeling of restfulness and also show off the pattern to good advantage. Leather campaign chair and stool have a masculine look while the fur throw and bronze shag carpet suggest a feminine softness.

2. A deep chocolate brown fills this suburban Chicago living room with warmth. The physician and his wife who live here chose a low-key scheme to help him unwind from the pressures of his practice. "The soft brown color has the soothing effect of a tranquilizer," commented the doctor. "It's easy to relax in a room with deep earth tones." Dark walls also silhouette the fine pieces of traditional furniture. Sole pattern statement in the same rich brown is the crewel embroidery on a wing chair.

3. New England's rigorous weather prompted one family to choose a warm cinnamon for their living room walls. "We're housebound a good part of every winter, so we wanted a cozy look indoors," confided this Maine wife and mother. A velvet-covered Recamier, thickly tufted area rug, and wicker and chrome pull-up chair complement the room's low-keyed scheme. The subdued background, with only a token accent of pattern, makes a perfect backdrop for an exquisite tabletop collection of crystal.

4. Time only enhances the mellow tones of an oriental rug. If you're lucky enough to own one of these ageless beauties, you have a made-to-order color scheme. That's how one Ohio family reasoned—and with smashing results. Taking their color cue from the rug, they painted the walls terra cotta. Furnishings were kept to the neutral tones to avoid diluting the richness of the scheme. A flower-splashed pillow provides a secondary pattern accent.

1. "It's an old custom—pink for girls and blue for boys—and in our family, it still works. Pink is feminine like my six-year-old daughter." A Florida mother backs up her statement by pointing to the bedroom she planned for her child. The room has all the sentimental charm of an old-fashioned valentine. Pink and red floral fabric was lavished on walls, windows and the canopied alcove which holds a snow-white wicker bed. Bright red in the rug, coverlet and painted desk serves to perk up the pink.

2. You don't have to ask why this Houston homemaker chose rosy pink for her sun porch. It sets off her own blonde beauty. "I love this spot for working on my needlepoint or enjoying a second cup of coffee in the morning," she said. "Being surrounded by such happy colors makes me feel good—even on the dreariest day." The flamestitch draperies in snappy yellow and pink can be tied back to reveal the view outdoors, or released to cover the glass when the late afternoon sun begins to flood the porch. White vinyl upholstered sofa and wicker pieces add to the room's open and airy feeling.

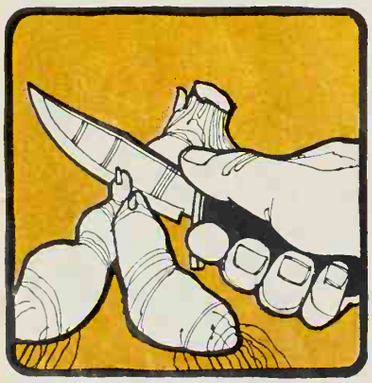
Bushy, dwarf dahlias (which grow only one to two feet tall) are commonly started from seed. Sow three seeds per pot; cut off all but the largest seedling.

When soil is warm, transplant to the garden. Note fat tuber developed by the seedling. You will get a profusion of bloom and won't need to stake plants.



Standard dahlias are commonly started from tubers in spring when the soil warms up. Clumps lifted and stored over winter must be divided before replanting. Cut through stem stub with a sturdy knife and get a part of the crown with each root. If all this throws you, buy starts at a garden center. They'll cost a bit more but you'll save yourself a lot of time and work.

If you buy only one tuber of an expensive variety and want to have more of the same, take cuttings of shoots (above) and root them in coarse sand or half perlite and half peat. Take about five inches of stem, leaving two pairs of leaves. Transplant outdoors when rooted and all danger of frost is past.

Before planting, set 1x2 stakes for supporting the plants. If you drive a stake later, you may damage tuber. Make planting pockets four inches deep by each stake. Set tubers horizontally with the crown (from which buds arise) by the stake. Use care if tender buds show. Cover tubers only an inch or two. Then fill in later as the shoots continue to grow.

Make a shallow basin around each plant to hold water. As plants grow, more water is needed. Too much nitrogen will give lush foliage but few flowers. To be safe, use a low-nitrogen fertilizer formulated for bulbs. You'll find it at any garden center.

Allow only one shoot to grow per tuber and when it has two pairs of leaves, pinch out the tip. The stems that result will need tying as they grow and become heavy.

As each new stem matures watch for flower buds and re- move every side bud on each stem. This directs all the strengt into the large terminal bud fo choice bloom. You want only th best if you're going to exhibit.

If you must cut dahlias in th heat of day, char the cut for ea intake of water. Watering dee and often means the foliage ar flowers will be gorged with liqu during late evenings. If you c flowers then, cut the stems on slant under water and blooms w hold up well for indoor use.

Patio Houses

Outdoor living with indoor privacy

By Stephen Mead, Architectural Editor

It used to be that if you wanted seclusion you moved to the suburbs. But as suburbs grew bigger and more crowded, the old privacy was often lost. Now a new type of house-and-land arrangement lets you regain that quiet, residential atmosphere and live in an inexpensive, spacious and contemporary home. We call it the "patio house." We think you'll like it. Here's why.

The patio house substitutes a completely enclosed deck and patio area for the wide-open yard of the conventional suburban house. Six-foot walls surround the outdoor spaces to give you maximum privacy. You can entertain friends, lie in the sun or enjoy a candlelight dinner on the deck without worrying about neighborhood sightseers. Such outdoor living with indoor privacy allows you to use and enjoy your backyard more than you ever thought possible.

There are dollar-and-cents advantages too. You pay less for a patio house because of its smaller lot; and having a deck and patio instead of a lawn means fewer upkeep demands on your time and budget.

Our example house, found in the new town of Columbia, Md., is built on a cul-de-sac lot plan that conserves land while protecting the individuality and privacy of each house. Though built on less than one-fifth of an acre, it would work well on any lot. The outdoor area in the rear is divided into two main areas: a patio off the family room and kitchen, and a pool and deck area adjoining the living room and master bedroom. Wide windows and three sliding glass doors promote a casual indoor/outdoor living pattern, both visually and functionally.

The accommodating 2137-square-foot floor plan provide for wide-open spaces to match the outdoor mood. Set off to the quiet side of the house is the bedroom wing. Note the windowless wall on the right side (see plan); it serves as a privacy wall for the house next door.

The high-sloped ceiling and large glass areas make the living and dining areas bigger and brighter. Open the door to the trellis-covered deck, and you double your entertaining space. The patio, family room and kitchen constitute another in-and-out activity center. A sliding glass door connects family room and patio. A pass-through window links the kitchen with a serving counter outside. And what could be more conducive to creative cooking than this contemporary kitchen with its wide-open sunshine view?

China Chicanery

Elizabeth D. Craster, Home Entertainment Editor

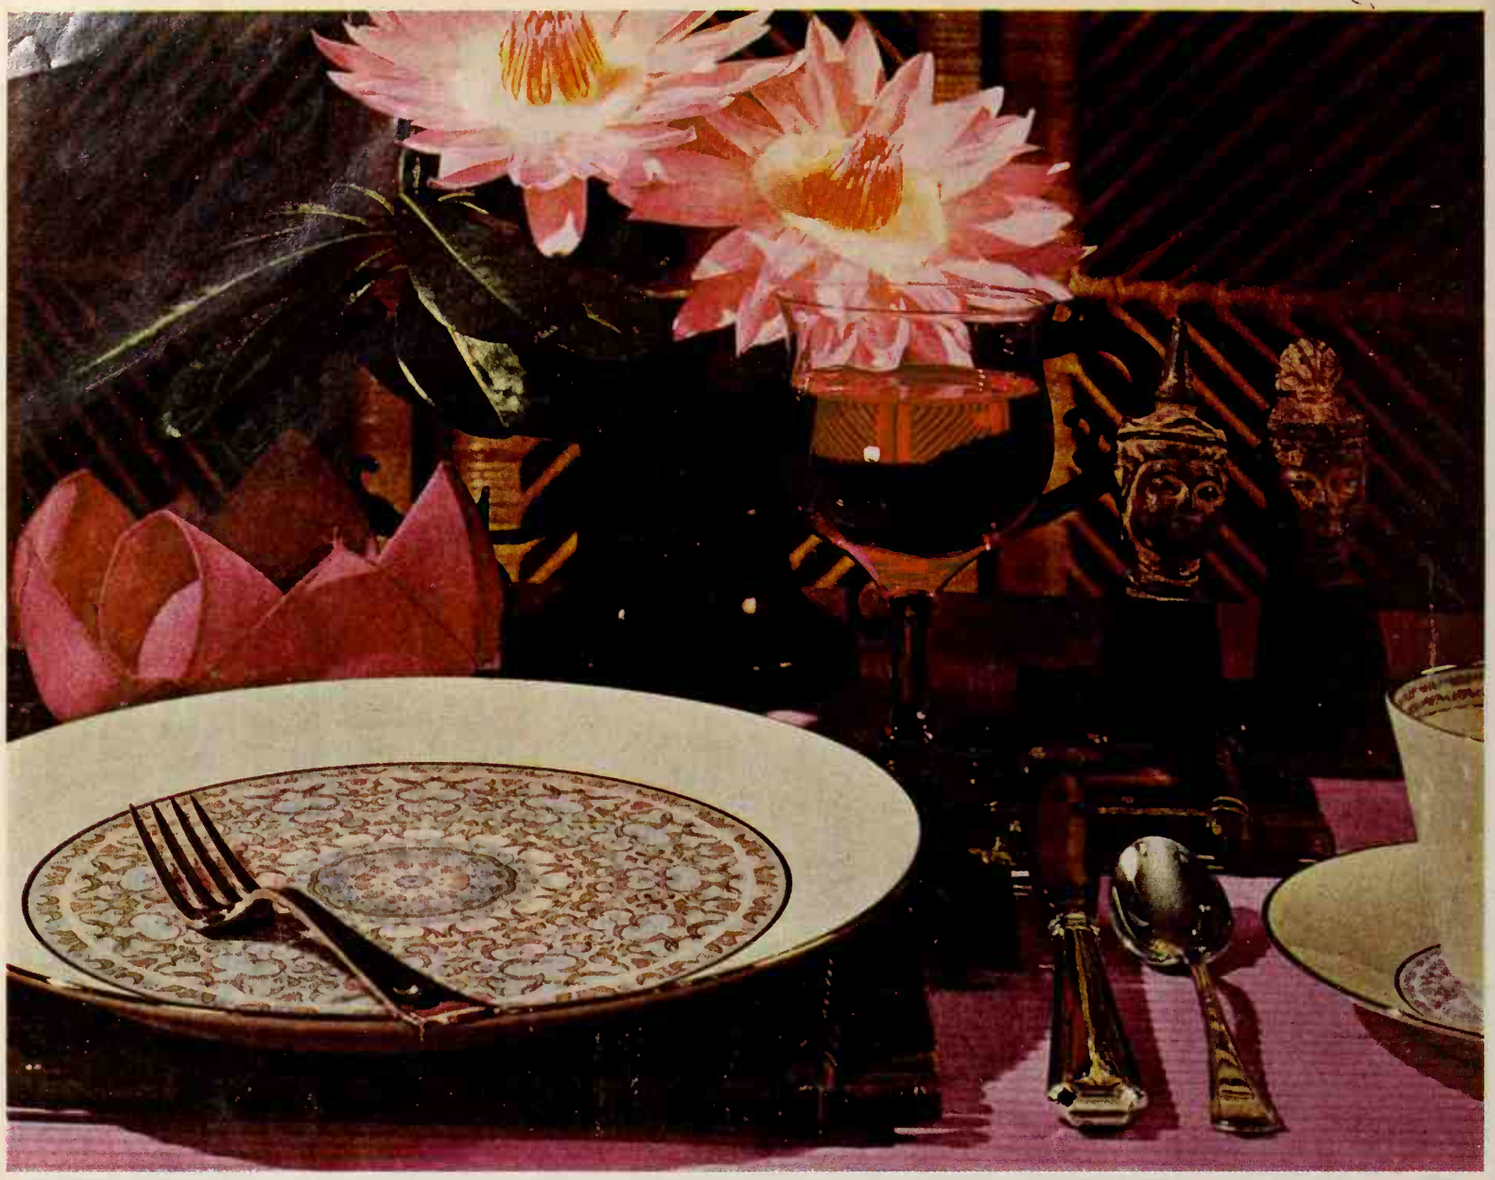
There's no such thing as being stuck with a china pattern. Too formal, you think, or too demanding in design. Impossible to give your table a different look. But not so! Just to prove our point, we've experimented with one plain and one fancy pattern and show you how versatile table settings can be when accessories are changed and vivid backgrounds added. Make the most, too, of spring flowers used in dramatic and exciting ways.

Photographs: Hopkins

An interplay of black and white underscores the simplicity of this Silver Lining china. The components: black-and-white Contrast pattern goblets, jet-black place mat and white ceramic flower container. Only touch of color lies in the bold napkin and roses. Just because a table setting is as formal as this doesn't mean you can't take liberties. Go ahead and mix the silver. Here stainless, gold-tipped Touch of Gold pattern is teamed with Grand Carino butter spreader. Try our contemporary row-on-row flower grouping.

Combine fine china and pottery? Why not. Try a pepper-red pottery pot-de-creme and saucer (above) for a first course on the same white china. Or use red pottery dessert and cups and saucers for an accent. Overscale polka dot cloth and vivid Betsy Ross pattern tumblers enhance the carefree setting. Use a pouf of daisies for a centerpiece and the elegant Colonial Theme sterling.

Colored glassware works wonders. At right, hacienda table scene is achieved with Madeira pattern sherbet and tumbler, Pierced Baroque stainless. A brilliant bouquet of Ranunculus, an embroidered cloth and a hand-painted candlestick with jaunty green napkins carry out gold and moss tones.

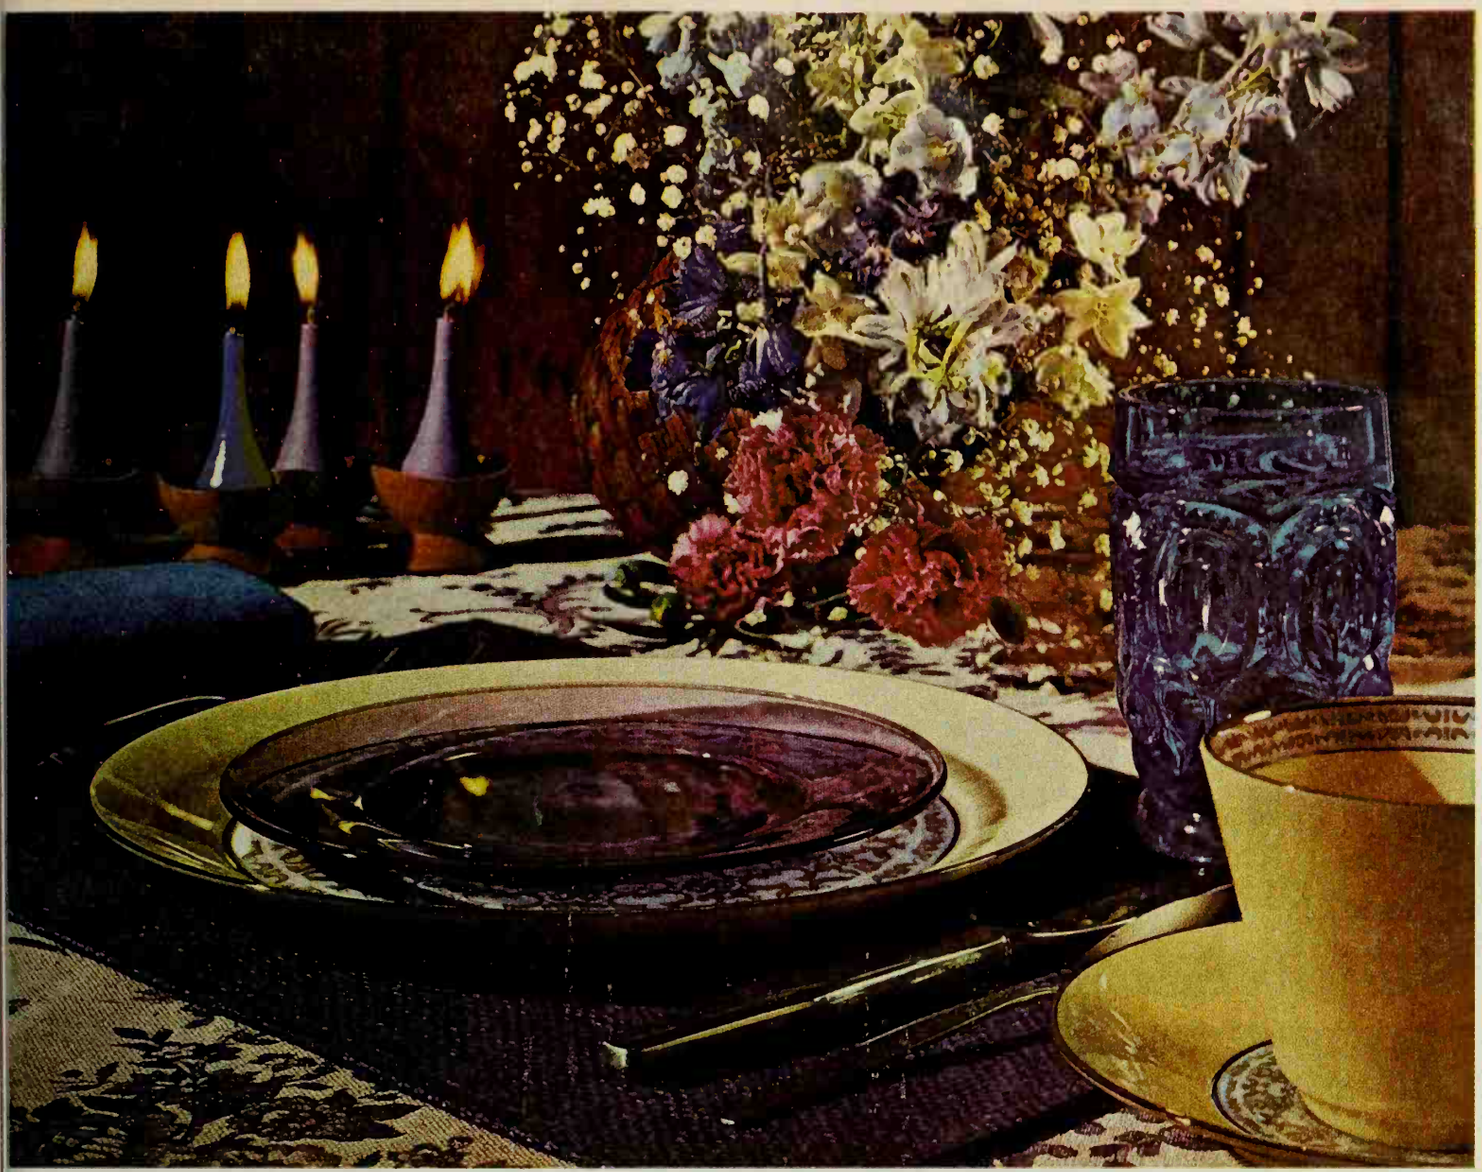


China Chicanery

Don't think an overall pattern prevents variety in table setting. Look at the diversity of color scheming we've brought into play with the stained-glass elegance of new Projection pattern china. Above we've used one of the subtle hues of the design, a dusty rose, throughout the setting: wide-ribbed cloth in a clear pink, lotus-folded napkin in a sharper tone, cranberry stemware and two giant water lily blooms. (You can use any pale pink spring flower available.) When you're working with a monochromatic setting, you need some color accent. We used the warm reddish brown tones of bamboo place mats (excellent table protectors if plates are hot), fragile gold and black Chinese figurines and a rich bronze container for the centerpiece. A straight-lined, understated flatware pattern, Fairfax sterling, contrasts effectively with all the round shapes in china, flowers, figurines and crystal.

Gay as a carousel is the effect when you take the basic shade of your china pattern and intensify it in your setting accessories. That's what we have done here. Starting with the cloud blue of the pattern, we added three predominating variations: the mauve of the glassware salad plate, the Bristol blue of the goblet and the deep purple of the mat-over-cloth combination.

When you use your china informally, as we have here, choose coarse textures like the Brittany-type toile cloth and straw mat, the wood-grained basket container and short boat-shaped candle holders filled with peasant candles. Keep flower arrangements full and loose like our flurry of paper-white narcissus, blue and lavender delphinium and baby's-breath. Seek out glassware in dramatic hues and don't be afraid to use two or more colors. Start a collection of napkins in solid tones and spectacular prints. Deeply grooved tumblers of the pressed glass type work well with most informal settings. Now you can find handsome casual stemware to play up this colorful informality, too. You might consider indulging in an extra set of stainless tableware like this Spanish Scroll pattern.



Today's formal table is a far cry from the double-damask of a bygone era! Contemporary setting at right, combines a pastel ue cloth under an inexpensive lace cloth ith a matching lace-tipped napkin. To ve the china a totally new look, we've troduced a lustrous banded pattern, Venre, for salad, first course or dessert.

Forget the notion that you have to have mplete place settings. Once you have our basic china, experiment with partial ttings (you can always complete them) at will complement or contrast with your ina. Cup and saucer, and salad in a different pattern can always be used for bridge · dessert parties, and a stack of dinner ates is useful for buffets.

For our two china patterns, we've chosen ordinated stemware in Black Venture ttern. Hispana sterling silver fits in noothly with the understated elegance of is table. To play up the eclectic look, e've spiced the setting with beehive-aped salt and pepper shakers, and silver rbon dishes used as butter plates. Pastel ttings won't fade away when a bold ac-nt like black stemware is added.

Strawberry Ribbon Pie starts with one basic mixture for both layers. The red "ribbon" is poured into the pie shell, then the rest is whipped and lightened with whipped cream and egg whites, and piled atop the red layer. Frozen strawberries are the basics here.

vanilla

Vanilla Sour Cream Cake tastes as elegant as it looks. Layers of white cake are enhanced by a fluffy icing, then crowned with tinted coconut. The key ingredient is vanilla sugar. To make it, add a vanilla bean to granulated sugar, then let it age two weeks.

If you're a chicken soup fancier, try chicken soup fancier. Campbell's Cream of Chicken Soup.

It's a fancy first course. And a fancy sauce, too. Because Campbell's uses tender light-meat chicken from breasts and wings. And tender dark-meat chicken from thighs and legs. And thick, rich cream. Just to make it even fancier. Why cook plain when it's just as easy to cook fancy?

Dinners on the Double

If the dinner hour is upon you and you haven't had time to begin . . . put the plates on the table. When your family starts checking on you, they'll be sure you have the situation well in hand.

For if there is a secret to meal preparation on busy days, it has to be the use of your head. Imagination and planning will get you much further than running.

Working wives and mothers may feel the most time pressure for evening meal preparation, but they don't have an exclusive on the problem. While they live with the everyday task of fixing quick dinners, a busy full-time homemaker has to meet the unexpected. She is forever faced with the day when the afternoon committee meeting lasts far too long or the 3 o'clock appointment becomes a 4:30 one.

PLAN FOR EMERGENCIES

Plan for problem days when you shop. Prepare for the unexpected. You can plan menus for a week without assigning days, striking a happy medium of quick-to-fix foods and longer-cooking foods. Stock an emergency shelf. A little careful thinking (considering your cooking habits and your family's tastes) will give you a good, long list of items such as packaged dinners, canned meats, soups, pancake mix, tomato sauce, toaster products, frozen vegetables, etc. Spend a few extra minutes in your supermarket on your next visit to look carefully at new convenience products, reading cooking directions with an eye to the time involved.

Keep a clear head as you evaluate preparation time, however. Remember, an oven meal that cooks slowly, but takes care of itself, may actually save you the most time. If you have an oven timer, use it to full advantage.

DOUBLE RECIPES

It takes practically no extra time to double a recipe. A casserole in the freezer can be a wonderful security symbol. Most every cooked casserole freezes well. You may find it helpful to line your casserole dish with foil before you pour in the casserole mixture. Double the excess foil over the top and seal. Freeze. When the mixture is frozen you can lift it out of the dish to save freezer space as well as to free your oven dish for other uses. When you are ready to use the casserole, just place ne foil package back in the dish you riginally used. You also will save clean-p time after serving from your foil-pro-cted dish.

Meatloaf is a good freezer product . . . ooked or uncooked. Forming the meatloaf to individual-size loaves may be advan-geous, especially if you can't always be ire just how many people you'll have at e dinner table. The small loaves cook uch faster than a family-size loaf.

AKE AHEAD DISHES

Think about tomorrow when you clean after tonight's dinner. Something made ead now might well become a life-saver. esserts and salads lend themselves so well the refrigerator and can add the special uch to a quickly-fixed main dish. Cake, many other desserts, can be baked urs ahead of dinner.

On that day that's bound to arrive when ere isn't a beautiful cake waiting in the ngs for dessert, use your imagination in-ad of making a blunt "no dessert" de-ion. Imagine how quickly the children ght clean up their plates if they had a paper bake cup filled with candies sitting in front of them for dessert.

ADD VARIETY

When the whole family has been rushing about on tight schedules, you can add a touch of psychology with a dash of paprika, a candle on the table and a smile along with the dinner you whipped up in twenty minutes. A touch of Parmesan, herbs or lemon will give a frozen vegetable a different look and flavor and take only seconds. Variety is an important key to keeping quick meals from becoming "oh-no-not-again" affairs for your family.

Unexpected guests at your home will feel a double-welcome when you are able to serve a special snack . . . the one you had in the freezer, ready to pop into the oven for just such an occasion.

REWARDING

An "I don't know how you do it" from family or friends pays for all the thinking and planning that went into adding a special touch when things are especially hectic.

Help is everywhere. When you read through your magazines, cookbooks or any recipe source, consider time as one of the ingredients involved. You'll find there are plenty of quick-to-fix foods with appeal.

Try some of the ideas shown below and on the following pages of Family Food Ideas as you make your plans to produce dinners on the double.

Take the time. Then take the credit.

Baking from scratch is as easy as baking someone else's pre-packaged ingredients. It's just not as quick. But what you bake in that little extra time is a very special kind of gift—the real thing. And only you can bake it this good, so only you can take the credit.

Now Fleischmann's new Rapidmix method makes baking the easiest yet. Just add Fleischmann's Yeast to your other dry ingredients, mix according to recipe, then bake. It's that simple. All the tomato bits, onions, green pepper and celery in our newest tomato sauce make it pretty special. But mostly it's special because all that flavor really puts pzazz in your cooking. Tools and rules for meat roasting

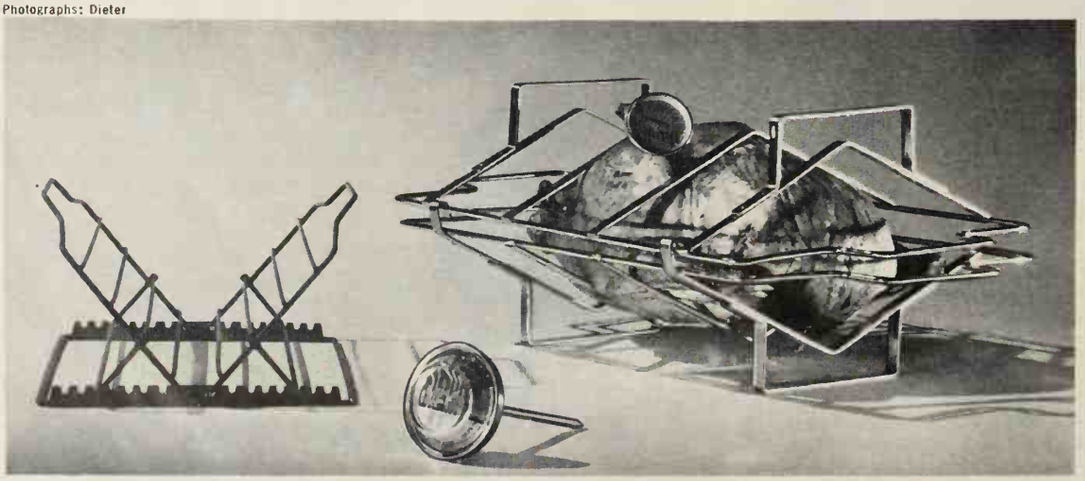
Photographs: Dieter



Having the right tools and knowing how to use them can make you an expert at roasting poultry, beef, and pork. The most important piece of equipment is a rack. Roasting is a method of cooking by dry heat, and a rack keeps the meat out of its fat and juices. A rack also makes it easier to remove the meat from the pan or roaster.

The rack shown at left in the photograph has a Teflon finish to prevent sticking. It comes clean without scouring or scrubbing. The rack adjusts to seven V-positions, fits standard baking pans, has handles for lifting, and folds flat to store. Place a turkey breast-side-up or a roast fat-side-up on the rack and set in a shallow pan. Foley Mfg. Co., 330 5th NE, Minneapolis, Minn. 55418.

If you're looking for an easier way to achieve old-fashioned flavor, try the Roast Right Turkey Turner (TM) and meat rack (at right in photo) by The Young Associates, 2030 Broadway, Santa Monica, Calif. 90404. The Roast Right (TM) is a set of two multipurpose oven roasting racks for use individually as meat racks, or in combination as a Turkey Turner that rotates the heftiest bird. Place the turkey breast-down in the rack with the hooks. Then put the other rack over the bird when it's three-quarters done. Grip the handles and turn the turkey to the breast-up position. Remove the top rack, roast until done, and serve. The chrome steel racks fit within one another for easy storing.

Your best guide to the degree of doneness is a meat thermometer. Insert the thermometer in the center of raw roast so bulb reaches the thickest part of the lean meat and does not rest in fat or on bone. For poultry, insert in the center of inside thigh muscle not touching bone. When the thermometer registers the desired internal temperature remove bird from oven and let stand about 15 minutes before carving.

The thermometer shown in the turkey at left is a "Slim Stem" meat and poultry thermometer by Gaydell, 3030 Wilshire Blvd., Santa Monica, Calif. 90403. The stem is about half the diameter of conventional meat thermometers, making it ideal for both oven and rotisserie use. The "Slim Stem" features stainless steel construction, a preset pointer, an easy-to-read "temperature zone" dial, and a test zone. It is dishwasher safe, shock resistant, and carries a one-year guarantee.

Packaged pastry mix makes more than good piecrust—it makes great appetizers and desserts, too. Here it's an ingredient in a corn-crusted main dish, a make-ahead canape, and a warm fruit torte. We used the handy piecrust sticks, but you may substitute the loose-pack piecrust mix if you wish. Just remember that one 9½- or 11¼-ounce package of piecrust mix is equal to two piecrust sticks.

There's no Worcestershire like an old Worcestershire.

An older Worcestershire makes a wiser stew. (To say nothing of a brighter burger, smarter salad, loftier meatloaf.)

And by older Worcestershire, we can be talking only about Lea & Perrins, the Worcestershire that's aged in wood, like fine wine, and mellowed to perfection, like good steak and cheese. The Worcestershire that combines natural aging with natural ingredients—things like eschalots, tamarinds, anchovies and chili peppers—to bring out the best in every dish.

The Worcestershire, in short, that's seasoned right to start with and seasoned even better with age.

Which is the real you?

The woman who chooses Gorham's King Edward likes its regal quality. On the other hand, a woman who prefers Gossamer feels more at home with a design that is all pure line, enhanced by elegant hand texturing. Buttercup's appeal is in its wealth of delicate detail and informal charm.

Every Gorham Original is as different as night and day. But all are alike in one very important aspect. Each is a total design that expresses the person who selects it. Every spoon bowl, every fork tine, every knife blade is in perfect balance with its handle both in design and weight.

There's a perfect balance between ornamentation, shape and function. Between the timely and the timeless.

WHEN YOU AND YOUR DOCTOR DISAGREE

The most common reasons patients disagree with their doctors are high fees, imperious attitudes and treatment that doesn't work. Some of these patients, out of anger and frustration, give the doctor an impassioned bawling out. Others simply quit him and look around for a different physician. Still others conveniently refuse to pay the bill or pay only a certain portion.

Each of these tactics can be justified on occasion, but often the patient would be better advised to take his problem to a medical grievance committee—assuming, of course, that it can't be ironed out in a calm, frank discussion with the doctor.

Medical grievance committees are set up by local medical societies as instruments of self-regulation. They exist at the state level in all 50 states, and also at the county level in most urban areas where a large population warrants it. They help to assure that the community's doctors will meet moral and professional standards by providing a forum where patients can come to air their complaints.

Grievance committees are not courts of law. They have no authority to force acceptance of their judgments or to impose any punishment. Their primary role is mediation; in fact, they are sometimes called mediation committees rather than grievance committees. They listen objectively to both sides of a dispute, then recommend what they consider a fair solution.

But when they conclude that a doctor is at fault in a case, their "suggestion" of how he should make proper restitution usually carries considerable weight. This is because a doctor who ignores their advice may be reported to other committees of the medical society or to the state board of medical examiners—bodies with the power to suspend the physician or to revoke his license to practice.

In most cases, however, the doctor is not found guilty. Cynics sometimes claim this is because the grievance committee is composed of physicians, who are reluctant to find fault within their own ranks. This point of view may sometimes be valid—in which case the patient can employ other tactics, including taking his argument to court. On the other hand, doctors have an interest in maintaining high standards for their profession. When they decide a doctor is innocent, that verdict is usually just. In many cases, the charge arose from lack of necessary information, a frivolous complaint, an unreasonable expectation, or a simple misunderstanding.

The problem may even be so simple it can be resolved without convening the committee. The first man to examine the patient's complaint—which must always be presented to the committee in writing—may see immediately where the difficulty lies and clear it up with a phone call or two. The vast majority of grievances (more than 90 percent in some communities) are associated with the size of the doctor bill. The complainant thinks his physician is behaving unethically or dishonestly because he has charged $100, say, for performing an operation covered by the patient's medical insurance only to the extent of $75. In that case, the patient will have it pointed out to him, probably over the phone, why insurance allowances and doctors' fees are not always for the same amounts.

Sometimes a person claims he shouldn't be charged anything at all, because the treatment didn't work. He wouldn't pay a mechanic who failed to fix his car, he says, so why should he pay the doctor? Often, especially when a death is involved, this argument must be refuted with soft words. The aggrieved person wants someone to blame for his distress, and the physician is the handiest candidate. But the truth is, of course, that cures are never assured. Human beings are not automobiles. No doctor can ever do more than perform his best work—and this effort is what he charges for, regardless of how it turns out.

Problems that don't lend themselves to easy solutions are scheduled for presentation before the full committee, whose size and membership are locally determined, varying from place to place. Sometimes the committee includes only physicians; other times, a layman may be on it. The complainant and the doctor are usually interviewed separately. Then the members of the committee discuss the case among themselves and arrive at a reasonable solution both parties will accept.

When the patient's complaint seems completely unjustified to the committee, their reasons for thinking so are carefully explained to him. When the doctor is at fault, he is urged to make amends and is warned against repetitions in the future. He may also be censured, and any evidence of gross negligence will be brought to the attention of the proper authorities.

Any time you disagree with your doctor, try to talk it over with him first. If that doesn't help, consult a friend and ask him to tell you honestly if your case seems justified. If the answer is yes, put it all down in writing and send it to the grievance committee of your local medical society. The address is very likely in your telephone book.

KITCHEN Drāno SOLVES ALL 4 KITCHEN DRAIN PROBLEMS.

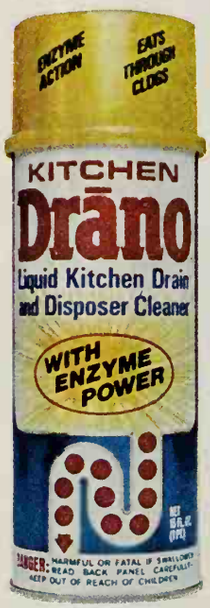
1. Kitchen Drāno works through standing water. Just pour right in. It gets right through to the clog.

2. Kitchen Drāno dissolves trapped grease faster and better than other leading liquid drain cleaners. That's because it contains a grease-cutting solvent you don't get with other leading liquids.

3. Kitchen Drāno contains enzymes that help it eat through food clogs. Won't harm your pipe or septic tank either.

4. Kitchen Drāno cleans and deodorizes garbage disposers. Two capfuls a week do the job.

Also, Kitchen Drāno is concentrated, so it costs ½ as much to use.



Nothing drains drains the way Drāno drains drains.

EXCURSIONS

Here are family-tailored ideas for vacation side trips.

VISITING TOM SAWYER

To anyone who has been beguiled by Mark Twain's Mississippi River tales, a visit to Hannibal, Missouri, seems like a homecoming. Not surprisingly, this almost uncanny sense of belonging comes as you visit other places that figured in favorite novels. By bringing the right book along, you'll discover a new dimension in an already pleasant excursion.

In Hannibal, Mo., a small town on the banks of the old Mississippi River, you can renew your acquaintance with Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer. Their creator lived here during his youth. Mark Twain (alias Samuel Clemens) drew heavily on his hometown and his boyhood pranks for his famous novels. Actually, Tom Sawyer was Mark Twain, and Hannibal is the St. Petersburg of both the Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn adventure books.

Most all the landmarks Twain knew and wrote about have been preserved. For instance, at Twain's boyhood home you can climb the stairs to the second story and see the window and the rainspout (re-created) down which Tom often slid to join Huck. You can tramp the dark labyrinths of the cave (two miles south of town) where Tom and his girl friend, Becky, were lost, and where Tom and Huck found gold "under the sign of the cross." You can visit the home of Becky Thatcher, and drop in at the law office in which young Twain spent the night with a corpse.

Adjoining Mark Twain's home is an excellent museum. Among its treasures is the battered cherry desk on which Twain wrote "Adventures of Tom Sawyer." The "Painting of the Fence," an intriguing episode from the same book, is recalled each May when local Beckys and Huck Finns whitewash the old fence outside the home. To get the feeling of Twain's book, "Life on the Mississippi," you may take a short cruise on the mini steamboat down on the riverfront.

"The Jumping Frog of Calavera County" was Twain's first publishe success. He wrote it while living at An gels Camp, Calif., then a gold minin settlement. The aura of those early day still hangs over the town and, believe or not, a jumping frog contest take place annually in May. If your childre have an athletic frog in the car, this the place to see how far he can jump.

Thomas Wolfe's boyhood home at Spruce Street in Asheville, N. C was the prototype for the Dixielan boardinghouse in his best seller "Lo Homeward Angel." Its rooms look mu as Wolfe described them: the high ce ings, the piano that his sister play for boarders, the huge old-fashion kitchen, the bedroom in which his brot er died. You may find yourself listeni for the booming voice of "Old M Gant," head of the house. (Admissi 50 cents, open May to October.)

You can almost feel heat from t ruddy glow of the fire in the h hearth, and hear the "North Wind ro ing" at John Greenleaf Whittier's hon stead (built in 1688) at Haverhill, Ma The parlor is furnished as it was wh the Whittier family gathered there d ing the wild snowstorm described so v idly in the poet's moving masterpie "Snowbound."

Go fishing in Walden Pond? You c tainly can, much as Henry Da Thoreau did when he lived by its ba and wrote his classic treatise on glories of nature. And the trout fish is rated excellent. The pond today deep and blue and clear, thanks to re ration. It's now part of a county reser tion, and lies just south of Conc Mass. Nature trails lead around pond past a plaque marking the of the isolated cabin where Thor lived and wrote.

At Cooperstown, N.Y., you'll f glimmering Otsego Lake, the "Gl merglass" of James Fenimore Coop "Leatherstocking Tales." You can by motor launch to many spots author described, and picnic and sw at Three Mile Point; there Chingachg of the novel, "The Deerslayer," m his famous escape from the Hurons.

The haunts of Washington Irving's forgettable characters, Ichabod Cr ("The Legend of Sleepy Hollow"), Rip van Winkle become very real w you visit Tarrytown, North Tarryt and Irving, N.Y., the Sleepy Ho country along the east banks of the Hudson River. A "Headless Horseman" bridge spans the Pocantico River near the site where the ghostly rider hurled his pumpkinlike head at the gangly Crane. The little Dutch church Irving described as "the favorite haunt of troubled spirits" stands nearby on the Philipsburg Manor restoration. The author is buried in its cemetery.

"Sunnyside," Washington Irving's luxurious home, has been restored and ; open to the public. It was once owned y the Van Tassels, a family immortalzed in "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." Of course, it was in the Catskill Mountains, rising up from the Hudson River, hat Rip van Winkle went to sleep. Last ear marked the 150th anniversary of ie publication of "The Sketch Book," f which "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" and "Rip van Winkle" are a part.

Stroll down Main Street in Sauk Centre, Minn., and you are in Sinclair Red" Lewis' hometown on the thorughfare that inspired his famous novel, Main Street." The Lewis home, a state storic site and National Historic Monment, is being restored and should be pen this summer. The Sinclair Lewis useum in the basement of the Bryant brary houses some personal effects, cluding the desk at which the author said to have written "Main Street." ewis is buried in the cemetery at the st edge of town.

Visit Red Cloud, Nebr., and you're in the heart of "Catherland," for this is the hometown of Pulitzer Prize-nning Novelist Willa Cather. In many her stirring novels about rugged pioer days, the town of Red Cloud was ly thinly disguised as: Sweetwater in Lost Lady," Moonstone in "The ng of the Lark" and Black Hawk in ly Antonia."

Tour maps, marked with 27 sites nd in her stories, are available at the lla Cather Memorial Association of- in the old bank building on Red Cloud's Main Street. On the tour, you'll see the cottonwood grove where the Cather children played and which became the setting for "A Lost Lady." You can climb the bluff along the Republican River, where the author described the plow in "My Antonia" as "black against the molten red, a picture writing in the sun"; visit the Miner Ranch and nearby grave of James Murphy, the Larry Donovan of "My Antonia"; and perhaps linger at the stream you read about in "The Lost Lady"—Crooked Creek with its bordering "twinkling" willows. You can also pay a visit to the author's childhood home, which even today looks as she described it in "The Song of the Lark": "A long story-and-a-half house with a wing built at the right and a kitchen addition at the back, everything on the slant—roofs, windows, and doors."

Off the island of Bimini in the Bahamas, Ernest Hemingway battled a tremendous fish, longer than his boat, that eventually helped inspire "The Old Man and the Sea," the book that won the author a Pulitzer Prize. Some say Alonzo Butler, his native guide and friend, was the prototype for "The Old Man." On Bimini, you can experience the great fishing Hemingway knew, and even stay at his favorite haunt, "The Compleat Angler Inn."

These are only a few of the fascinating literary scenes you can explore. At Oakland, Calif., for instance, Jack London equipped the "Snark" and set sail on the South Sea journey that resulted in that famous sea story, "The Cruise of the Snark." Today, many traces of his days in Oakland remain, including Jack London Square.

"Ramona," Helen Hunt Jackson's romantic drama, is vividly represented at San Jacinto, Calif.

In Salem, Mass., you can still call at "The House of Seven Gables," which inspired Nathaniel Hawthorne's novel of the same name.

If you are a western buff, you'll enjoy Medicine Bow, Wyo., scene of Owen Wister's compelling novel, "The Virginian." The ranch where Wister rode as a cowboy before writing the novel was not far from this village, nor was the original "Shiloh Ranch." The most prominent edifice in town is the old stone-block Virginian Hotel. Even today, Wister would recognize its heavy old bar, for it was here that he involved his character Travis in a furious fight—and it was here The Virginian said, "When you call me that, smile."

GHOST TOWNS

There are hundreds of ghost towns hidden away in the Rocky Mountains. Once these communities were booming and growing. Today, with mines abandoned, only a few are inhabited, and most are in ruins. Still, the aura of those lusty days hangs over them, and once you start searching for ghost towns, you'll find it hard to stop.

COLORADO. Colorado claims 300 ghost towns, most of them in regions where gold and silver mining thrived.

West of Denver, you'll find not only abandoned ghost towns, but some that are still inhabited. Among the latter is Central City. Take U.S. 6 to State 119. Ten thousand gold miners and their families flocked here to get rich, and a few did. Today, there are only 250 residents. The town's wealth is recalled in an elegant old Victorian opera house, dripping with crystal chandeliers.

Drive 45 miles west of Denver on U.S. 6, and you'll come to picturesque Georgetown, site of the state's first big silver mine. Left over from its yesterdays are pink and yellow frame houses and Hotel De Paris, now a museum.

It's like stepping into the past when you visit Cripple Creek, 45 miles west of Colorado Springs via the Gold Camp Road or Ute Pass. The 9591-foot-high mountain town looks almost as it did when 25,000 people lived here, and big gold strikes were everyday occurrences. Now 600 people keep the town's memories bright. You can learn firsthand about gold mining on the tour into the 1000-foot-deep Mollie Kathleen mine.

The old town of Marble is 50 miles south of Glenwood Springs. It was here the largest single block of marble in the world was quarried for the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Washington, D.C. As many as 10,000 people once lived in Marble. Today, only 50 people call it home.

If you wish information about Colorado's many ghost towns, write to the Division of Commerce and Development, Travel Section, 602 State Capitol Annex, Denver 80203.

IDAHO. Idaho City, 39 miles northeast of Boise on State 21, lies in the heart of the 18-square-mile mountain-ringed Boise Basin, scene of the richest gold rush in American history. Over $250 million in gold came from this area during Civil War days. The basin is loaded with ghost towns (lightly inhabited, usually by summer residents), such as Centerville, Placerville, and Summit. Idaho City, though it has dwindled from 15,000 residents to 188, is still queen of them all. Many of the original buildings from the town's boom days are still standing. Stop at the Idaho World, the local paper that has been producing regional news for over a hundred years. The old Wells Fargo station and former post office is now a museum where you can see an animated miniature gold mine and an elaborately engraved invitation to a hanging.

The Challis National Forest of north-central Idaho contains two intriguing ghost towns, Bonanza and Custer. Both of these placer mining relics are along the Yankee Fork of the Salmon River. Driving into this rugged valley, flanked by the Salmon River Mountains, will give you an idea of the physical problems miners faced to get their gold to market. Plan to visit the little mining museum in the former schoolhouse at Custer. (To reach the two ghost towns, follow U.S. 93 to Sunbeam, then north ten miles on Forest Road.)

For more information on Idaho's ghost towns write: Department of Commerce and Development, Capitol Bldg., Boise 83707.

WYOMING. South Pass City, south of Lander, was an up-and-coming town of 2000 prospectors during the 1867 "Sweetwater Gold Fever Rush." Cash registers rang at the South Pass Hotel, Exchange Saloon, Variety Theater and Wells Fargo Office. The state plans to restore these buildings (all standing), as well as others. One establishment you'll find little changed is Ft. Bourbon, a small cave in which the men hid their whiskey, women and children during Indian raids. South Pass is reached via Wyoming 28.

The cities of Cheyenne, Laramie and Rawlins are surrounded by ghost towns, many reduced to mere foundations.

History and legend abound in "The Grand Encampment," a cluster of eight former copper mining camps: Battle, Copperton, Dillon, Elwood, Encampment, Rambler, Riverside, Rudefeha. All lie within a 50-mile radius in the Sierra Madre Mountains. Encampment and Riverside, the only two that are inhabited, are on State 230 south of Saratoga. The others are within the boundaries of Medicine Bow National Forest. The forest road from which you reach these ghost towns crosses the Continental Divide at an elevation of 10,000 feet. Many viewpoints will stop you along the way. Take State 0410 west from Encampment to get on the forest road.

Pioneers dubbed Battle "The next stop to heaven" because it was perched atop the Divide. Today nothing is left except the water system. You can prove to yourself that it works by taking a cool drink from the pipe alongside the road.

For a map of Wyoming ghost towns, send $1.50 to the State Library, Cheyenne 82001.

MONTANA. Just about any old mining road in Montana will lead you to a ghost town. The state has officially counted 90 of them with some buildings standing, but the Ghost Town Preservation Society claims it has documented about 500.

You might begin your exploring with Bannack, reached by good roads and located off State 278. You'll find it in the Bitterroot Mountains west of Dillon. It was the site of the state's first major gold strike and its first territorial capital. Reminders of its tumultuous past, when 1000 people lived here, are the jail, church, hotel, and a variety of log and clapboard buildings. Memorable in Bannack's history was the time local citizens hanged the town's first sheriff.

It is a gradual ascent and a good road to mile-high Elkhorn, lying in the shadow of 9000-foot, marble-cliffed Elkhorn Peak. Thirty-two million dollars' worth of gold was mined here. But all that remains of those boom days are the Independence Dance Hall, some rotting business houses, and the old mill. Elkhorn is south of Boulder, off U.S. 91.

Considered by some as the "best ghost town of all" is Granite, site of the richest silver mine on earth. Forty million dollars' worth of the precious mineral came from this community. The mill has deteriorated, but a few brick and wooden buildings have withstood the ravages of time, wind and weather. Granite is near Phillipsburg on U.S. Highway 10A.

Other mountain ghost towns well worth a visit are: Garnet, east of Missoula, reached by turning north off U.S. 90; Marysville (pop. 45), northwest of Helena, once the headquarters for miners who worked the Bald Mountain, Empire, Bell Boy and Brumlummon mines.

For a list of the state's ghost towns write: State Highway Commission, Advertising Department, Helena 59601.

NEW MEXICO. New Mexico teems with ghost towns—fronter communities that died because forts were no longer needed to protect lifelines like the Santa Fe Trail, and because coal and gold production died out.

One of the most interesting of these is White Oaks. It lived only 20 years but during that time its Homestake Mine yielded three million dollars in gold. You'll find White Oaks 11 miles northeast of Carrizozo on Route 349.

In the southwestern section of the state, there are three outstanding ghost towns: Shakespeare, which boomed as an important stop on the Butterfield Stage Line. Hillsboro, a former gold rush town in the scenic Black Range (west of Caballo on State 90); Mogollon, so representative of early western towns that college students make field trips here (on State 78 in the Gila National Forest).

There's not much life in Madrid. Winds whistle through broken windowpanes, bang the shutters of vacant houses and whip wickedly about the old saloon.

This was a coal town, as you can tell from the miners' shacks dotting the hillside. Madrid is 30 miles south of Santa Fe on State 10. Cerrilos, only three miles from Madrid, is on this route. It has some going businesses, and excellent food is served at Tiffany's Saloon.

For a map of New Mexico's ghost towns, write: Department of Development, 113 Washington Avenue, Santa Fe 87501.

WILDLIFE REFUGES

Buffalo herds that passed for days without letup . . . flyways so thick with geese and ducks folks couldn't sleep for the racket of birds overhead . . . streams flooded with migrating salmon. Stories like those recall the days when wildlife was a resource people took for granted.

Fortunately, some of that past abundance can still be sampled in certain

1 the country's national wildlife refuges.
There are 328 of them nationwide, and refuge hosts a million migratory birds in the fall, and fairly teems with birds in the summer. Geese, dueks, cormorants and herons are eommon here. For magnifieent views of the birds, take the 12-mile self-guided drive over the tops of artifieial dikes, stopping at the observation platforms.

Squaw Creek. This refuge in northwest Missouri's eentral flyway is the scene of the spring flight of the blue and lesser snow geese, one of the greatest ornithological displays on earth. In March and April, floeks may number 250,000 birds. As the geese move northward, they ean be seen at other refuges on the flyway. Late summer, too, is rewarding at Squaw Creek. Hundreds of thousands of migrating gulls stop to rest here. Egrets ean be seen almost every day. There are photographie blinds along a self-guided tour route.

Tamarac. This heavily wooded area, 18 miles northeast of Detroit Lakes, Minn., lies in old Indian territory. All summer long, 3000 potholes and 25 lakes shelter a variety of ducks, muskrats and beaver. Among the geese nesting here are the giant Canadas.

Aransas. The rare whooping cranes winter at this refuge 75 miles north of Corpus Christi, Tex. On the loop road, there are observation platforms with teleseopes. Don't be surprised if you send wild turkeys, javelinas and armadillos scurrying.

Chincoteague. This refuge on the eastern shores of Virginia and Maryland is noted for its shorebirds and wild ponies, the latter readily visible from the road to the beach. A wildlife sunset cruise with a naturalist ($2; ehildren $1), hiking trails, slide leetures and evening wildlife movies make this a delightful plaee to visit. Only foot traffie is permitted in the refuge.

Okefenokee: Located south of Wayeross, Ga., this is perhaps the most celebrated refuge. In summer, alligators peer from beneath deep moss. Dozens of shorebird varieties linger here. You can take a boat trip from Okefenokee Swamp Park, just off U.S. 1, into the interior of this "land of the trembling earth."

Among other appealing wildlife watching areas are refuges of the Klamath Basin straddling northern California and southern Oregon with their enormous waterfowl populations. Eaeh spring at the Malheur Refuge near Burns, Ore., sandhill eranes stage their speetaeular nesting danees.

Florida abounds in refuges. St. Marks on the west eoast is a major goose wintering area. To the southeast is Chassahowitzka, another great bird refuge. Here you'll not only find wood dueks, pelieans, herons and laughing gulls, but also alligators. In the far south is National Key Deer, a sanetuary for our smallest deer.

The entire Atlantic seaboard is dotted with homes for wildlife. Beginning in May, the renowned shorebird population at Monomy Refuge on the elbow of Cape Cod, reaehes its peak; in July, birds are in fall plumage. At Moosehorn, Me., in early spring you ean witness the mating performanee of the woodcoek. Here you ean also see harbor seals and go hiking, elamming and pienieking. ■

We help feet go further.

We do it by giving them some extra help. Our exclusive Posture Foundation.® (It's what the P.F in our name stands for.)

Posture Foundation is actually a rigid rubber wedge built inside each heel. It helps a kid to carry himself correctly, by shifting his body weight to the outside of each foot.

So, a youngster can keep going longer and end up fresher, because his body weight is better distributed over each foot.

There's lots more to P.F Flyers. Thick cushioned soles. Canvas that breathes. And lots of styles and colors for boys and girls.

Get them and your kids will be a couple of jumps ahead.

automobiles. Then what? The National Safety Council had to mount an immense campaign to get us to use the safety belts. (Do you use yours now?)

How does this relate to auto pollution? Simply in the fact that, again, consumer and government pressure has forced positive changes, and we must face the reality of helping to pay for those changes. So far, emission control devices and engine modifications have added about $80 to the cost of today's car. By 1975, the new devices will cost another $100 to $200. If the devices do the job, then the cost is reasonable, especially considering that a great many of us pay more than that for nonfunctional luxuries.

Lead-free gasoline, which undoubtedly will be required to operate the exhaust control devices to come, also will cost more: about two to three cents per gallon. For the time being the only way you can make lead-free gas pay off in your own antipollution campaign is to try a lower-octane unleaded fuel: you'll at least cut out the lead and perhaps reduce hydrocarbon emissions. The trouble is, however, that the lower octane non-leaded fuels may make older high-compression engines knock. Consult a good mechanic: some cars can be adjusted to accommodate the lower octane, and you could then have the satisfaction of personally contributing to cleaner air (while prolonging the life of your muffler).

But more important than such gestures is to keep yourself informed of at least the basic facts in this highly technical area of automotive pollution. Only then can you make your voice felt in encouraging legislators to push sound and practical antipollution programs.

Meanwhile, even as things are, we can all do a much better job for cleaner air by maintaining our cars in good order. For detailed information how, go back to the article "How to make your car a clean air citizen" in our February, 1971 issue. There's certainly no sense in spending extra money on today's low-pollution automobile when one bad spark plug can turn it into a vile smogger. ■ support research and development. A federal program to investigate alternate power sources is already under way; for instance, the government has let a contract for the construction of an experimental steam-powered transit bus in California. But government must go farther than that: perhaps initiate experimental vehicle programs through the armed services, or subsidize private enterprise trying to break into the automotive industry with new power sources. No doubt much of the money will be wasted, but some will end up being well spent, and may well accomplish more—faster—than private industry alone can reasonably do.

The consumer has responsibilities too. First we must examine our attitudes about cars. We need them for transportation, and we want them to be comfortable. But we must face the fact that our desire for more speed, more power, and more luxury which is often simply a matter of ego gratification, has helped put us where we are.

In fact, the car-buying public has always contributed to the shortcomings of the automobile industry, not that this excuses the shortcomings. Take safety, for example. One major automobile company ran extensive tests, then installed several very important safety features in its cars. This move was accompanied by an intensive advertising campaign. It is fair to say that, as a sales promoter, safety flopped; the public was not willing to pay extra for safety, while willing to pay for less substantial features. In a social sense, as opposed to a sales sense, this was no reason for the automobile industry to stop pushing safety devices, but that's what happened. Finally government action, spurred by consumer pressure, brought about installation of safety devices on all

Visit our surprising cities.

Canadian cities are different.
Different from American cities.
Different from other Canadian cities.
Montreal is big, French, cosmopolitan, lively at night, historic by day.
Compare Quebec City, the provincial capital. Quebec is much smaller. More French. Less cosmopolitan. Lively at night. Even more historic by day.
A 400-year-old, walled city, with twisting, cobblestoned streets that should be investigated either on foot, or by horse-drawn caleche.
Vancouver. A continent away geographically, and worlds away in atmosphere. Our big Pacific harbour city. And across the Straits of Georgia is a little city more English than any place in England has been since the days of Queen Victoria. Victoria, British Columbia. Garden parties and thatched cottages. Cricket and the conviction that the sun has yet to set on the British Empire.
In Toronto, you'll hear more Italian spoken than in some Italian cities.
In St. John's, Newfoundland, you could cut the Irish brogue with a knife.

There's only one thing our surprising cities have in common. They all welcome visitors.

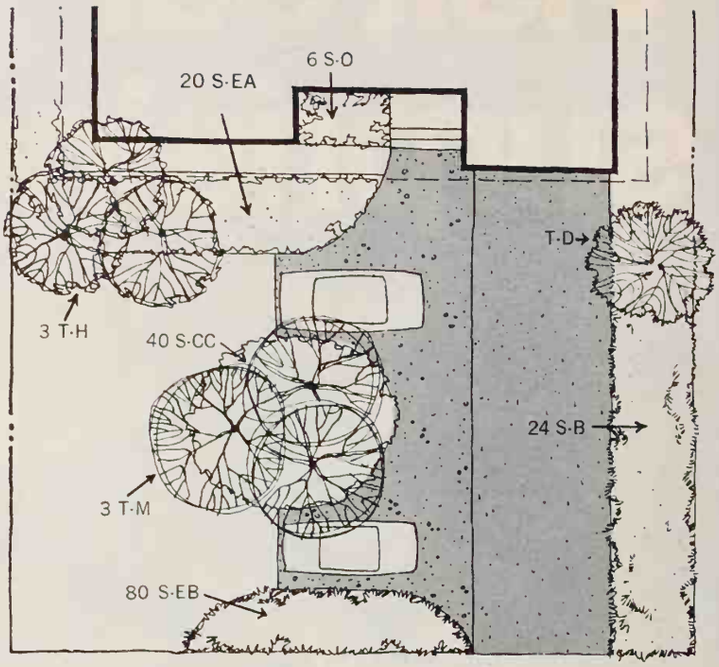
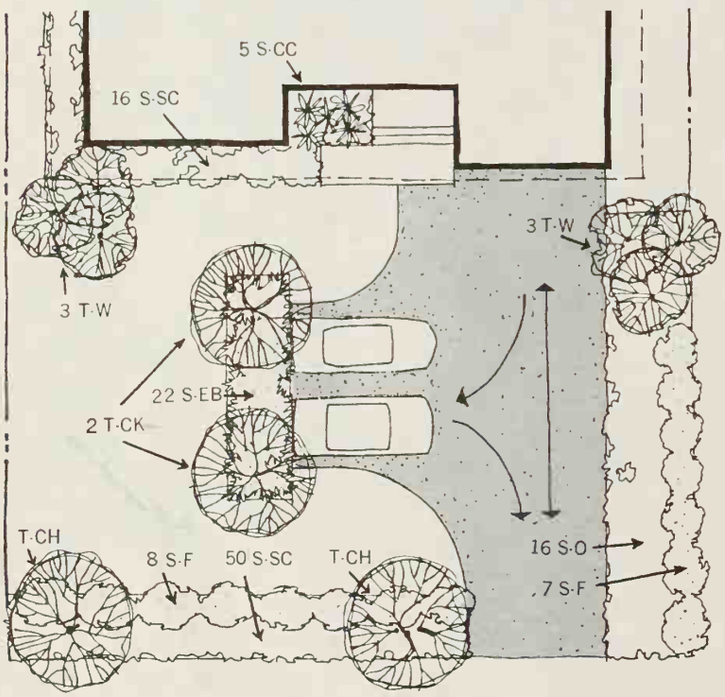
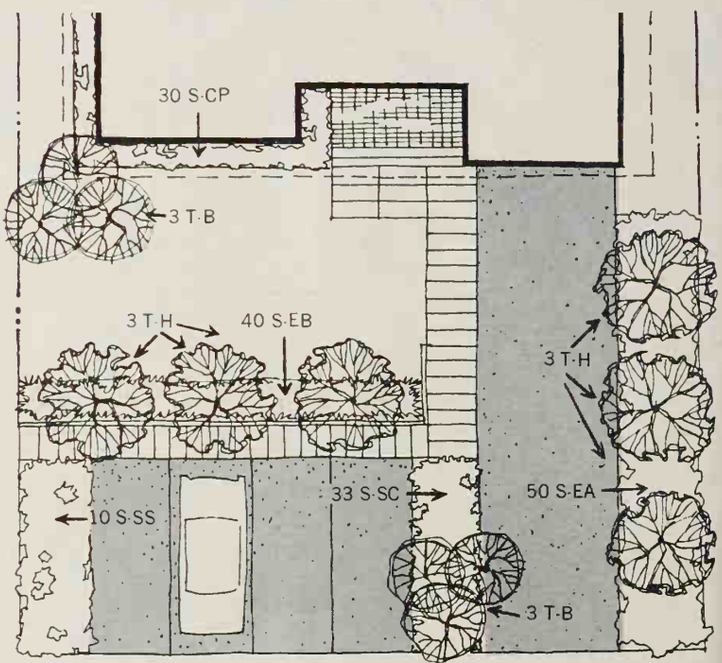
How to plan and plant off-street parking

How can you get extra cars off the street—and, what can you do to make the area attractive? Here are three designs for an 85x60-foot property—with different solutions for parking and landscaping. We give a range of prices for plant material so you can work out your plan as the budget allows. All plans are designed for minimum maintenance. The plants are keyed to the price list below.

Right: The parking area cuts out a 24-foot strip from the property—but reduces the lawn area to be maintained. Small trees, suitable to the space, are used here and in the other plans. The dogwood and hawthorns are clouds of white in spring—broom is yellow. Moraine locusts cast a light shade over parking area. They're deciduous but not messy.







Drawings: Soliday. Garden ideas: Douglas Baylis, Landscape Architect

Parking space is designed so there's enough room to swing around and head out to the street. Two white flowering crabapples (Katherine) and two pink ones (Hopa) form a spectacular blooming triangle, regardless of viewing angle. Oregon holly-grape has yellow flowers (to supplement the forsythia), followed by turquoise-blue berries.

Here, an asphalt or gravel parking space is actually an extension of the street. It makes parking easy for a larger number of cars—but check with local authorities as to whether this is permitted. Landscaping here calls for more trees—to provide privacy for the house and to screen the car space. The design is well adapted to a slightly sloping yard.

The Armstrong Redwoods

The Indians called it the "dark e," and shunned it. The mas- redwoods grow so high and close here that they block out sunlight. There's almost no nergrowth for deer to eat, and small animals for the bob- s diet. The trees themselves bor no insects for birds, ugh bird songs float across canyon depths.

Early California settlers called ne "Big Bottom Country." In 1870s, Colonel James Arm- ng began to cut the big red- ds and farm the cleared l. But he was aware of the forest's beauty, and set aside an area on Fife Creek, a few miles north of Russian River, to be preserved in its natural state.

To visit these woods, turn off Route 116 in Guerneville onto Armstrong Woods Road. It's two miles to the state preserve.

At the park entrance, pick up a free guidebook and walk the tranquil, well-marked nature trails. Then eat at one of the many picnic areas beneath the huge trees; you'll find plenty of fireplaces and barbecue pits. The day-use fee is 75 cents.

Don't count on camping here, though. There are only 20 campsites in the park and another 25 in nearby Austin Creek State Recreation area. If you do get in, the fee at Austin is $1.50 a night, which includes restroom and hot shower facilities.

Is Nevada great for fishing & hunting?

Bet on it.

You would expect great hunting in a huge, sparsely settled state like Nevada, but desert fishing is a real surprise. Lakes and streams in both mountains and desert will give you real action.

Desert Lakes Mead and Mohave produce trout and bass year round; Pyramid and Walker Lakes have giant cutthroat. Mountain lakes produce fighting trout, and Lake Tahoe adds giant mackinaw, rainbow and Kokanee. Countless streams offer rainbow, brookies and brownies. Non-resident licenses are $15; a five-day permit is $5.

Upland game includes grouse, quail, pheasant and partridge. Wildfowl areas are large and are located on Pacific flyways. Mule deer are widespread, and Desert Bighorn sheep offer sensational trophies. Mountain lion is limited, but available. Cottontail and other small game are increasingly popular.

Non-resident hunting licenses are $50, plus a $30 deer stamp; upland game bird license, $25; three-day waterfowl, $10. Drawings are held for Bighorn, but antelope and elk drawings are limited to residents. Bears are protected.

Nevada is truly great for hunting and fishing.

Bet on it.

A new park at Great Salt Lake

To float along effortlessly in the buoyant, briny waters of Great Salt Lake is a rare treat for any swimmer. One of the best places on the lake for this is the new Great Salt Lake State Park, on the northern end of Antelope Island.

From Salt Lake City, take I-15 north to Syracuse, then turn west on U-127. At the lake, a long causeway stretches out to the island. On your left, there's the freshwater of Farmington Bay. On the right is the Great Salt Lake.

This is Utah's newest state park, and it's still being developed, which is one of the things that makes it so attractive. At the moment, it is relatively untouched. Columbia Gorge scenic drive

For 20 years the only low-elevation route between western and eastern Oregon was the famous Columbia Gorge Highway, an engineering classic in its day, blasted and carved through rugged cliffs and bluffs above the river. The old highway was eventually retired and replaced by a high-speed interstate freeway, but a pretty 24-mile fragment of it still exists. Called "Scenic Route," the stretch of old roadway parallels the new highway and river between Troutdale and Multanomah Falls, just east of Portland.

Views along the way are reminiscent of many old sepia-toned photographs, as well they should be. Perhaps a thousand published pictures were taken from the road's overlooks in the early 1900s, and many a western fireplace mantle is still adorned with a Columbia Gorge landscape scene.

Driving along, you pass cool and leafy state parks and a half dozen ribbon waterfalls. You can hike on short trails through quiet forests and along the rocky cliffs; trail maps are available from Mt. Hood National Forest Headquarters, Box 16040, Portland, Ore. 97216. From the trails, high above the Columbia River, views of the gorge are inspiring. By all means bring your camera and plenty of film.

Waterfront Marina fun at Del Rey

Marina Del Rey, five minutes from Los Angeles International airport, is the place to go for a delicious lunch along with a view of the world's largest small-boat harbor.

Afterward, you can browse through the Cape-Cod-style art galleries and specialty shops of Fisherman's Village, sampling cheeses and fighting the impulse to indulge in too many charming boutique bargains or exotic imports.

With all the boats around, it's no trick to get on the water yourself. An excursion boat tours the 6000-slip facility every hour. If you're feeling more adventurous, you can rent a sail or powerboat at reasonable prices. A 21-foot sailboat, for example, costs $8.50 an hour. (You also can rent fishing tackle here.) On the other side of the harbor from Fisherman's Village, there's a beautifully landscaped swimming beach, complete with dressing rooms and picnic tables. ■

Decorating a girl's room

Photographs: Hedrich-Blessing. Designer: Robert G. Curtis, Pogue's. Source: Patricia Mertz

A delicate floral backdrop in pastel tones of pink and green give this bedroom a thoroughly feminine feeling. Soft folds of fabric are suspended from curtain rods secured at the ceiling. For weight, rods are drawn through bottom hems. Storage units and coordinated corner desk in spring green trimmed with white complement this very youthful scheme and provide ample space for clothing, books, and bibelots.

Source: Lois Rea

Here a stylized floral pattern scores strong decorating points. Spotted in strategic areas about the room—bedspread, window valance, and drapery linings—the design adds just enough spice to the scene. A matching wallpaper border carries the pattern to the walls and continues the line of the valance. Since window wall was the best spot for the bed, glass was curtained with an opaque fabric.

The only pure cane sugar from Hawaii.

Cookies made with powdered sugar!

An unusual idea from C and H.

If you've been using powdered sugar strictly for frostings, discover how meltingly light, sweet and tender it makes these

VANILLA REFRIGERATOR WAFERS

- ½ cup (1 stick) butter
- ½ cup (1 stick) margarine
- 1¼ cups C and H Powdered Sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon cream of tartar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt

Cream together butter, margarine and powdered sugar. Beat in egg and vanilla. Combine flour, soda, cream of tartar and salt and add to creamed mixture. Mix well. Divide dough in half. Form each half into 2-inch round roll. Wrap in waxed paper or aluminum foil. Chill in refrigerator or freezer. Slice ¼-inch thick. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet in 350 degree oven 8 to 10 minutes. Cool on rack. Makes about 5 dozen. (Rolls can be stored in refrigerator, sliced and baked when desired.)

Get recipes for cutouts and other cookies shown by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to "Powdered Sugar Cookies", C and H Sugar, 1 California Street, San Francisco, California 94106.

Ferns for shady spots

If you really want to garden, don't let too much shade stop you. There are many plants that thrive in the shade. And, they are just as rewarding to grow as the sun-loving kinds. Ferns can be considered the king of shade-loving plants and should be the backbone of the shady garden. Their soft, lush fronds impart a cool, peaceful feeling and make a complementary background to bright flowers and colorful foliage.

There are well over 7,000 varieties of ferns, but less than 50 hardy ones which are commonly available. For gardeners in warm-winter areas, many more types of tender ferns are able, some reaching heig 20 to 30 feet.

In both the hardy an der categories, there ar variations in shapes and s plants, as well as confor of the fronds. Some are s double that they have a look; others have flat, leaflets. Some grow tight ground, but the fronds o arch from one to three f

Meet the meatless "meats"

Yes, you've undoubtedly met the meatless "meats"—but chances are, you only know them in the guise of vege tarian and special dietary fare. The mock "meats" we' talking about are something else again. They're availabl in a mind-boggling array of sizes, shapes, and flavors. I fact, if you want to stage an off-beat (or off-meat) dinne you can serve an entire meal, including the hors d'oeuvr and the main course—using meat imitations.

Food engineers can design a "meat" with less fat and a much or more protein than real meat. Meatless "meats" ca contain as high as 30 percent protein—the average in re meat is 13 to 22 percent. Man-made "meats" can contain a little as one percent vegetable fat compared to about nin percent animal fat in real meat.

Start with soybeans

Most of today's man-made "meats" are made from processe soybeans. The soy protein is spun into fine silky thread These filaments are treated with synthetic colors, flavor vitamins, minerals—even fat—so that the final produ looks, cooks, and tastes almost like the real thing.

Less expensive than spun fibers is the soy flour that r sults from a special extrusion-type processing. This texture protein is used by food processors to enrich existing foo without changing their taste.

The newly created foods are called by many names: me analogs, substitutes, mock meat, edible spun protein, a vegetarian food. They are available in three forms: canne frozen, and dehydrated.

The products that can be produced by the use of soy pr tein are almost limitless. They include baby foods, chip di and meat-like (but totally meatless) ham, fried chicken, a scallops. Mock frankfurters, chipped beef, luncheon loave and vegetable steaks are also on the market. So far, be steak has been the most difficult to imitate, but scientis are working on that.

Also available are cubes, strips, and granules of simulat ham, beef, and chicken. These are the principal protein i gredients in some soups, chili mixes, pot pies, casseroles, a ham and chicken salad mixes. You can get a meat imitati that looks like fried bacon bits, or a mock turkey roll th comes with a plastic wishbone.

Chances are, you've already had some of these meatl "meats" without knowing it. Many convenience foods su as soup mixes, chili, pizzas, and gravies contain sm amounts of flavored, textured soybean "meat" along wi the real meat. You may have to check the ingredient list the label to know the mock meat's there.

In some areas of the country, you'll find the main cou meat imitations sold only in health food stores or sto catering to those who eat no meat because of religious b liefs, health restrictions, or personal preference. Most ch stores in large metropolitan areas carry meatless "meats" their specialty foods section.

They may cost more

While most spun soy "meats" still have a higher price t than real meat, the imitations contain no bones, skin, or cess fat. There's no waste or shrinkage.

Final success of meat substitutes will depend not only price, but on taste—and despite the work of food scienti some meatless "meats" have a long way to go. ■

Fondue Bourguignonne shouldn't be treated like an everyday french fry.

Fondue Bourguignonne—an easy and tasty European delicacy.

And to capture that true European flavor, you must use a true European oil... a 100% peanut oil like premium Planters.

Planters Oil performs best at high fondue temperatures. And it's the lightest of the polyunsaturated oils. But the big reason why gourmets recommend peanut oil for fondue cooking is taste.

It has none of its own and it won't absorb others.

So all it does is bring out that great fondue flavor.

When you start a lawn from scratch, there is a golden opportunity to save yourself loads of work and money—if you take time to do everything correctly. Smooth the way for a second pet

Get a second pet only if you're sure you can give it the attention it needs. Even then, you'll have to ask yourself whether your first pet will be willing to share room and board with the newcomer. There's no test for this. As the animal's owner, you should know your pet well enough to judge.

How quickly the two animals adjust to living with one another depends largely on how you introduce them. Try to remain calm. A grown male dog generally will regard a new puppy or kitten with curiosity. But don't let his enthusiastic sniffing startle the newcomer into flight. Chasing something that moves is instinctive, and your dog may try to grab up the young puppy or kitten as he would a thrown stick.

A grown female dog won't want to mother the youngsters—don't expect her to. In fact, she's likely to be extremely possessive of you and your home, and especially so if she's had her own litter. She may regard the new pup or kitten as a threat. If she is aggressive, reprimand her sharply, then comfort her. Make it clear that it's your house and the two of them are going to live together harmoniously.

The young animal may find all this excitment overwhelming and hide under a chair or sofa. Don't drag him out. Let him have time to build up enough confidence to come out and face his new home on his own.

Bringing two adult dogs together can create a tense situation. A grown dog develops a strong sense of territorial defense, and is likely to regard another coming into his home as an intruder. Take both out to neutral grounds, such as a park or school playground, for the first introduction. If they seem to enjoy one another's company after several outings, you can bring them home together.

The sex of adult dogs has little to do with how they'll get along. The belief that males fight only with males and females with females isn't true. There's no chivalry in dogdom. Except when she's in season, the female is just another dog.

Dogs are social animals and naturally run in packs. A dog raised from puppyhood with people is likely to regard your family as members of his pack and will view strange dogs as different species. He may never accept living with another dog.

An adult cat probably will be indifferent toward a puppy or kitten. When the younger animal gets too close, he may get swatted. This isn't necessarily a hostile reaction. Your cat is just letting the newcomer know who's boss. Bringing two adult cats together is something else. Grown cats, both males and females, tend to be fanatics about territorial possession. If you have a cat that tries to drive all other cats from your yard, don't bring another into your house.

If your grown cat is sandbox-trained, and your kitten is just learning, clean up accidents immediately. Otherwise, the older animal is going to become lax about his own toilet training.

Competition for food and attention is bound to be keen. Getting more food is sometimes equated with getting more attention. Establish a mealtime schedule and don't treat between meals; otherwise you're going to have two fat pets.

Give each animal a bowl of his own, and make it clear that neither is to eat from the other's. This is especially important with a dog and cat. Most cats are slow, deliberate eaters, while dogs generally bolt their meals. If the dog finishes first, he shouldn't have dessert at the cat's expense.

Vaccinations and veterinary checkups are doubly important when you have two pets. They'll not only share your house, they'll share each other's illnesses. Stay alert for worms, ticks, fleas and other parasites. Get both pets to the veterinarian as soon as either shows signs of poor health.

Helps Shrink Painful Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Caused By Inflammation And Infection

Also Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief in Many Cases from Pain and Burning Itch in Such Tissues.

There's an exclusive medication which actually helps shrink painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. And in many cases gives prompt relief for hours from rectal itching and pain in such tissues.

Tests by doctors on patients showed while it gently relieved such pain, it also helped reduce swelling of these tissues.

The medication used in the tests was Preparation H®. No prescription is needed for Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

With Gaines·burgers, your dog gets water with his meal. Not in it.

Regular canned dog foods are 70% water. So you have to lug the water home from the store. And your dog has to eat his food all mixed up with water.

Gaines·burgers just come nice and moist. We let you put a bowl of fresh water alongside Gaines·burgers.

Now that you know how Gaines·burgers are different from canned dog food, here's how they're the same.

They're both good and meaty.

They both give your dog the same vegetables, vitamins and minerals he needs.

They both cost about the same per feeding.

So.

What makes Gaines·burgers better than canned dog food is what they don't have.

All that water.

Gaines·burgers. The canned dog food without the can.®

Our bag is stronger than your garbage.

Our Hefty® plastic trash can liners are exactly what we say they are. Hefty.

They're so strong, that under normal use, your garbage won't break through, like it does so often with those flimsy bags.

They're also leakproof and odorproof.

And that's why they're approved by municipalities across the country.

What's more, they not only help to keep your neighborhood cleaner, but when they're picked up by your collector, you don't have to worry about them adding to pollution*.

So why lug heavy trash cans back and forth?

Use Hefty plastic trash can liners and save your strength.

Fixing faucets and drains

If you can repair a leaking faucet and open a clogged drain, you can avoid the cost and inconvenience of a service call.

For sluggish or clogged drains, you'll need a plunger and/or plumber's snake (coiled steel spring).

1. Try gentlest method—the plunger.

2. Remove drain stop and plug overflow drain with cloth. Then place plunger on the drain and half-fill sink with water. Work the plunger vigorously up and down several times.

3. If drain remains clogged, use plumber's snake. Adjustable crank-type or rotating handle works through sink opening to remove obstruction. Coiled steel spring whips past trap and down drainpipe, forcing obstruction up or down.

4. Once drain has been opened, replace the drain cover.

5. Run water full force to thoroughly flush drain. Or, close drain and half-fill sink with water. When drain is opened, force of water will flush and clear pipes more thoroughly.

6. Use drain cleaner as recommended on container, and rinse down. NEVER use drain cleaner until obstruction is removed. Drain cleaner in backed-up water will corrode fixtures and harm hands.

7. Never use drain cleaner in connection with a septic tank, unless the label fully recommends it for septic tanks.

8. Another tip: If you have to call your plumber on this or other problems involving replacing fittings, you may save a second trip if you can tell him what brand your existing plumbing is.

To repair a dripping faucet, you need only a small wrench, penknife, washers (keep a box of assorted, small rubber washers on hand), screwdriver, key grease, and perhaps a ⅛-inch allen wrench. Wrap adhesive tape around faucets to prevent scratches.

1. Turn off water at hot or cold cutoff valve under sink (turn off both for mixer type faucet). Or, turn off main water valve, usually near meter.

2. Open faucet to drain water from pipes. After water has drained, close drain so small screws won't fall in.

3. Some faucet handles have center screw. Remove screw, lift off handle. Remove packing nut, stem and old washer. Install same-size new one.

Modern single-lever faucets are secured in center front of assembly. (Each brand is a little different.) Remove with an allen wrench; then lift off handle.

Remove old washer with screwdriver. Press same-size new one in place.

To adjust newest faucets, pack stem area lightly with key grease for a snug fit; tighten with allen wrench.

4. Drop handle back in place and tighten screw. Turn on cutoff valves under sink. Many new faucets are pressure packed without washers. Follow directions to remove handle and valve; pack with key grease; reset handle. ■

If you think a home permanent means frizzy curls... you're living in the past.

Today permanent body, permanent texture and permanent hold are where it's at. And that's exactly what you get from a home permanent.

And more. Like total freedom to choose the exact amount of curl you want. From smooth and shapely to soft and curvy. It's all in the timing. The flexibility of a home permanent is truly amazing. And totally pleasing.

You see, home permanents restructure your hair from the inside out. That's what makes the body and texture permanent. So hair doesn't just look and feel thicker—it actually is! And you can reshape it into any hairstyle you want.

But the most important thing you get from a home permanent is hold. That means from shampoo to shampoo your hairstyle will hold together without constant resetting. And what woman wouldn't adore that kind of hold!

No matter how you wear your hair—whether it's your natural color or not—there's a Toni home permanent that's just right for you. It's the only way you can get permanent body, permanent texture and permanent hold. Now isn't it about time you stopped living in the past?

High school counseling

ing a career choice based on honest beliefs and sound logic, even though the parents may be perplexed and disappointed. After all, what's at stake here is the youngster's life, not the parents'.

Do counselors know kids well enough?

In the areas in which they usually work, yes; in others, no. If a youngster were considering leaving the Catholic church, for example, very few counselors would presume to advise him. Even assuming the counselor were well-informed about religion, his knowledge of the student himself would probably be too sketchy to permit responsible guidance in this area.

But in other matters, especially those that pertain to education, the counselor can usually speak with some authority. True, he may seldom meet the youngster face-to-face, but he has access to the student's scholastic record back through kindergarten, the results of various personality and aptitude tests, comments on the youngsters character by his teachers through the years, and notes about the student's special interests and achievements. It adds up to a fairly accurate picture.

What if a counselor can't handle a student's problem?

He should refer him to someone more qualified either within the school system, such as the psychologist or school nurse, or to an appropriate organization outside. He should be careful not to overstep the limits of his competence. He isn't the student's parent, psychiatrist, lawyer or priest, and a good counselor never tries to play those roles.

Are student-counselor discussions confidential?

Absolutely, whenever the student requests it. If a youngster were to discover that a counselor "told" on him—by running to the kid's parents, say, about some trouble he was in—that counselor's future effectiveness would be utterly destroyed. He would never hear another honest word from any student, because news of such incidents spreads quickly. No, a good counselor certainly doesn't blab things around—not to parents, not to teachers, not to principals, not to anyone. He knows that he exists mainly for the benefit of the student, in the same way that a doctor's first allegiance is to his patient and a lawyer's responsibility is to his client's best interests. Legally, a counselor's silence isn't as inviolate as a priest's, say, but the circumstances in which he might betray a student's confidence are very rare indeed.

Do kids tell counselors about drug-related problems?

No, unfortunately not. That's the one kind of trouble students very seldom mention. They often talk freely about their other deep concerns such as fights with their parents, sexual woes, a hatred for some teacher, a desire to commit suicide. But on the single subject of drugs, they clam up. A poll of all the counselors in one Midwestern city revealed that of a total of 45,000 students only eight had told their counselor that they'd ever tried drugs, and only 15 said they knew someone who had. Optimists might regard this as reassuring proof that the current youth-on-drugs scare has been blown up out of proportion. But it's perhaps more realistic to interpret it as evidence of the very deep suspicion with which drug experimenters view all outsiders.

Does the typical counselor spend much time with students?

No, because he's usually saddled with many other duties, such as administering tests, scheduling classes and filling out forms. Counselors are handy, and principals tend to take advantage of that fact to rid themselves of their own time-consuming administrative chores. The more militant members of the counseling profession are convinced that this situation will only be corrected when counselors refuse to accept those chores not directly connected with their jobs.

Is there a generation gap between counselors and students?

In many cases, yes, a considerable one. Especially when the counselor is an older man or woman, communication can be a big problem. Efforts to bridge the age gap with a staff of good young counselors encounter a number of sizable obstacles. To begin with, a counselor candidate needs post-graduate training and in many cases a couple years of teaching experience before he qualifies for certification. This means that by the time he gets his first counseling job, he's already four or five years out of college—which makes him ancient in the eyes of high school students. And of course the age gap widens with each passing year as the counselor acquires experience and tenure. Realistic solutions to this dilemma are not yet evident.

Is the best counseling usually found in big-city schools?

No, in fact, it's closer to the reverse. Many big-city counselors are among the best qualified. The cream of the younger crop is attracted there by higher wages, plus the excitement of being situated "where the action's at." But their expertise is often overwhelmed by sheer numbers. One counselor may be assigned as many as 2000 students, which is far more than he can work with effectively. In less crowded high schools with a more reasonable ratio—300 students per counselor, let's say—the chances for success are ten times greater. Small country high schools may have the best counseling programs because the counselor can develop a closer acquaintance with the students than a metropolitan setting usually allows.

Do most high schools have black counselors for black students?

No, but they wish they did. It's the one way they see of getting through to black youngsters, many of whom scoff at what a white counselor tells them because "whites don't understand our situation." Regardless of how valid that reasoning might be, the attitude is an unavoidable fact of life. A qualified black candidate for a counseling position would be eagerly hired by almost any school system. Unfortunately, very few of them are inclined to apply. The reason is that a Negro with a master's degree—a credential most school systems require for their counselors—is such a rarity that he can usually command much higher wages elsewhere. (With whites, just the reverse situation prevails; so many of them are armed with master's degrees these days that they constitute a glut on the market. The number of white applicants for counseling positions far exceeds the number of jobs open.)

Will your youngster get a good counselor?

Many's the high school counselor whose advice is never sought. While he sits there in his office surrounded by make-work, kids with pressing problems take them to the history teacher instead, says, because he listens more attentively. His affection and concern for the students goes deeper, and his advice is consequently more useful than the official counselor's.

The best way to find out if your youngster has a good counselor is to meet him face-to-face when the opportunity arises. At regularly scheduled parent-counselor conferences, for instance, you can usually tell how well he knows his job (and knows your youngster) so that in the future you can assign his words due weight. An alert, informed counselor can be of great help to parents in guiding their son or daughter through difficult years. By all means, you should call on him whenever the need arises; don't wait until the next formal meeting. On the other hand, if he's the opposite type, patently inept, do exactly what the kids do: ignore him. ■

No dieting, no discomfort and thanks to my trim-jeans my figure has never looked better."

The man next door®

I always feel apprehensive about the after-dinner speaker who says he has "only a few words." It never fails: after he gets done with his few words, that's when he really starts talking.

What does it mean to be the head of the family? Well, at our house, it means that when we have more than two couples over for dinner, I get the chipped coffee cup.

It's a good thing infants don't start out enunciating perfectly or grandparents wouldn't get those cute nicknames of which they are so proud.

I told Burt, Jr., that I am through taking him fishing if he ever tries to help me into the boat again.

It is never wise for me to take a violent dislike to a popular song. It takes its revenge by running through my mind while I'm trying to sleep, trying to sleep, trying to sleep . . .

To celebrate my recent pay raise, I took Christine out to the best restaurant in town. It was the place we went on the last similar occasion, and Chris observed how the "nice young waiters have turned into old men."

Rosemary keeps telling me she is a member of the "now" generation. Maybe so. But how come she never gets anywhere on time?

The sunshine of early spring tends to be weak and pale. I guess the sun is like our old TV set. It takes time to warm up after it has been turned on.

The weather we've experienced this spring has made me glad I'm on friendly terms with our plumber.

Christine wonders if people who don't have children eventually forget what toasted marshmallows taste like.

It's hard to say who gets more excited about the coming of spring, Uncle Dodd Buckner or ten-year-old Judy. To one, the mystery is so old; to the other, so new.

Grumpy Ned Carter says he tries to be tolerant of the fellow who disagrees with him because "he has a right to his ridiculous opinions."

I suppose that Rosemary, 16, is typical in that she feels there are two sides to every question: her side and my side, which she refers to as the wrong side.

"To my nephew who despises the establishment, I leave one dollar and a copy of this will in which I bequeath two million dollars to the National Association of Manufacturers."

"How much for the rocker alone,"

Young Curt Phillips has been transferred here by his company in the well-known game of executive checkers. He had gone to school with my brother and was here without his family until the end of the school term.

He was lonely, so I invited him over to dinner. Driving out from his hotel, I tried to make him feel at home by observing such points of interest as the location of the Opera House until it burned in 1906, and the remaining piers of the first bridge that had linked the town with Eastern markets.

Suddenly, it occurred to me I probably was boring him. "Not at all," he said, "but if you don't mind my correcting a native son, the bridge actually was the second one. There was an earlier crossing a half-mile upstream. And the Opera House fire was in 1907."

My face conveyed my surprise, and he continued, "I've been here nearly a month, with time on my hands to take a guided tour, check out a few books and join the county historical society."

"But," I said, "why would you care? You've never been here before and you'll probably move on again in a year."

"That's the point," he said earnestly. "The corporate gypsy life has its drawbacks, but it does give our family a great chance to learn history on the spot."

The things Curt was saying really opened my eyes. He got me to thinking that the years one lives in a town are not nearly as important as initiative, enthusiasm and simple curiosity.

Having lived here all my life, I must say I felt a bit guilty when Curt promised to get me a membership application from my own town's historical society. But his point was well taken. I'll do better.

Taking the mystery out of tire buying

Your favorite sport: how healthy is it?

Do you have these old-ceiling problems?

Your Armstrong dealer has these new-ceiling answers.

Problem: A cracked ceiling in your dining room. Solution— a kind of ceiling designed specially for your most elegant rooms. These are richly textured ceilings with an almost sculptured look—unlike any tile ceiling you've ever seen. In fact, they don't look like tile ceilings at all. The old "v-groove" joints between tiles are gone, so the seams are less noticeable and the rich texture flows smoothly from wall to wall. Appropriately enough, we call them "Chandelier™ Ceilings". The "Barbary" design shown is one of the newest; and there are several others to choose from.

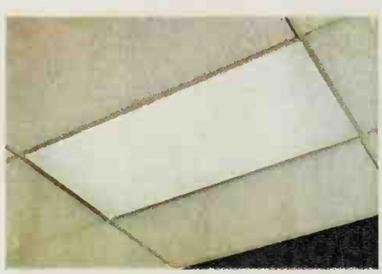
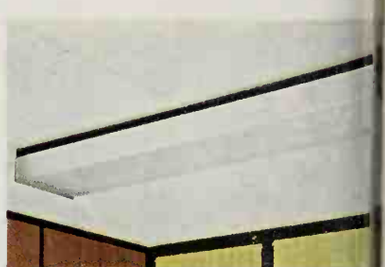
Problem: Exposed pipes and wires in basement. Hide them with an Armstrong suspended ceiling. It's easy. The new ceiling is suspended just below the old one in a metal grid with the 2′ x 4′ panels simply dropped into place. The "Northgate" design, shown here, is the newest and one of the most attractive of the 18 designs available. An Armstrong suspended ceiling is the fast, economical, and attractive way to cover up anything and everything you don't want to be seen.

Problem: Dull, flat, uninteresting ceilings. With "Marquee"— Armstrong's exciting new type of suspended ceiling—you say good-bye to that dull, flat ceiling in a large family room or kitchen. Marquee's unique "recessed" light sections take the place of regular ceiling panels. The result: an extraordinary three-dimensional effect, enhanced by built-in lighting fixtures.

Problem: Poor lighting, ugly fixtures. You'll find lots of bright solutions in Armstrong's line of lighting fixtures. They give you attractive, efficient lighting and fit right into your Armstrong ceiling. All are prewired and easy to install. And there's a complete line of new luminous panels to put any room in its very best light.





You'll find a fresh assortment of smart new designs and textures in every kind of tile and suspended ceiling at your Armstrong dealer's now. Many Armstrong ceilings are "acoustical". They soak up irritating household noise. Others are noncombustible to help protect against fire. And all can be installed by any reasonably handy husband. Their cost usually comes as a pleasant surprise. Take your pick; your Armstrong ceiling for a 12′ by 14′ room will cost from $40 to $72.

No matter what your ceiling problem, your Armstrong dealer has the answer. See him today.

If artichokes won't choke us up, nothing will.

If a KitchenAid disposer can swallow tough, stringy artichoke leaves, it can swallow anything. Like steak bones. Chicken bones. Even celery.

It grinds faster, finer and quieter. Its grinding elements are cast stainless steel. Its undercutting teeth cut stringy foods into fine particles that wash down the drain easily. And it's specially insulated.

There's no odor because food doesn't cling to the Teflon-S*-coated sides. So garbage odors go down the drain with the garbage.

If it ever gets choked up, you can clear the jam electrically. You don't need a wrench.

Do you want a disposer that can take what you dish out? See your KitchenAid dealer. He's in the Yellow Pages. Or send us this coupon.

How safe is your safe deposit box?

It's probably the safest spot you'll find to keep your securities, valuable jewelry, rare coins, legal documents and other hard-to-replace records. For just a few cents a day, you get this kind of protection: bank vaults built for maximum security against theft, most of them absolutely fireproof. Under ordinary circumstances, no one can get into your box except those whose signatures you have put on record. They also must have a special key that matches up with the one the attendant keeps.

• Who else can get into the box? The bank does have the right to open your box without your permission, but only if you haven't paid the box rental, or have terminated or violated the lease. Even then, there must be written notice first. Usually a bank official must be present, with a notary public, to list the contents—which are kept for the period required by state law.

The Internal Revenue Service cannot gain access to your box without a court order. In this instance, and some others, the court can either require you to disclose the contents of your box, or it can order the box opened and the contents seized. If this happens, you or the bank can question the validity of the order and resist it legally.

• Can your spouse open the box? Generally, only if he or she is a joint tenant of the box, has been designated by you as your deputy or has power of attorney.

• What if you own the box jointly? Joint tenancy does not establish that the contents are joint property. Ownership must be clearly stated or proved for each item.

If one of the joint tenants dies, most state laws and bank regulations require the box to be sealed until legal requirements are met. In some states, the surviving tenant or an executor is permitted to look for a will or insurance policy.

• Are safe deposit box contents insured? Not by the FDIC. Nor are they covered against burglary, fire and other hazards. If a loss results from negligenc dishonesty or mistakes of bank employe —and you can prove it—the bank may liable. Similarly, if the vaults are adv tised as burglar-proof and fireproof, a they prove not to be, you could probab recover your losses from the bank. In eith case, of course, you would have to ha some proof of what was in the box.

What about your own insuranc Your homeowners or personal theft poli would provide some coverage for the co tents—probably up to such limits as $1 for cash, $500 for securities and other v uable papers, $500 maximum for all jew ry. For higher coverage, you can buy sp cial safe deposit or securities insurance. doesn't cost much, since chances of l with a safe deposit box are very slim.

What if the bank fails? Your safe depo box won't be affected. There might be slight delay in getting to it because of gen al confusion, but that shouldn't last long

Break the rules when you shop—and still save

Sometimes it pays to ignore the traditional shopping rules, such as following a list, avoiding impulse buying and buying in quantity. If you're on your toes and know what you're doing, you can make shopping more fun—and a bargain to boot.

Forget your shopping list if you find exceptionally good buys that aren't on your list, or if some other food your family really enjoys is selling at a special low price. Don't follow the list, either, when an item is priced at an all-time high and you can do without or make less expensive substitutes. Try low-priced apples to replace high-priced pears, or pork roast at 89¢ a pound instead of beef roast at 99¢.

Indulge your impulse if a new product appeals to you and is offered at a special introductory price. Follow your fancy, too, when a food you hadn't thought of looks better than one you planned to buy. It even pays to try a new food occasionally just to break out of a rut. It could make you feel just as happy as a more expensive hair-do or a night on the town.

Buy the smaller economy size on those few occasions when it's less expensive per unit than the same item in large quantity. Small sizes also save money if a recipe calls for only a small amount of that ingredient, or if you cannot properly store the food in large quantities until you can use it all up. Be wary when you're trying something for the first time, too. Unless you're sure your family will like it, the smallest size may be the best buy.

Buy the best quality, whatever the price, when it's the only brand of a specific food your family will eat. Low-priced substitu are costly when you have to throw th out. Top or high quality may also be y best choice when appearance and form the food are important—a stuffed toma for instance, rather than tomato cut up i salad, or poached eggs, not scrambled.

Buy the lowest quality if you plan to food in soup, stew, or some other relativ unrecognizable form. Low quality is usu ly as nutritious as top quality, and you often save by feeding youngsters cert types of food where quality doesn't ma that much difference to them. Ice cream ice cream to most four-year-olds, whet it cost 79¢ a quart or $1.50. Let y family in on the choice—they may be w ing to eat less expensive foods if it me you can splurge occasionally ■

What if you're turned down for life insurance?

Surprisingly, you may still be able to get some. Many companies now accept applicants with limited degrees of heart disease, hypertension, diabetes, overweight, kidney and liver ailments. Even people who have had cancer can get insurance under certain circumstances. If you're rejected for these or other medical reasons, don't assume you're completely uninsurable. Any of the following possibilities might work for you.

• Talk to your own doctor. With some treatment, your condition may be improved enough to meet the company's standards. Remember that the company wants to sell you the insurance. On your second try, it might accept you—at least as a "substandard risk" at a higher premium.

• Try another company. Standards vary from one company to another. Get the help of a good broker who is knowledgeable about such variations. If your insura agent does not handle substandard ri himself, ask him to put you in touch w one who does.

• Examine your present policy. Th may be provisions that allow you to crease your coverage without a med examination.

Because every Goldilocks has a different idea of what's too soft, what's too hard, and what's just right, Beautyrest now comes in 4 firmnesses.

We're all a lot like Goldilocks, the little girl who had to try everything, from porridge to mattresses, until she found exactly what she wanted.

For that very reason, we now make Beautyrest® in four firmnesses. Besides Normal Firm, there are three Back Care models: Extra Firm, Extra Firm Plus and Super Firm. So you can go from mattress to mattress until you find the one that's right for you.

But firmness alone can't support your body properly. That's the difference between a Beautyrest and hard, "boardy" mattresses. A Beautyrest is firm, but flexible.

Beautyrest support comes from separate coils, each built into its own separate pocket. So each one is free to separately support whichever part of your body it happens to be under.

By conforming to your shape, a Beautyrest can give you more support, more comfortably, than any other firm mattress.

You can't buy more of a mattress. Unless you buy more of a Beautyrest. A Queen size gives you 20% more sleeping space than an old-fashioned double bed. A King size, 50% more.

For your nearest Beautyrest dealer, call 800-553-9550 free. (In Iowa, call 319-242-1867 collect.) He'll help you choose the firmness that's most comfortable for you. So you can sleep happily ever after.

Free offer: For a limited time only, when you buy any Beautyrest Queen size set, you receive your choice of a free Queen size frame or free bed stretcher rails to convert your old double bed to Queen size. Offer expires May 31, 1971.

Living through A REMODELING

You've signed with a reputable contractor and the remodeling work is about to begin. What you —and your contractor—do next about your working relationship will make the difference between a pleasant experience or an unhappy one.

We know of a successful remodeling job that started with the family's trying to bargain the contractor's $10,000 bid down to that of his competitor's $9400. The contractor told them, "I've been in this business for 20 years, and all that experience can be at your disposal. I'll make the same profit on this project whether you choose my bid or that of my competitor. If you pay me $10,000, I'll put my 20 years to work for you; if I have to do it for $9400, I'll put that experience to work for me. Which way would you rather have it?" Wisely, they bought his experience.

Your responsibility is to choose the best contractor to do the work—one who has a reputation for quality workmanship, reasonable speed, fair prices and pride in his work. After you've found the right man, step back and trust his skills—and your own judgment.

But your job doesn't end there. You can do other things to insure smooth sailing:

• Make a phase list of procedures. Have the contractor explain what will be removed and installed; that way, you'll know what's involved and how long it takes.

• Post the builder's phone number by your telephone in case a question arises during construction. To avoid mutual confusion, delegate only one family spokesman.

• Plan adequate storage space. Make room for materials, tools and equipment by clearing work area of unnecessary gear.

• Double-check materials as they arrive. Once installed, they're all yours. You can cut down last-minute decisions and delays by selecting the materials in advance.

• Check locks and keys. You'll probably need to share keys with the contractor or his men. Ask who will take responsibility.

• Expect the unexpected. No one can prepare you for all the unforeseen incidents that may transpire. It's hard to imagine all the things that could go wrong: late deliveries, strikes, shipment shortages, wrong parts, oversights, rain, on-the-spot changes, etc. Tearing down a wall may uncover a problem that demands plan revisions. This starts a chain reaction that invariably leads to delays.

• Brush up on building methods. A li construction savvy will help see you throu those blue days when workmen fail to sh up. Could that happen? Yes, you'll find t remodeling proceeds in stages. • Don't expect perfection. But do exp good work. Built-ins won't have a furnitu like finish unless you pay furniture prices

• Batten down your belongings. Cover f niture and carpeting. Take advantage of period to send your draperies and upholst to the cleaners. When the remodeling beg you won't believe all that dirt and dust.

• Hang loose. Keep calm and flexible. Ti clocking workmen only builds resentment doesn't save a penny.

How healthy is your SPORT?

Medical investigators consistently report that the flabby, aging American is getting softer all the time—lazier, fatter, more easily fatigued. These authorities say that barely one-fifth of our adult population, if tested against any reasonable standard, would be found in good physical condition.

With each passing year, your basic condition—which is measured primarily by your heart and lung performance—is increasingly significant. It's far more important than any athletic prowess or the development of a muscular physique. No one ever died, after all, from scrawny thighs or flabby biceps. But weak hearts prematurely kill thousands of Americans every month and cause millions of others to be constantly fatigued.

One realistic way to avoid this fate is to achieve and maintain good overall fitness through an exercise program designed to enlarge your heart's reserve capabilities. More precisely, you should condition your whole oxygen-delivery system, not just your heart but your lungs and blood vessels as well, to accommodate a greater work load.

On a day-to-day basis, this reserve capability is what protects you from constant fatigue. Your regular duties won't leave you exhausted if you've built up a capacity for doing much more. In an emergency, this reserve could literally save your life. For example, if a coronary artery becomes clogged—the most frequent cause of heart attacks—the result could be immediate death. But if you've developed "extra" coronary arteries and capillaries through exercise, they can take over and keep the heart supplied with oxygen. On the other hand, an unconditioned circulatory system deteriorates and speeds the onset of trouble: deposits build up on artery walls; blood vessels lose their suppleness and elasticity; the heart and lungs grow lazy and feeble.

Is there an ideal sport?

Make an honest assessment: what does your sport do for your basic fitness? The skill it requires, the judgment, the nerve—these and similar factors are irrelevant. Whether one sport is intrinsically "better" than another is not an issue here.

You could argue, for example, that golf is in many ways an almost perfect pastime. It's fun, it's relaxing, it appeals to all ages. Played seriously, it presents a hard challenge. But since golf makes fewer strenuous demands on the body, it has to be ranked lower than handball, for instance, in terms of its efficiency as a conditioner for your heart. Most middle-aged men could play golf all afternoon without ever having to draw a deep breath. And the evidence is overwhelming that the best sports for basic fitness are those that require deep breathing and a speeded-up heart rate sustained over a period of time, not just in spurts.

Exercise is beneficial to overall fitness in proportion to the amount of steady exertion it demands. The best exercise is simultaneously strenuous and prolonged—not one or the other, but both. An all-out effort that ends practically at once—dashing a hundred yards in ten seconds, for example—gives the heart too little time in which to exert itself properly. (That's one big flaw in the various "instant" exercise programs so highly touted in recent years.) And at the other end of the spectrum, a whole morning on the golf course, where the average rate of walking is about one mile per hour, provides no real occasion for exertion. The sports most beneficial to overall fitness—and therefore your heart—are located somewhere near the center of this spectrum, such as long-distance running where your heart and lungs must work steadily and hard.

Some people find it difficult to accept this central fact. Most milers look puny beside football players, say, and it's commonly assumed that big skeletal muscles are positive proof of superior overall fitness. Such is not always the case, however, even among champion athletes. Their training is often focused on some short-term objective, designed in many cases to perfect specific skills without necessarily improving basic fitness to anything like a comparable degree.

How do you rate your sport?

The mere fact that your muscles get tired does not prove you've had a healthy workout. Especially if you're in less than top condition, or if you resort to "instant" fitness programs, your muscles may tire even before your heart gets warmed up. Such exercise does a minimum of good.

One good yardstick for most people is the number 130. Experts agree that exercise begins to be very useful—and this rule applies to any form of exercise or sport—when the heart is made to pump at a minimum rate of 130 times a minute. (This is often called pulse rate and is not to be confused with blood pressure readings.) At a slower pace, few demands are imposed on heart or lungs that would cause them to grow stronger or more efficient.

How healthy a particular sport or exercise program is depends not only on the nature of the activity, but on how vigorously you pursue it. Swimming, if you really swim, gives your heart a good workout. But if you just stand around in the pool and splash a little, you might as well be sitting at a desk. The same goes for hand ball, tennis, skating or any other sport you might take up: they can make your heart pump if you play them with vigor.

A pertinent question to ask, then, is this: How often, if ever, do you play hard enough to keep your heart pumping at 130 or over? With practice, you'll learn to "feel" when you're working this hard, mainly by the depth and rhythm of your breathing. In the meantime, just count your heartbeats or pulse for ten seconds and multiply that number by six.

Naturally, those sports that involve a lot of running—basketball, for instance, if you use a full court—tend to provide more exercise than slower games like golf. But even golf can be played in a strenuous manner. George Romney, now secretary of Housing and Urban Development, adopted the practice when he was governor of Michigan of playing nine holes every day, but with a difference. He played three balls simultaneously over a distance of three holes—three times three for a total of nine—and instead of walking between shots, he ran. In the 15 minutes or so that this took him, his heart was really working.

How much should you play?

Fifteen minutes a day of hard exercise is enough to keep most people in pretty good shape. One hour a week, in fact, can help protect your heart and is probably a more realistic goal. Your long-range plan should be based on that figure: at least one hour a week divided either of two ways—into three sessions of 20 minutes, or four of 15. The choice is up to you. This certainly isn't to dissuade you from playing longer if you like. The more exercise you get, the more profit to your health.

Then, when you're finished, make an honest appraisal of how long in that session you were really bearing down. For how many minutes were you sustaining a heartbeat of 130 or higher? (Don't include brief flurries of activity or excitement; nothing counts until after you've held that fast a pace for a minimum of five minutes without letup.) Resist the temptation to exaggerate here. Don't delude yourself. If you're a golfer and use a caddy or a golf cart, your heart may never reach 130, and kidding yourself about it will destroy the whole plan.

If the honest answer is over 15 or 20 minutes, whichever is in keeping with the schedule you've selected, that's all there is to it; you're done until the next time. (The 15 or 20 minutes is a maximum figure, and the most you can get credit for in any one session.) If the answer is lower, you must make up the difference—either by returning to the sport you've been engaged in, playing a little longer with a little more effort or by rounding out the session with some running. Ten minutes of running is ten minutes of work, and it's usually the best way to wipe out a deficit.

As with any fitness program there are certain precautions.

- If you're over 35 or lead a sedentary life, get a checkup and your doctor's approval before you start—especially if anything in your medical history might impose limitations on activity. Ask your doctor to recommend a sport, if you don't have one.
- If your heart rate approaches 170, slow down. You're working too hard. Sustaining that fast a pace can be risky.
- Don't expect too much of yourself too soon. Adopt a conservative attitude. Start slowly and let your heart tell you when to work harder. Very light exercise might suffice for a few weeks to result in a heart rate of 130. As your overall fitness improves, getting to this point will take more effort. Warming-up and cooling-down periods of a few minutes are valuable, too.
- Obviously, you should stay on the safe side of exhaustion. Exercise should leave you tired but not exhausted—there's a difference. A good indication that you might be overdoing it is if, two minutes after you've stopped exercising, your heart rate still exceeds 110.
- The American Medical Association warns of four danger signs:

1. Breathlessness and pounding of the heart still noticeable ten minutes after exercise.
2. Marked weakness or fatigue that persists after two hours.
3. A broken night's sleep attributable to exercise.
4. A definite sense of fatigue the following day.

If any one of these signs appears, your sport has been too severe or too prolonged for your present stage of training and physical strength.

A diversified divider

This see-through room divider provides the answer to several of your space problems. It not only divides, it adds storage space and a handy serving shelf.

And that's not all. The project looks permanent, but its five basic sections can be dismantled and taken with you at moving time.

The four rectangular columns minus fronts and backs are slotted to accept ¼-inch plate glass or clear plastic shelves. These provide a wealth of display space without blocking the light. Floodlights recessed in the cornice are spaced between the columns.

Serving shelf on the back folds down to form a convenient buffet 18 inches wide and 4 feet 10½ inches long. When folded up, the shelf acts as a decorative panel and stabilizing element on the freestanding columns.

Overall dimensions of the divider: 7 feet 10 inches high, 6 feet wide and 16 inches deep. The basic building material is ¾-inch plywood painted with semigloss enamel.

When and how to use furring strips

If you're thinking about paneling a room or putting up acoustical tile on a ceiling, you'll soon hear about furring strips. The most important thing to know is when you don't need to bother with them. These days, that's pretty often. With the advent of the new builder's adhesives, you can usually glue paneling directly to the walls.

When are furring strips a necessity? Whenever the wall you intend to cover is too irregular, pockmarked, or otherwise damaged to directly support a new surface. Furring strips will make a stronger and smoother framework on which to support paneling. For example, if your wall is covered with peeling wallpaper and the plaster is cracked or gouged, you can't glue panels directly to the wall. If you did, the adhesive would just pull the paper or plaster loose instead of sticking to the wall.

Rather than strip the walls, just nail up furring strips and avoid the whole problem. The best material to use in this case is ¼-inch plywood. Buy the cheapest plywood you can get. Then rip it into strips about three inches wide. Pull off the baseboards all the way around the room, and remove the ceiling molding if there is any. Now nail strips of plywood horizontally along the ceiling line, and at the floor line. Be sure to drive the nails through the plywood and wall surface into the studs. You'll usually be able to see the location of the studs when you remove the baseboard.

If you don't see them, just drill or cut holes in the wall until you find a stud. Since studs are almost always set 16 inches apart, from center to center, once you've found one the rest are easy to locate.

Now nail vertical furring strips onto every stud, starting in a corner. This way every third vertical strip will occur where the four-foot-wide panels should meet (see diagram 1). So all you have to do is glue or nail the panels to the ¼-inch furring strips. If you use panel adhesive, apply the adhesive to the strips instead of the panels.

In a basement, you could glue the paneling to the wall with plastic-foam sheet insulation. But if your walls are rough, use furring strips. Fasten 2x2-inch furring strips to the wall with one of the new adhesives, and fill in with insulation between them. Cover the whole framework with paneling. Space the upright strips every two feet, with a horizontal strip top and bottom. Add roll-type insulation batts between strips or glue in panels of rigid foam insulation (diagram 2). Then finish by gluing or nailing on your paneling.

When you come to windows, frame around them with 2x2s, then cut scraps of paneling to line the inside of the window opening. Glue these in place and then cut the wall panel to fit around the opening. Make a neat job of it by covering all the edges with outside corner molding (diagram 3).

Some basement walls in older homes are just too rough and out of line to allow furring strips to be glued on. If you're faced with this problem, sidestep it by building a new 2x4 framed wall section to go right

SEWAGE POLLUTION: WHAT CAN BE DONE AND WHEN?

The second in a series of articles

Americans traveling in foreign countries are often warned to be careful about the water: it may not be safe to drink. It is only then that many of them reflect—always proudly and often for the first time—on the high quality of America's water.

But how long will we be able to drink our own water? As everyone knows by now, its quality is rapidly deteriorating. Water pollution is most serious in the Northeast and in the Great Lakes region, but the pollution problem exists in all parts of the United States.

Like most problems, this one is subject to oversimplification. For instance, what causes water pollution? Put that question to almost any group of people and you're likely to hear a great deal of talk about laundry detergents that contain phosphates. If you want clean lakes and rivers, someone will say, get rid of the phosphate detergents.

True—eliminating those kinds of detergents is a necessary step. But that alone will not solve the problem, for detergents are not the only source of phosphates that issue from our sewer pipes. Another major source of phosphate is human waste. If anything, the hue and cry about phosphate laundry products has tended to obscure a vastly more important issue: as a nation we have been unwilling to pay for proper sewage treatment.

Here, as in other areas of deep concern, it's all too easy to become confused by controversial claims and counterclaims, political opportunism and general hysteria. The purpose of this series of articles is to report sanely and with balance on these vital issues.

Some 1400 communities, including New York City, dump all or part of their sewage raw into the nearest water. A third of our population lives without sewers of any kind content with cesspools and septic tanks whose residues seep into underground streams. Another third is served by sewage treatment systems that simply don't do an adequate job.

It's almost unbelievable: the body wastes of two out of three Americans—more than 130,000,000 human beings in the richest country on earth—return into the water cycle practically unchanged.

The hygienic aspects of this situation are obvious. Shellfish from some sections of our coasts harbor the threat of hepatitis and worse. Numerous beaches have become unfit for use. The specter of epidemics lurks in our lakes and streams. Wells in many areas of our country require constant testing, and must be dug ever deeper to escape contamination by intestinal bacteria now common in the higher strata of the subsoil.

Contaminated water not only poses a health hazard but greatly hastens a process called eutrophication, the "dying of lakes." That's where the phosphates come in—the phosphates in detergents as well as those naturally present, along with nitrates, in body wastes. Both phosphates and nitrates are powerful nutrients. The trouble is that they act as plant fertilizers in water just as they do in soil.

They stimulate an overgrowth of algae and other aquatic plants. As this plant material dies, it decomposes and consumes the water's oxygen. This leads to foul odors, kills fish, and halts the bacterial action that normally consumes organic wastes. The process eventually fills lakes, ponds and streams with muck and turns them into swamps or marshland.

Actually eutrophication is a natural process. It happens in waters unsullied by man, simply as a result of the nourishing runoff from adjoining land. In nature, though, this takes thousands of years. We have greatly stepped up the process. Unsewered and densely populated as we are, we can almost see it happen before our ve eyes. The Potomac River is sluggish sink. Klamath La in Oregon, Chain O'Lakes Illinois and Wisconsin, La Onondaga in upstate Ne York—they and others are dying from lack of oxyge The shallow western end Lake Erie has turned into festering reservoir of dead o ganic mush. Once the con nental United States possess 33 sparkling salmon strean now only six can support th fish which is so dependent clear, aerated water.

The facts are plain: we ca rest with finding new, hop fully harmless detergents. W also have to clean up our bo wastes—and on this score can't pass the buck to gover ment or industry but must a sume responsibility ourselv

Sewage treatment comes three stages. Primary trea ment means no more th screening out large materi such as sticks and rags, and lowing solid matter to sett then draining off the foul wat from this noxious sludg That's all there is to it. Near one-third of our population served by systems that go further than this. Why? B cause it's the cheapest metho

Secondary treatment co sists of holding the liquid fro primary treatment in tank Bacteria in these tanks co sume organic waste, with ar ficial aeration helping to spe the process. More sludge forn in the tanks, and at the end this treatment 85 to 90 pe cent of pollutants have be removed. This system cos more, of course, and so f only one-third of our popul tion has been willing to finan it in their communities.

The third and most advanc stage, called tertiary treatmen goes after the remaining poll tants. It is complicated and e pensive, requiring chemica physical agitation and a co plex system of filtration. I deed, tertiary treatment more costly than the two ea lier steps combined—but u fortunately it's only at th last stage that phosphates, n trates and other nutrients a finally removed.

example of three-stage sewage disposal can be found in South Lake Tahoe, Calif., whose system transforms raw sewage into water pure enough to drink. This plant, built by Envirotech Corp., was designed for a potential 100,000 population in a 20-square-mile area. The price tag was $6 million ($28 million counting the laying of sewer pipes). Its operation, including amortization, costs 40 cents per 1000 gallons of sewage. At 70 gallons of household sewage per person per day, this brings the monthly cost per resident to about a dollar.

A similar plant in a city of 1.5 million would cost $17.5 million to build. The operational cost would drop even more: to 11 cents per 1000 gallons, or about 25 cents per person per month. Still, few communities can afford tertiary facilities like this one, and to consider installing them while so much of the country still lacks even secondary treatment is utterly unrealistic.

Tertiary treatment may not always be necessary. There are several other ways to remove phosphates at earlier stages of treatment. For the most part, though, these methods are either still experimental or are presently workable only in particular localities. Until one or more of these methods can be widely adopted, tertiary treatment remains the best method of removing phosphates, nitrates and other nutrients.

What government can do.

How about federal financing? To demand that Washington foot the whole bill is begging the issue: in the end, the funds must come out of taxes anyway. But the government should stand ready to contribute a fair share, and it has done this where municipalities are willing to meet standards.

Right now it is the federal policy goal to bring secondary treatment, at least, to nine out of ten communities within the next five years. Studies by the Department of Interior indicate that this will cost some $10 billion. The proposed federal share would be $4 billion —provided Congress approves it—with the rest coming from states and cities. President N on has gone even further. has just asked for $2 billion year to enable cities to build improve waste treatment cilities.

This is a lot of money to a of Congress, especially wh Congress is not in a spendi mood. But it's not really much in a country that h passed the trillion mark gross national product, a spends billions annually space exploration, not to me tion nearly $80 billion for d fense. The editors of Bett Homes and Gardens f strongly that this issue must pressed before Congress, a hope that for once partisa ship will be forgotten when comes to the vote.

What industry can do.

Industry can't help mu on the sewage problem. It h its own industrial pollution worry about. (This will be d cussed in the September issu Only the detergent makers a directly concerned. But le take a closer look at the ph phate situation.

Actually only about 13 pe cent of all the phosphor produced in the United Stat is for detergents. That's abo 500 million pounds a year. far the largest portion—abo 77 percent—goes into fert izers and animal feeds. W can't ban it there if we wa to keep eating, for it's vital f crops and animal growt Much of the phosphorus us for such nutrient purpos reaches our waters throu agricultural runoff, and the is nothing we can do about Some of it, of course, reach the water indirectly throu body wastes: every adult h man contributes nearly tw pounds of phosphorus a yea

Still, removing phosphat from detergents—even thou they're only part of the pictu —is an essential step in t right direction, and deterge manufacturers are well awa of this. They have been loo ing for substitutes for yea One company alone has teste hundreds of different mate als, such as starches, carbo ates and other chemicals f their cleaning ability, toxicity and biodegradability. So far no satisfactory replacement has been found.

For a time, NTA (nitrilotriacetic acid) seemed a promising substitute. It passed a long series of laboratory tests for health and safety hazards, and it did not contribute to eutrophication. Then suddenly NTA had to be discontinued last December after preliminary government tests showed that high levels of the substance might combine with high levels of other metallic elements to cause potential problems.

There is considerable controversy about the reliability of the government tests. No matter how that is resolved, the short history of NTA has a moral: any hasty substitution of new ingredients for phosphates in detergents can put enormous amounts of untested chemicals into our sewage. It may be more prudent to live a while with the known problem than to risk new hazards. Every buyer of detergents should be cautious about lists of low-phosphate products. Not only the phosphate content but the other ingredients should be questioned. A compound that corrodes metal badly, or one that could poison a child, is hardly the right substitute. Of course, there are low-phosphate and no-phosphate detergents that are neither corrosive nor poisonous. The trouble with many of these is that they may not clean as well over a period of time. How clean is clean? Must your clothes be whiter than white? Standards of cleanliness are subjective; only you and your family can decide what kind of cleanliness and brightness you'll settle for. But many homemakers have decided that, at least for the time being, they would rather have less cleaning power than more water pollution.

Rather than impose an immediate phosphate detergent ban—which has been suggested in Congress—it might be well to tackle the problem first on a regional basis. All manufacturers should, for example, tailor their products so that only a minimum of phosphate is used in areas where the water is soft and the chemical not so necessary.

In any event a little patie is called for. When an ef tive substitute is finally fou it will take at least two year testing before it can be proved by agencies such as Food and Drug Administra and the Department of A culture, and before it can moved from research lab tory to supermarket shelf. even then we will still be st with our major sewage p lems unless we're really wil to do something about it.

What you can do.

Will we ever clean up mess? It's up to the indivi voter. In some communiti has been done. Seattle was of them. San Diego is anot And Chicago is trying.

Removing the mystery from tire buying

Few buying decisions are more baffling than picking the right kind of tires. Lack of an industry-wide grading standard is responsible for much of this confusion. Each company rates its own tires. As a result, one brand's so-called premium product may be no better than another company's first line or even second line.

The National Bureau of Standards recently came up with recommendations for a uniform grading system, but a working set of standards is still quite a way off.

How good a tire should you buy?

For a start, evaluate the tires that came on your car as original equipment. If they performed satisfactorily, replace them with tires of comparable size and quality (first-line replacement tires). If service was less than satisfactory, consider a better tire or perhaps one of the same quality in a larger size. With very few exceptions, don't go for lower quality than the original equipment. True, lower quality tires of a reputable brand will be safe enough since all tires must now meet minimum standards for strength. However, the cheaper grades won't stand up to high-speed driving, overloading and abuse, and their tread life is comparatively short. Factory rejects or seconds of a good-quality tire are often a good buy. That's because seconds sold for highway use are rejected for appearance reasons—usually blemished sidewalls or slight tread irregularities. Tires rejected for structural flaws must be labeled for farm or non-highway use and are intended only for low-speed, off-road driving.

Consider the following questions before you shop for tires:

1. How long will you keep the car? If you plan to keep it for another year at most or will drive it less than 10,000 miles, there's not much justification for buying top-line tires guaranteed for 40,000 miles. But don't buy cheapies that will be nearly bald by the time you trade.
2. How fast do you drive? If you do considerable driving at highway speeds, buy tires of original-equipment quality or better. Even if you are a city or suburban driver, you may use expressways and other relatively high-speed roads more than you realize.
3. Do you often haul heavy loads or drive on rough roads? If so, consider nothing less than original-equipment quality and size. There is a definite correlation between tire size and load rating, so if you often use your car to carry heavy loads or drive on rough roads you should give serious consideration to a larger tire. For a station wagon that frequently carries heavy loads, consider a tire with a heavy-duty carcass and higher load rating.

What determines the price of a tire?

Essentially, the type and amount of materials used. Higher priced tires generally contain more better-quality body cord material and more rubber, most of it in the tread area. Tread rubber of the more expensive tires is specially compounded to provide better traction, better handling and longer wear. The greater amount of cord material is mostly in the extra belt plies of the belted-bias tires. Nearly all original equipment tires are now of the belted-bias ply construction with a two-ply carcass plus a two-ply belt.

Four cord materials are in general use:

Nylon is the strongest of the fabric cord materials used for body plies. Nylon's one drawback is "flat spotting" that develops when the car is parked overnight. This causes the tires to thump until they have been driven a few miles, after which the sound disappears. Some manufacturers say they have all but eliminated spotting with new developments in nylon cord. Virtually no nylon is used in original-equipment tires.

Rayon provides high-speed performance nearly equal to nylon's and with no flat spotting. Rayon is used as a body cord in some belted-bias tires in conjunction with fiber glass or rayon belt plies. Rayon is also employed quite extensively in radial-ply tires. Some manufacturers use it for both the body and belt cords in radials, others for the belt plies with polyester for the body cord.

Polyester is the newest but already the most widely used cord material. It's used in about one-half of all auto tires now being produced, but it is available only in tires of original-equipment quality or better.

Fiber glass is the strongest of the nonmetallic cord materials. It's available only in the belt plies of belted-bias ply tires. It is used with body cords of rayon, nylon or polyester.

Steel wire offers the ultimate in strength and durability for tire cord. However, it is limited almost exclusively to the belts of radial tires. A few manufacturers are now using it for belts in belted-bias ply construction in a few sizes. Steel wire is also in very limited use for both the body and belt cord on some radials. Present production capabilities for the special wire are limited. As more wire is available, it will appear in more top of the line tires.

Types of construction

Whatever brand you're investigating, you will probably encounter three types of construction involving the materials described above:

Bias-ply construction may be two or four plies placed on top of one another in crisscross fashion. The cords run diagonally from bead to bead. (The beads are the inner edge of the tire that fit against the rim.) Bias construction is the simplest and until recently the most common.

Belted-bias uses the same construction techniques as bias ply for the body cords. In addition, two bias belts are applied on top of the body plies under the tread area. These additional belt plies give you more mileage, increase stability and road-hugging ability, and resist punctures, cuts and bruises. Belted-bias tires are standard on virtually all new cars.

Radial-ply construction consists of two or more body plies with the cords running parallel to one another from bead to bead straight across the tread. On top of these body plies and directly under the tread area are two or more belt plies.

Radial tires, while the most expensive, are the best tires you can buy. Several manufacturers guarantee at least 40,000 miles of wear from their radials. Radials provide better traction with up to 15 percent more tread area in contact with the road. They also offer the greatest resistance to bruises and impacts in the tread area.

Shopping for tires

All the major tire companies are highly competitive a their products, grade for grade, are roughly comparable quality and suggested retail or list price. To simplify yo buying decision, begin your shopping with a tire dealer y trust, someone handling a brand with national distributio This will be particularly important should you have a pro lem requiring warranty replacement or service when you a away from home.

It's a good idea to check prices with several dealers as m dealer manuals offer considerable pricing latitude. Be su the quotes are for tires of comparable quality. Also, find o whether the quoted price includes mounting, sales tax, feder excise tax and balancing.

When is a sale really a sale? To be sure, you must know t normal selling price. An uninformed customer might be c luded by the appealing "half price for the second tire" con on. Is the price half of the normal selling price or is it bas on a greatly inflated list price? Only knowing the everyd price for the tire will tell you if the half-price offer rea represents a price break. Also read the sale ads careful Many do not claim to offer special or lower prices. Th merely use the word "sale" and let the consumer deci whether it really is a sale. As with any product, there is an escapable correlation between quality and price. You wo find a top-quality tire at a bargain-counter price.

What about guarantees?

All tire manufacturers offer some type of guarantee. M of them have at least a warranty that will give you credit the unused tread if the tire fails. Some tires are guarante for a specified number of months, others for so many mil There are also lifetime guarantees against road hazards. So companies make no charge for replacing tires that fail duri the first 25 percent of tread life. A few even offer free placement of a defective tire that fails in normal use so lo as the original tread has not worn down to the tread we indicators.

Read the guarantee carefully. Find out exactly what type charges you will have to pay if the tire fails within the gu antee. Be sure that the amount you would have to pay replacing a defective tire is based on the price you are n paying for the tire or on the then-current selling price. T pro rata price for some replacements is based on an unre istically high "list price." These phony prices can result your paying more to replace a half wornout tire than to b the same tire at the then-prevailing price.

These tips can help you get maximum safety and satisfa tion from your tire purchase:

1. Never use a smaller tire than the original.
2. Put new tires on the rear for best traction and handli
3. Never mix bias and belted-bias tires on the same axle. M ing can adversely affect a car's braking and handling chara teristics. Use radial or wide-profile tires only in complete s of four.
4. Be aware that the same size tires of different makes a grades are not necessarily of the same diameter and do n have the same traction capabilities. These differences in s and road holding can affect steering and braking and ca skids and accidents. For these reasons, tires should be placed in pairs, ideally in complete sets. If you buy a sin tire, pair it with a tire of the same size and quality and o having the greatest tread depth remaining.
5. Break in new tires. Limit your speed to 60 miles hour for the first 50 miles.

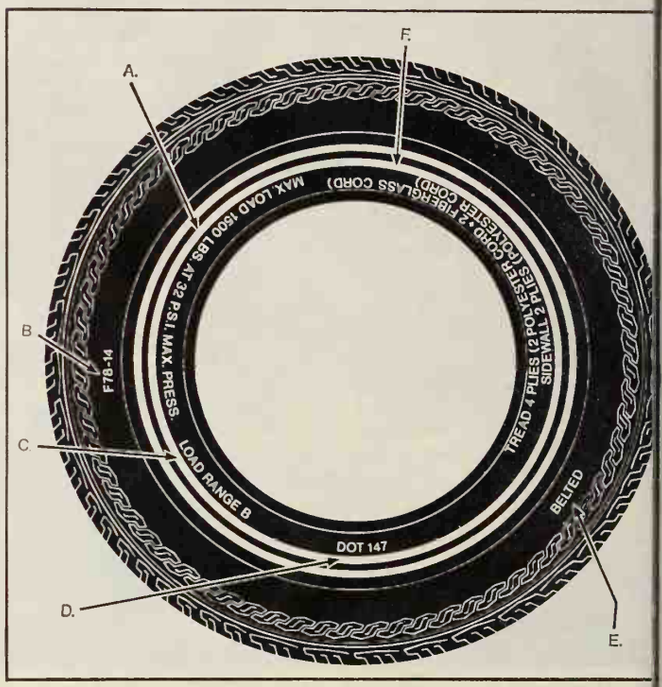
Reading the sidewalls



Take time to read and compare sidewalls. They contain wealth of important information. The sketch shows wh you'll find on a typical original-equipment type tire.

A. Load and inflation. This tire can carry a maximum of 15 pounds at a maximum air pressure of 32 pounds. Four these tires would have a total capacity of 6000 pounds, cluding the weight of the car, its passengers and cargo. T load rating decreases with lower inflation pressures.

B. Size. The example is marked F78-14.

F—load carrying capacity (1500 lbs at 32 psi maximum pr sure). 78—series (height to width ratio). The height of tire is 78 percent of the width. Other series you may counter are 70 and 60. 14—rim size diameter in inches.

If the tire is a radial, an R will appear between the F a 78 (FR78-14). Note: the tire industry recently changed siz to a combination alphabetical-numerical system. For examp a tire formerly designated as 7.75-14 is now an F78-14.

C. Load range. Range B indicates the tire has a 4-ply rati Range C denotes 6-ply; range D, 8-ply.

D. Manufacturing number. Every manufacturer is assigne three digit code number by the Department of Transportat (DOT). All tires carry the DOT designation but not all ma facturers are yet including the code number.

E. Construction type. Belted-bias ply may be identified such or merely as belted. Radials will be designated radial-ply. No designation indicates conventional bias-ply

F. Ply and material identification. Every tire contains formation describing the ply construction and material us Our example has two polyester body plies and two fiber gl belt plies. Thus the tread area contains four plies; sidewa two plies. There is a great variation in the way ply and ma rials are identified but the number of plies and ply mate must appear somewhere on every tire sold. ■

Brace yourself for an explosion of space and function when you remove a stairway wall. In this room, a banister of 2x4s replaces the former wall. The rear stairway wall becomes a dramatic gallery of art, lights and color. At left, the supporting wall keeps the hall and living room areas separate, but without that boxed-in look. While the living room benefits most from the new visual area, both hall and kitchen share the spatial freedom.

Replacing a solid wall with this new stairway divider yielded two important benefits. First, it safely divides stairs from the room, yet opens up the stairway for better lighting and increased visual space. Second, rows of 15-inch-deep cabinets, with touch-latch doors, add much-needed storage space. The grille below hides an old radiator.

A typical L-shaped living/dining room takes on new dimensions with this waist-high divider. Made of 2x4 framing, dry-wall and 1x6 trim, the divider separates the two living areas while retaining the open look. Rows of 1x3 ceiling grates and recessed spotlights give the dining room an intimate feeling. A long buffet stands behind the divider.

Enclose a freestanding fireplace and you have a room divider that's as dramatic as it is functional. The enclosure is made with 2x4s and dry-wall, covered with a coating of stone chips in an epoxy base for insulation. Clay tiles and 1x1 wood trim serve as a protective and decorative hearth. On the dining room side, wall shelves provide storage space.

Originally this window was set flat against the wall, and it added little visual interest to the room. A heavy box frame made from dimension lumber takes command over the window, making it a strong focal point of the room. The undivided glass gives lots of light and a better outdoor view. A functional bonus: the wide windowsill serves as a display shelf for decorative effects.

Fluorescent lights flood this bathroom with indirect lighting from the newly lowered ceiling. Ordinary gypsum board, suspended from the old ceiling, combines with the lighting to give the appearance of a floating ceiling. Light fixtures are held to the gypsum board with 2x2 supports. Although the lights are well out of view, there's plenty of space between ceiling and wall to change bulbs.

A heavy-gauge steel hood turns a colonial-style fireplace mantel into a contemporary focal point. Made from rolled sheet steel, the hood is held together by a rolled riveted seam. The metal is treated with a primer base and painted. Hidden 2x4 uprights secure the unit to the wall. A sheet metal dealer can give you all the details.

Face-lifting the entry made this older ranch house much more inviting. The perilously steep steps were replaced by a dramatic stairway combining blue slate tile steps and landing, Lannon sidewall and a handrail made of 2x6s bolted to steel supports. Vertical 2x2 strips, painted flat black, give the once nondescript door a bold new look.

To get more mirror space and better storage, this homeowner replaced an old medicine cabinet with two new units that flank a large mirror. Redwood texture 1-11 panels cover ceiling.

Removing the wall that separated the pantry from the kitchen opened the way for efficient new cabinet/counter units. The two cabinets open from either side to serve both rooms. An inviting new deck transforms this once bland and boxy bedroom. Rough-sawn redwood paneling covers the plaster walls, and floor-to-ceiling bookshelves relieve the room's square floor plan. Stainless steel edging is used at the ceiling line and around the deck doors. The deck, surrounded by six-foot-high privacy walls, makes the room seem more spacious than it is.

What was a summertime screen porch is now a year-round entertainment center. Sliding glass doors lead to a patio at right. The room was extended to create an alcove of floor-to-ceiling windows. DRAMATIZING

How can you supply elegant lighting to an average-size dining room? Capitalizing on a low ceiling, this homeowner solved the problem by installing rheostat-controlled spotlights set in false ceiling beams. The beams, made with dimension lumber and decorative molding, add their own highlight.

Eight inches lower than the original ceiling, this new hallway overhead adds a spark of interest to an otherwise dull area. Texture 1-11 plywood panels, resting on 2x2 molding supports, hide the ceiling lights. The recessed lights shine through small burlap-covered holes trimmed with 1x1 molding.

Simple 2x2 and 2x8 moldings add style to a jail-like window. Three 2x2s attached to horizontal supports stretch the apparent vertical size of the window by nearly two feet. The new window design ties in with heavier timbers in the roof line. A bonus: the new facing also acts as an effective sunscreen.

Common lumberyard materials lend a cu tom finish to these underscaled bedroo windows. The striking carved panel design achieved by combining pieces of 1x4s wit one-inch decorative moldings. The extra wide shutters make the small windows mor compatible with the size of the dormer.

This shelf and cabinet system is really a room full of furniture on a wall. It holds TV, stereo, books and accessories. Burlap-covered panels hide two narrow windows, or fold back. The unit is easy and inexpensive to build. It's made of No. 1 pine, common hardware and adhesive burlap strips.

These built-in shelves and cabinets turn an awkwardly high window into a showpiece. Rough-sawn 1x8s trim the ceiling lines; behind the boards, fluorescent lights add shadow depth to the entire wall. Plastic laminate covers the pine shelves; cabinet doors are cut-to-fit hardboard.

New storage space and wall-to-wall mirrors enhance this average-size bedroom. Space for the unit was borrowed from wall stud cavities. The wall studs are left undisturbed to serve as part of the shelf support system. Mirrors are hung on standard folding doors which work on aluminum tracks.

Urban Orchards

You don't need to move to the country to have fruit trees. Because of recent improvements in dwarf varieties, you can grow apples, peaches, pears and cherries in very limited space. The fruit you get is as large, or larger than that produced by standard trees—and it is within reach, easy for anyone to pick. The trees, with their beautiful blossoms in early spring, are just right for close-to-the-house landscaping. Start action now by ordering trees for spring planting and join the ranks of urban fruit gardeners.

Dwarf Stark Starlet peach trees are natural dwarfs, ideal for container growing on a patio where you can keep them to a three-foot height. In the ground, they'll reach four or five feet. Lush green foliage succeeds pink blossoms in early spring. Cover the blooms to protect them from late freeze. This is easy to do with dwarfs. For overwintering, wheel them into an unheated garage, or cover the soil and wrap thick insulation around the containers.

Double-dwarf spur-rich apple trees produce fragrant blossoms in spring and sweet fruit in the fall. These tiny six- to eight-foot trees provide welcome shade and screening for a patio. The yellow variety is Starkspur Golden Delicious, and the red one is Starkrimson Delicious. To get fruit on apple trees, you must plant two varieties. Of course, one will do if a neighbor has another. Then pollination is assured.

Here's the reason why the new spur-type apples are so productive. The apples are attached to short stubs. These fruit spurs develop in much greater numbers along branches than on standard trees. Mature dwarfs can produce up to a couple of bushels of apples per tree in a good season.

Starking Delicious dwarf pear makes a perfect espalier to fill the narrow space along a bare wall. It needs another variety for fruit to set. A few flowering branches will do. The horizontal limbs yield lots more fruit than vertical ones. Once this blight-resistant tree is trained, never allow new growth out of bounds. In June each year, cut off half of each new shoot that's 12 inches or longer. Later in summer, cut new growth back to the last two leaves on each shoot.

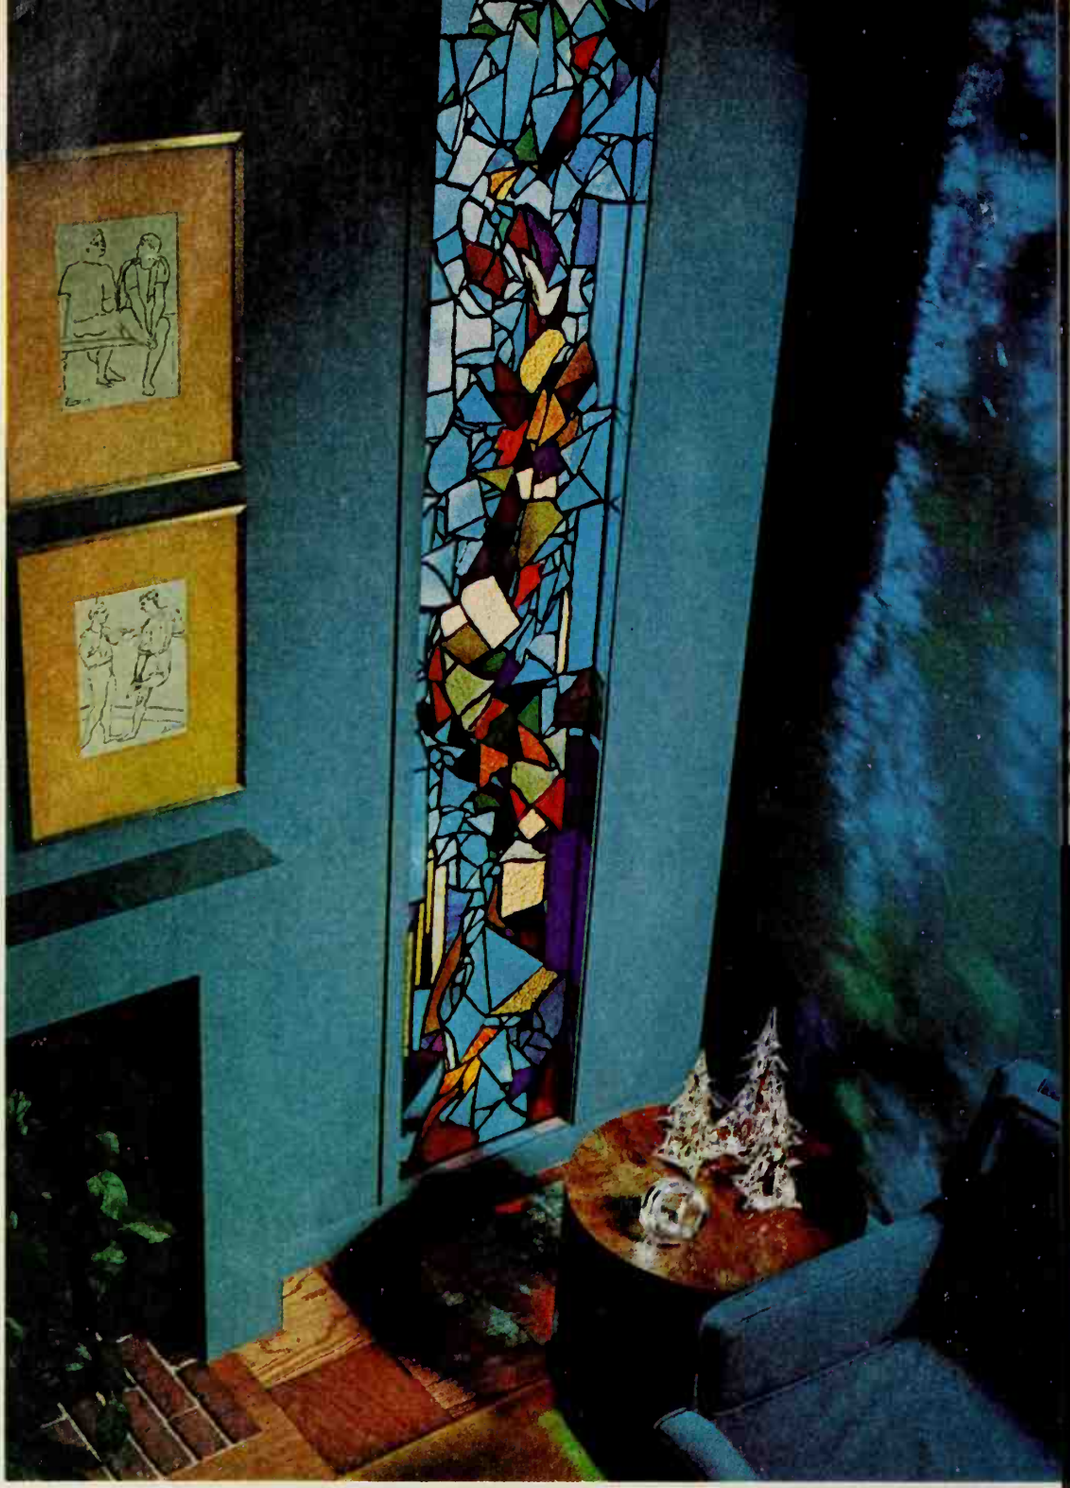
Do this if you don't like the View

By Morley B. Smith,
Crafts & Design Editor

Do you have a window that faces something you'd rather forget? Here are six ways you can block out that undesirable scene without sacrificing light, and you gain a decorating focal point at the same time. (Right) Transform an ordinary window with stained glass scraps and liquid steel. Your patient work will be rewarded with the interplay of color, texture and luminosity typical of stained glass designs.



Stained glass

Buy glass scraps from stained glass dealers or create your own by applying stained glass paint to window glass. You'll also need clear plastic cement and some tubes of liquid steel. These are available in most shops that carry craft supplies.

You can apply stained glass to window or to a piece of ¼-inch clear plastic cut to window size. You may prefer using the plastic, since it's easier to work on and can be taken along if you move.

Measure the window opening carefully before having the plastic cut. You can replace the original window glass with the plastic by reglazing. Or you can set the plastic over the window and nail quarter-round molding over the edges. A more elaborate frame can be made of solid lumber, then hinged to the window frame.

1. Remove paper from both sides of the plastic, then clean plastic with mild soap and water. Rinse thoroughly. Lay plastic on a clean, smooth horizontal surface.

2. Wash and dry stained glass, put it in a cardboard box and cover with brown paper. Break glass with a hammer.

3. Arranging the glass fragments on the background is like doing a nonobjective jigsaw puzzle. You can't fit the pieces together exactly, but try to keep the cracks between them as unifo as possible. Discard min pieces of glass; these won't sh up and may be drowned in t liquid steel. As you create yo design, vary the sizes and colo of glass. If working directly window panes, tape stained gl on to check design. If worki on plastic, leave a ½-inch m gin around all outer edges fit into a frame.

4. When you achieve a desi you like, put each piece in pla with cement and let dry.

5. Squeeze liquid steel betw glass pieces, making sure y seal all cracks. Let dry. The tu is easier to squeeze if you brie immerse it with cap on in h water.

Make something decorative out of things you'd otherwise throw away. We used the tops from cans and bottles to create a three-dimensional window hanging.

sue paper

get started, you'll need white e, an inexpensive paintbrush l tissue paper.

Tear or cut the tissue paper o uneven strips or pieces.

Dilute glue in water so it be- nes one part glue to 6-8 parts ter. The more water added, more the tissue colors will nd.

Tissue dyes may discolor your ndow frame, so mask that a with tape.

Brush glue mixture onto glass ere you intend to place a ce of tissue. Put tissue on it l brush glue over tissue. Keep ding tissue while collage is wet il the design is done.

If you're doing an all-over design such as the plaid we've shown, let tissue strips lap over edges of glass to allow for shrinkage after drying.

To duplicate the clear strips in our design, put masking tape over glass before applying tissue or glue. When design is dry, remove tape by cutting it with a model knife along the edges.

5. After design is done, add an overall coat of glue and let dry. The collage can be removed by dampening it and scraping it off with a single-edged razor blade.

Can-lid hanging

You can choose from many lightweight objects such as small cans, plastic foam cups, packing material and wood scraps.

We attached the tops to ¼-inch smoke-colored transparent plastic. If you prefer a more opaque background, buy fiber glass sheeting or translucent plastic.

1. Have the plastic cut one inch larger than the window frame on all sides. Sand edges with 80 grit sandpaper, then with wet-or-dry 220 and 400 grit sandpaper. Apply a fine grit buffing wheel and polish the edges.

2. Drill holes in plastic about the depth of one link for inserting chandelier chain. If using a standard twist drill bit, drill slowly to avoid chipping. Remove paper from both sides of plastic and clean with mild soap and water.

3. Wash off any stamped prices on lids with kitchen cleanser or scouring powder.

4. Paint lids with flat latex paint. Add a few drops of dishwashing detergent to paint to help it adhere to lids. Two or three coats will cover, depending on color of lids and paint. We've shown white lids on a dark background, but you may want to reverse that or paint the lids bright colors inside and out.

5. Arrange lids on plastic in desired pattern. Attach either top or bottom of lid to plastic with clear plastic cement.

6. Attach strong chandelier chain to plastic and hang design directly in front of windowsill.

Bright yarn strung between curtain rods can make a window worth looking at regardless of the view. This simple project requires no special know-how or expensive materials.

Designer: Mary Lou Stribling

Yarn treatment

Several skeins of rug yarn, two ⅜-inch solid round curtain rods and barrel-type brackets are all you'll need.

1. Set top rod in window frame. Position rod so top of brackets touches the top of the frame. Place bottom rod in window frame six to nine inches from sill.

2. Cut yarn into strands double the length of the window plus six inches. Fold each strand and tie over the top rod. Draw ends of yarn through loop and pull to tighten. (SKETCH A)

3. Push strands close together until rod is filled. Pull each pair of strands taut, with one strand in front and the other behind the bottom rod. Tie directly under the rod in a double knot, but not too tightly or rods will buckle permanently.

4. Divide the bottom fringe into equal segments from two to three inches wide and tie into tassels. (SKETCH B) Choose one color of yarn for all the knots. When tassels are tied, trim ends.

Almost any kind of flat natural material such as leaves, weeds and butterflies will make a good arrangement for a window like this. You'll also need a five-pound box of powdered borax and translucent adhesive plastic.

Materials needed: 1x2s, 1x3s, -inch plywood, rolled caning, eer curtain fabric, paint.

Divide width of bed into ree equal parts. Make a pattern for top section on plywood. Cut this section from one piece of plywood with a saber saw.

2. The two center strips are 1x3s that are saw-kerfed to appear divided. The outer strips and bottom are 1x2s.

3. Glue frame together and attach with corrugated fasteners on one side only. Paint frame and let dry.

4. Place frame on flat surface with corrugated fasteners facing you. Lay caning over frame and staple on. Trim off excess caning. Staple on sheer fabric over the caning. Now you're ready to attach the frame to the bed.

Nature window

1. Pour an inch of borax into a box and arrange natural materials on it, with leaves and petals in their normal positions. Gently pour a few inches of borax over the material and close the box. Let dry several days, checking occasionally to prevent over-drying.

2. Cut plastic into sections to fit the window, allowing two pieces per section. Peel protective paper off one section at a time and arrange dried material on the adhesive side. When finished, press down on the material to anchor it.

3. Peel down about one inch from the top of another piece of plastic. Carefully fit the adhesive side to the top of the other adhesive side already covered with an arrangement.

Slowly pull the protective sheet off with one hand while smoothing the sheets together with the other hand. When the two adhesive sides finally join, the bond will be permanent. Remove any air bubbles with your hand or a roller.

4. Tape plastic to glass or fasten it to the window frame with screen molding. Or frame plastic and hang in front of window.

STEAK TARTAR

A classic, with variations

By Joan McCloskey, Associate Food Editor

You can thank the barbarians for one of today's most popular first courses. Steak tartar is said to have originated with Genghis Khan's warriors in the 12th century. In later years it was a favorite of noblemen at pre-hunt breakfasts.

Serve the classic version and let guests experiment with a choice of accompaniments. Or try these two variations: covered with sour cream and caviar, or stuffed in celery sticks.

Classic Steak Tartar

Be sure the individual patties are well-chilled at serving time—

1 pound lean ground sirloin or round steak
6 egg yolks
½ cup chopped onion
1 2-ounce can anchovy fillets, drained and cut up
¼ cup snipped parsley
1 lemon, cut in wedges
Drained capers
Chopped gherkins
Prepared or freshly grated horseradish
Freshly ground pepper
Salt
Paprika
Bottled hot pepper sauce
Worcestershire sauce
Buttered toast

Divide uncooked ground meat into 6 portions; shape into mounded patties on chilled plates. Make an indentation in center of each patty; place an egg yolk in each. Serve remaining ingredients alongside meat or in individual bowls in center of table. Each guest stirs the seasonings into his patty to suit his own taste. Makes 6 servings.

Steak Tartar on a Stick

A good way to introduce tartar to your more timid friends—

½ pound lean ground sirloin or round steak
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
Celery sticks
¼ cup thinly sliced green onion
Snipped parsley

In bowl, combine uncooked ground meat, salt and pepper. Spread in celery sticks. Top with sliced green onion and parsley. Cover and chill. Makes 1 cup meat mixture.

Russian Steak Tartar

Excellent appetizer you can make ahead for a large party—

½ pound lean ground sirloin or round steak
¼ cup finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
½ cup dairy sour cream
1 2-ounce jar red caviar
2 tablespoons snipped parsley

In bowl, thoroughly mix uncooked ground meat, onion, worcestershire, salt and pepper. Shape into loaf 6 inches long. Frost with sour cream; cover with caviar and parsley. Serve with buttered party rye toast. Makes about 1½ cups.

Know your sauces

Are espagnole, bordelaise, diable and chaud-froid part of your cooking and/or eating-out vocabulary? If not, read on to get acquainted with these and other sauces that can add flair to your meals.

The "sauces mères," or mother sauces, from which most of the other sauces are derived, include the following: 1) sauce espagnole and velouté, both made from stock, 2) the basic white sauce, sauce béchamel, 3) two basic emulsified sauces, hollandaise and mayonnaise, and 4) vinaigrette or oil and vinegar sauces.

SAUCE ESPAGNOLE

This sauce is a brown sauce, composed of a roux (a mixture of melted fat and flour), a little white wine, and a meat stock, and is flavored with vegetables. Tomatoes may be added in its later stages of preparation. Some of the sauces based on sauce espagnole include:

Bordelaise—Red wine is boiled vigorously to reduce its volume, then added to a brown sauce (without tomatoes) with shallots or small mild onions. This sauce makes an excellent accompaniment for roast beef.

Diable—White wine, vinegar, catsup and cayenne added to the espagnole make this a fiery sauce. It is used to flavor liver and veal chops.

Duxelle—This sauce of white wine, tomato puree, sautéed chopped mushrooms, seasonings and the espagnole is tasty with fish, poultry, meat and egg dishes.

Piquant—Vinegar, spices and chopped gherkins are added to the espagnole. The result is a lively sauce that's excellent with lamb and other meats which are receptive to sharply contrasting flavors.

SAUCE VELOUTE´

This sauce is like espagnole except the roux is not browned. Veal, chicken or fish stock is often used. Some sauces derived from velouté are:

Allemande or Parisienne—The velouté sauce made from chicken stock is enriched with cream and egg yolks.

Chaud-froid — This includes sauces made from either velouté or espagnole with unflavored gelatin and cream added. These mild sauces are first cooked and then cooled, as the French name indicates. Then they're spooned over fish, meat, or vegetables and chilled to set the coating completely.

BÉCHAMEL SAUCE

This is the classic white sa made with milk and a wh roux. Cream is often added make a richer sauce. A variations are:

Caper sauce—Adding cap to the béchamel makes a d cious sauce for boiled la and fish.

Sauce mornay—Grated che and cream are added to basic béchamel sauce. Se this tasty sauce with fish, m and poultry.

WHAT IT DOES IS EVEN MORE SPECIAL THAN WHAT IT IS.

All the tomato bits, onions, green pepper and celery in our newest tomato sauce make it pretty special. But mostly it's special because all that flavor really puts pzazz in your cooking. Plain chicken turns into chicken creole. Stews, meatloaf, egg and fish dishes taste like they've never tasted with any other sauce. You'll see. Because when Hunt's says "Don't Scrimp on the Flavor," we really mean it.

Now, for people who like whipped cream more than frosting, a frosting more like whipped cream.

So velvety smooth, so soft and swirly, New Betty Crocker Whipped Frosting Mix is more like whipped cream than any other frosting. So billowy and light it caresses your cake in two not-too-sweet flavors (chocolate and vanilla). And it stays lusciously fresh without refrigeration...something whipped cream just can't do.

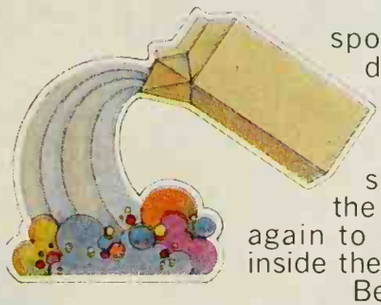
The long, happy life of a Pure-Pak milk carton

Our story begins when a Pure-Pak carton comes into your life full of fresh milk.

In the handiest container you ever put in your refrigerator.



Its pop-open spout won't spill a drop. The thin plastic coating keeps everything inside fresh and super sanitary. (And the spout snaps shut again to keep things pure inside the Pure-Pak carton.)

Because it's square (and light), it's easy to store. Easy to hold. Won't break if you drop it. And it's the only tamper proof milk container available.

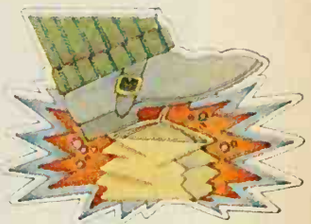
But this is just the beginning.

When the milk is all gone, our carton starts its second happy life. When you use it to store leftovers (hot or cold). Make dreamy desserts in (there's a fun book to send for). Or a zillion other things around the kitchen.

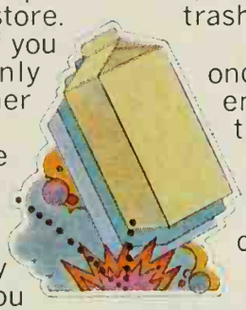
For a whole new third life, turn the carton over to the kids. And watch them turn it into a clown. Or some other kind of circus character or toy (there's another fun book to send for).

All this is what a Pure-Pak carton does while it's a member of your family.

Then, when it's finally ready to become trash, it becomes good trash.



Because, once they're empty, our cartons can be used to hold other messy garbage (and save space). Or they crush flat (and save space again).



And because a Pure-Pak carton returns to nature. Completely.

(Whether it's burned, buried, or even if some Terrible Person throws it away as litter.)

That's our story. We think it's a nice story, too. Because it...

has a happy ending.

We remind feet how to walk.

We do it by putting an extra part in every P.F Flyer.

We call this extra part Posture Foundation, and it's what the P.F in our name stands for. Only P.F Flyers have Posture Foundation,® which is actually a rigid rubber wedge built inside each heel.

The Posture Foundation wedge acts like a little reminder system, by shifting a child's body weight to the outside of each foot. It helps him to carry himself correctly, because his weight is better distributed over each foot.

P.F Flyers come in lots of colors. And in styles to suit both boys and girls.

Next time, remember P.F Flyers. Because we don't forget the extra help a growing youngster's feet need.

We build KitchenAid dishwashers to work well for a long, long time. How long we can't say. But we get letters that tell us some of our original models are still in use after 21 years; and with very few service calls.

We build KitchenAid dishwashers with special features. Like the Soak Cycle on our Superba model. It soaks dirty pots and pans automatically.

It washes so thoroughly that even a plate with dried egg on its face comes clean.

When can a home be used for business?

Across the street, one of your neighbors starts a dressmaking business that brings several customers to her home each day. If this causes problems—such as daily "traffic jams"—do you have any grounds for a legal complaint? In some instances, you do, but it depends on a number of factors.

Generally, land use in communities and cities is regulated throughout the United States. Certain areas are set aside for single residences, others for residential apartments and still others for commercial and industrial purposes. There are two ways the law accomplishes this: with zoning laws, enacted by the city or county, and with deed restrictions. Deed restrictions usually originate when a land developer establishes certain limits on the use of the land through provisions in the deed. For example, he may specify that each lot must be used only for a single-family residence.

Suppose the neighborhood you live in is zoned for residential use, or has a single-family deed restriction, or both. Legal cases can develop, because at some point the use of a home appears to go beyond the definition of "residence" or "home," and seems more like business or professional use. There are numerous cases on record concerning so-called "home occupations" that resemble businesses: dressmaking or hat making; cooking; teaching; running a nursery; giving music lessons; selling merchandise of various kinds; operating a boarding house or beauty shop; leading religious services. Some home-use cases even involve professionals like physicians, artists or lawyers.

Many violations start innocently enough. Say a homemaker begins sewing her own dresses. Then she expands a bit, and does mending or makes dresses for a few friends. Then more orders arrive. At some point this "home occupation" reaches the stage where the home no longer is just a residence. Whether the use is permissible or has gone too far depends in part on the wording of the restrictions.

In one case, the owner was using a room in his home as a real estate office. The zoning ordinance provided that the home could be used as a "professional office"; this was defined as "the office or studio of a physician or surgeon, dentist, lawyer, architect, engineer, surveyor, or like professional person residing on the premises." The court decided that the zoning ordinance was violated because, among other things, the definition of "professional office" did not include a real estate office.

In another case, a housewife operated a beauty shop in her home. The deed restriction provided that "no lot shall be used except for residential purposes . . . nor shall anything be done thereon which may be, or may become, an annoyance or nuisance to the neighborhood, or that may affect the value of the property." The court declared that the violation depended upon the degree of use, and that the user had overstepped the line. The woman was barred from running the beauty shop in her home.

Who starts lawsuits like these? In some zoning violations, the zoning board, or the township or city, files suit to bar the so-called improper use. In cases where it seems that a deed restriction has been violated, the lawsuit can be started by residents in the neighborhood, or sometimes by the original developer. The remedy, under a deed restriction violation, might be to forbid the alleged misuser from continuing his business in his home, or even to get the land back.

Thus, you need the exact language of the zoning laws and deed restrictions to know whether a particular use is a violation. Some cases get very involved because the law considers such factors as general conditions in the neighborhood, the history of the property and how long the use has continued. Even so, there are steps you can take to reduce the chance that you'll ever be in legal trouble in using your home.

- When you buy a home, you should become familiar with the zoning ordinances and the deed restrictions. Neither of these items necessarily shows up in a title report.

Get a copy of the zoning laws from the zoning board or other local authority. You can get copies of deed restrictions from the real property recorder's office (your lawyer should help you there), your real estate agent, your title company—or simply from your lawyer.

Remember, too, that zoning laws can be changed or new ones enacted after you become the owner. The zoning law that counts is the one in force when you conduct your "home-occupation."

- When you build or remodel with the intent of starting a home business, examine the zoning laws and deed restrictions. Often the zoning laws will be checked by the building permit agency, but the deed restrictions will not be reviewed, so you should look into them further.
- Consult your lawyer before you set up any sort of home business. Sometimes knowing the precise language in the deed or the zoning laws isn't enough. Other factors—for example, changed circumstances in your neighborhood—may influence a court. Your lawyer can help you decide about your current home-use activities, or your plans for the future. He'll tell you whether they're clearly a violation, seem reasonably safe or rest on the borderline. If your activities appear to be a violation, he can at least warn you of the probable consequences. (He may even suggest requesting a variance from your zoning board, which exempts your property from the usual zoning restrictions.) ■

Tastes like it never left Italy

Kraft Italian Dressing is tantalizing. With a fresh robust taste that's pure Italian. Tender garlic, tiny bits of red peppers, onion and lemon juice tempered with golden oil and mellow vinegars.

Different from any other Italian. Kraft even put on a thoroughly Latin label to catch your eye. Kraft Italian Dressing is the real thing. Made in America, but it tastes like it never left Italy.

The Power Tool for Women.

The most powerful canister you can buy for under $50.

This is the Regina Canister with Cyclonic Suction. And it's the most thorough vacuum cleaner you can buy.

It has a 2.0 peak horsepower motor. And an intake port that's off center to create a swirling action in the dirt bag. This action, which we call Cyclonic Suction, gives more peak suction power longer. And also increases the dirt bag capacity, making it the biggest in the business. That's why it can do such a terrific cleaning job on all types of carpets. Even those hard-to-clean shags.

Our Canister has some other powerful features, too. Like a ring suction selector. The exclusive 13" Rug Pile Dial nozzle that adjusts to any surface. Even bare floors. It's the widest nozzle of any Canister cleaner. A side suction edge that gets the dirt out of those hard-to-get-at corners and baseboards. And an automatic cord re-wind.

So let your husband have his power drills and power saws. You can have the Regina Canister. And that's all the power any woman needs. (In a machine that is.)

Of course, you can simply bring out the pop and the potat chips. But teens turn on when you make it a real productio —with a theme, an appropriate table setting, and "som thing to do" as well as plenty of good things to eat.

Madam Modiste pattern party: Encourage guests to brin an ultra-simple skirt pattern. When you've helped them cu the patterns and stitch them up on the machine, provid them with a box of fringe, rickrack, lace, and assorted tack ons. You'll be amazed by the creations! Japanese Sandman slumber party: If you can't sideste this foreboding event, make it a night to remember. Guest should arrive in coolie costumes or some form of Orienta dress (the most imaginative rig rates a prize). Follow with Japanese treasure hunt in which clues are couched in "mos honorable" phraseology. At midnight (the girls have alread consumed everything in sight) give them a truck driver' "snack"—a mammoth casserole and a hearty dessert. This built-in storage unit at one end of the living room has two faces. When all the doors are closed, its rough-sawed timber makes a handsome wall treatment with flanking bookshelves, wine rack and concealed stereo speakers. Wire mesh inserts in the doors are backed with shirred fabric to completely mask the functional side of this storage wall. Instead of using wire mesh, you could insert solid wood or perforated hardboard.

Doors open to reveal all the ingredients for successful entertaining. The left side houses an entertainment center complete with radio, record player, records, tape recorder and pull-out TV. On the other side is a refreshment center with a sink, shelves for glassware and a serving counter which can accommodate small appliances. The cabinet below the refreshment center could be designed for a small refrigerator.

12 smart ways to use your bank....

1 Keep some cash out of your paycheck, rather than deposi it all. This saves you writing checks simply to get cash.
2 To cut your check writing costs even more, see if your b will pay your utility and telephone bills when you make y deposit. Many do. And instead of using checks for your sav account deposits, have your bank make automatic trans from your checking account. (This also works as a fo savings program.)
3 After you've reduced your check writing to a minimum, cide which checking account you should have, special regular. A special checking account carries a nominal ch per check (usually ten cents), plus a small maintenance fe 50 cents to a dollar a month.

With a regular checking account, you don't pay for indivi transactions, but you must maintain a minimum balance (ust $200 to $500) to avoid charges. Figure out how much inte that minimum balance would earn in a savings account. Un you write so many checks that the charges exceed the poten savings interest, you're better off with special checking. S banks even offer free checking if you maintain a savings count with them.
4 If you have a savings account that pays interest at the of the quarter, take out a passbook loan when you need c After about the middle of the quarter, this will cost you than if you sacrifice that quarter's interest by withdrawing cash. And, since passbook loans are secured by the collatera your deposit, they're cheaper than regular personal loans.
5 Put up collateral when you borrow more than a few hund dollars and the sum exceeds your passbook savings. You'll a lower interest rate than on unsecured personal loans—usu about one or two percent less a year.
6 Keep one savings account for emergency cash. Open ano one on a long-term basis at the highest guaranteed interest r (You'll have to leave the money in the long-term account fo specified period, sometimes as long as two years.)
7 When you start a regular savings account, get one that p interest from date of deposit to date of withdrawal. Inte paid on these accounts is slightly less, but you'll be ahea you must make a withdrawal before the quarter's end.
8 Repay installment loans in full before the maturity date many states, this will get you a partial rebate on the ser charge. Suppose you have a $2000, one-year loan at six per discount. In this case, your interest cost is $120. If after months you pay off the loan, you'll save about $43 in inter
9 If you have an open-end mortgage and need a loan fo home improvement project, see if your bank will reopen y mortgage at a favorable interest rate. You probably won't the original interest rate, but you still might save. It's worth ing the time to compare costs with other improvement loans
10 Pay any bank credit card charges within 25 business d from the time you get the bill. That way you'll avoid the terest, usually 1½ percent per month, or 18 percent per y
11 Don't use a bank credit card when you need to borro large amount of money. Traditional installment loans are g erally cheaper, often as much as six percent less.
12 By using a bank credit card regularly, you can save che writing costs. The card purchases are combined in a mont bill, which you pay with just one check.

Craters of the Moon National Monument

The pioneers of Idaho had out as much use for the Crat- of the Moon region as they l for a case of measles. Fields jagged lava made poor footing horses and cattle, and if any- dy ever did cross the 83- uare-mile region in a wagon, concealed his foolishness by t mentioning the fact.

But this remote area of old lcanoes, cinder cones and va fields, protected since 1924 national monument status, is surprising and fascinating ace. The last molten lavas cooled about 1500 years ago, but so little rainfall comes to this region that the rocks have not weathered much and still look freshly erupted.

Despite the rugged and seemingly inhospitable nature of the terrain, the national monument is rich with animals and unusual plants. There are a half-dozen lava caves you can explore (bring flashlights), and some well-marked and informative trails to hike, from a half-mile to three miles long. Even if your family's interest in geology is casual, you'll find a trip to the monument's visitor center worth the time it takes. Because most visitors to the monument are headed somewhere else (east to Yellowstone National Park or west to Boise), they give Craters to the Moon only a few minutes. Nevertheless, you could easily spend a day or two here enjoying the unusual geology, the deer, squirrels, and birds—and the big, cloudy skies over mountainous horizons.

The national monument is

A cruise to Victoria, B.C.

At 8:30 each morning, from May through September, Canadian-Pacific's modern S. S. Princess Marguerite sails from Seattle's Pier 64 to Victoria, a quiet, peaceful Canadian city laden with old-world charm.

Round-trip tickets for the eight-hour cruise (four hours each way) are $9 for adults and half-fare for children. You need no reservations unless you are bringing your car ($8 each way) or want to occupy a stateroom ($4.50 to $12).

A reasonably priced dining room and cafeteria are open when you board, so you can have breakfast or a midmorning snack as the ship glides through Admiralty Inlet and crosses the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

It docks in Victoria at 12:30, giving you four hours for sightseeing before the ship sails again at 5:30—not really enough time to explore this lovely city, but certainly enough to make you want to return.

Children will like Sealand, where seals, dolphins, whales, sea lions and birds that swim underwater put on an exciting show. And the Oak Bay Marina next door will interest boating enthusiasts.

Trounce Alley is a delightful, English-flavored little shopping street, and Antique Row is filled with heirlooms from Victoria's gracious past. Village Fair, a building once patronized by lusty gold miners, is now a charming arcade.

Spend at least an hour in the floral wonderland of Butchart Gardens, outstanding even in this city where flower gardens are almost a passion.

You return from your "trip abroad" over a sunset sea, arriving in Seattle at 9:30 that night.

Five classic ghost towns

These deserted (or nearly Northwest boardwalk tow have several things in comm they are all easily accessible good roads from main highwa they each have trout fishing or near them; none is co mercialized. They are far-flu and seemingly dissociated, yet little digging in the history boo shows that their early-day r idents were quite aware of ea ıer. Although travel was slow d difficult, gossip flew across miles with its usual facility. these towns were neighbors sorts in the thin community t sprang up north of Cali- nia on the heels of the '49 d rush. When the lodes yed out, or mainstreams went other way, these 19th-century mmunities were left to weath- on the mountains.

anite Creek, B. C.

A cowboy, well-named John ance, turned up the first gold gget here in 1885 while rest- up from trying to haze a nch of horses across the for- ed mountains—an activity t has been compared to ving a swarm of bees. By the xt spring, with 2000 people, anite Creek was the third larg- town in the province.

The old community is twelve les up the Tulameen River rthwest of Princeton, which 180 miles east of Vancouver Provincial Highway 3. A nic drive on good gravel fol- vs the Tulameen, with river- w pullouts at selected points. rn left at Coalmont, then one le south to deserted Granite eek, a loose huddle of a dozen and frame buildings at the cture of two trout streams. The region is a good example all-placer diggings, which ran t quickly and left the miners th no choice but to head for next rumored gold strike. anite Creek itself is a beauti- ly untouched, moldering and serted log village. Bachelor's ttons are among the remnant nts scattered between the bins.

There also is a coal story here. forest road goes up a hogback st of Granite Creek for four les to Blackburn. Here a ple (loading structure) rears from the thick timber to eside over a hillside of scat- ed evidences of coal miners' acks beside a huge pit. Back at almont, supplies and fishing vice are available.

olson, Washington

From 12th Street in Oroville, ere U.S. 97 nears the Cana- an border, a paved road grad- lly climbs eastward onto a 00-foot plateau through a ixed forest of pine, larch and . Fifteen miles out, in a mile- de meadow, 50 scattered dark ame buildings outline Molson ainst the light-colored grass. s a region of contrasting lights d darks. Black Angus cattle aze among white aspen trunks, d mock-orange blossoms pile against forest shadows.

Old and new beaver dams dot e small watercourses in the surrounding hills, which are famous for their big mule deer. Tule-bordered Sidley Lake, at the north edge of Molson, is actually a group of three connecting lakes, the largest just over 100 acres, with depths to 25 feet. It is a consistent producer of both rainbow and eastern brook, and "silver bows," a cross between rainbow and silver trout. There's a small resort with boats for rent.

Molson began life as the second cabin of a red-haired ruffian who had another cabin on the Canadian side. His home depended on the political climate. This schizoid beginning dogged Molson even after a railroad and 400 people arrived. Factions separated into two communities, with a strong group favoring a third, and the struggle for the post office went all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court and lasted almost longer than the town. An exasperated banker once mounted his bank on skids and dragged it about the streets, accepting curbside deposits pending a decision about his lot. This, say locals, was probably the first drive-in bank.

The Okanogan Historical Society has begun a "Molson Museum." Three buildings fronting a plaza form a nucleus surrounded by a collection of antique farm and mining equipment. Entirely informal and free, the museum is open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. In the bank, and also in the assay office, wall clocks tick out 60 slow minutes to the hour. The visitors' footsteps are the only other sounds. Shelves, desks and walls are loaded with odds and ends from Molson's past, along with photographs.

Flora, Oregon

Flora is Oregon's northeasternmost town, located in the Blue Mountains two miles west of State Highway 3 near the south brink of the Grande Ronde River gorge. Sixty frame dwellings, churches and false-fronted buildings dot a flowering, 4000-foot upland prairie. There are a few resident families, who apparently cannot bring themselves to leave a place where water comes sweet from a well bucket, and the schoolhouse is much too big for last year's three pupils.

Two roads descend from Flora to the river through a ponderosa pine forest that thins as you drop to 1600 feet. The old grade, dating from wagon days, switches down to Troy, a crossroads. Here you can fish for salmon, steelhead and rainbows from an iron truss bridge,

Is Nevada great for resorts?

Bet on it!

Nevada has as much contrast in its resorts as it does in its magnificent scenery. The resorts of Las Vegas are cities in themselves, fabulous oases with palm tree lined golf courses, tennis courts, glamourous theatre restaurants, swimming pools and sunshine, sunshine, sunshine.

Reno has a cosmopolitan atmosphere, concentrating its fine hotels in the center of the picturesque city. Out the window one sees the high Sierra, some mallards flying past, a winding river, a blanket of trees. Down among the lights, the nightlife is exciting. And on the outskirts guest ranches are casual and relaxed.

Lake Tahoe's rustic resorts are hidden among the trees and its fine new hotels stand on the shore with the Lake in full view. Alpine resorts are tucked away near the ski areas.

The visitor who travels through the state finds the charm of well-maintained old hotels and hospitable western lodging where ranchers gather to talk big deals.

There's a resort for every taste, every budget, every season in Nevada.

camp alongside glass-clear Wenaha River, and hobnob with old-timers and fishermen at the cafe and store. You'll find cabins and rooms for rent here, too. Fifteen miles of level road follow the river on down to where Oregon's State 3 crosses the river and becomes Washington's 129.

Rimini, Montana

Ten miles west of Helena on U.S. 12, turn south on Ten Mile Creek. Rimini is eight miles up this small trout stream in the Fremont National Forest. Fifty well-preserved log and frame buildings are ranked along both sides of the road, many of them kept up as summer homes. These tenants have saved Rimini from deterioration and vandals, and an occasional muffled boom from up the canyon suggests that they also keep a bit of hard-rock hope alive back in the mines.

Visitors are welcome to look around prudently, and there are some vacant buildings to peer into. Four miles downstream is a developed campground at Moose Creek.

The name, locally pronounced rim-en-eye, commemorates a cultural occasion of boom days—the evening the drama Francesca da Rimini was presented there by a traveling troupe. The actors didn't come the hard way; there was a railroad, a spur of the Northern Pacific.

Lake Mendocino Camping

Lake Mendocino, on U. S. 01 north of Ukiah, California, a refreshing escape from heat d heavy traffic. Indeed, this ne-by-three-mile lake is such a pleasant spot you might want to camp here—and you can.

There are 125 campsites, all with nearby drinking water and cold showers. One of the camping areas is close to the swimming beach and tends to be crowded. The other is about two miles by road on the other side of the lake where there is ample parking near the beach, as well as a landscaped picnic area and a change house with cold-water showers. You'll pay $1 a night, and you can stay for a week.

Boating and fishing are popular activities here (two boat ramps). Lake fish include largemouth bass, bluegills and catfish. For hikers and hunters (in season), there's nearby 3200-foot Cow Mountain, a 50,000-acre Federal Recreation Area with a resident population of about 10,000 blacktail deer. During the season, which begins early in August, there are almost as many hunters as deer. It's a good idea to plan excursions to Cow Mountain before this time, or wait until after the season closes in October.

The lake, 123 miles from San Francisco and just six north of Ukiah, is operated by the Army Corps of Engineers. Summer weekend traffic can get pretty heavy. It's best to plan your visit here during the week if you possibly can.

escort called it "one of the most remarkable peaks in this or any country."

By 1906, Devil's Tower, which geologists have estimated to be 50 million years old, was designated America's first national monument.

It is 1000 feet across at the bottom and 275 feet across at the top. Colorful layers of sedimentary rock form bands around its base. Vertical, polygonal columns taper upward in more somber colors.

It's located on Highway 24, just seven miles north of U.S. 14. Three miles from the east entrance, a visitors information center will inform you of the legends, history, geology, and animal and plant life surrounding the tower. Perhaps the most interesting wildlife species here is the prairie dog. Though these little creatures have been driven from much of their former range, they populate a thriving "town" just a half-mile inside the monument entrance. Don't feed or try to pet them. They bite.

Pick up a nature trail leaflet at the visitors center and take the hour's walk around the Tower Trail. Repeat the hike at different times of the day to get the full effect of this remarkable peak with its ever-changing shadows and colors as the sun moves across the sky.

A 52-unit campground on the Belle Fourche River is open from May 15 through October 15. The Monument is open all year. Write Devil's Tower National Monument, Wyo. 82714.

OREGON has i quakes and worn by erosion. Its ancient lava flows now form the soil that supports a stubborn vegetation. Wildfires often sweep this range; the sun burns hot; rain is rare.

In spring, which is the best time to come here, wild flowers bloom in the new green growth. At dawn and late evening, you may see deer, chipmunks, rabbits, ground squirrels, bobcat and foxes.

The self-guiding Moses Trail starts near the visitors' center picnic area at the east entrance to the monument. Most trails are on this side of the park, and most of them connect with each other. You have a wide choice of adventurous routes leading to spectacular viewpoints, canyons and explorable caves.

There are two campgrounds in the monument area. The larger, Chalone Creek, has 44 units. (Take Highway 25 for 35 miles east of Hollister.) Chaparral, on the western side, is a walk-in campground with 25 units. It can be reached from Highway 101 at Soledad. No roads connect the eastern and western sides, only trails.

You'll have to bring your own stove or firewood, and be sure to pack enough groceries and supplies. The nearest store is 23 miles away. There is a seven-day limit from mid-February through June, 14 days during the rest of the year. Entrance fee into the monument is $1, camping per night is $2 or free with Golden Eagle Passport. Open all year.

Write to Superintendent, Pinnacles National Monument, Paicines, Calif. 95043 for further information.

San Juan Mountains

Ask most any resident, and he'll probably tell you that he used to come camping here and decided to stay.

Old towns like Durango, Silverton, Ouray and Telluride produced millions in gold, and they still retain the charm of those legendary days. Jeep trails climb 12,000-foot mountains to old mines and ghost towns. Waterfalls cascade hundreds of feet over cliffs. Primeval forests, gorges and canyons, cold trout streams, wild flowers and aspens make this a perfect setting for camping. Of all Colorado mountain retreats, this one is the least crowded.

You can camp in many public and private campgrounds along US 550 from Ouray to Durango. This million-dollar highway (surfaced with gold-bearing gravel) takes you past some of the most breathtaking views in the Rockies. From Durango it's only an hour's drive to the ancient cliff dwellings of Mesa Verde. There is a campground there, but it may be crowded. For more out-of-the-way camping, take Colorado 62 a few miles north of Ouray. It connects with Highway 145, which takes you to the fascinating old town of Telluride ("To Hell You Ride" the miners used to call it.) South of Telluride there are numerous national forest campgrounds along the forks of the Dolores Rives. The season is May through October.

For area information, write Forest Supervisor, San Juan National Forest, Oliger Building, Post Office Box 341, Durango, Colo. 81301, and the State of Colorado, Division of Commerce and Development, Travel Development Section, 602 State Capitol Annex, Denver, Colo. 80203.

The Sawtooths

This area in central Idaho is rich in geology and visible history. Highway 93, which cuts between the Challis and Sawtooth National Forests north of Ketchum, gives you access to millions of acres and dozens of camping possibilities.

Extensive glaciation has carved out hundreds of lakes and streams that hold cutthroat, rainbow, Dolly Varden, even California Golden trout. Steelhead and Chinook salmon can be taken by special permit on their runs up the Salmon River. This is also the land of the Kokanee, or blueback salmon, landlocked fish caught in Redfish and Altura lakes.

Start your camping trip in the Sawtooths with a visit to beautiful Redfish Lake just off Highway 93 about five miles south of Stanley. This very popular lake has 105 camping units for tents and trailers. The visitors' center for the Sawtooth National Forest will provide you with information about the area. You also can get horses and guides to explore the 200,000-acre primitive area on the other side of the lake. This is one of the Northwest's superlative wilderness regions and a fisherman's paradise.

Numerous camping areas are just off the highway for approximately 60 miles north and south of Redfish. Particularly appealing are those in the Challis National Forest, northeast of Stanley on the Salmon River. Be sure to visit the ghost towns of Custer and Bonanza, ten miles up the Yankee Fork of the Salmon River between Stanley and Challis. You'll find campsites here, too.

The season is June through October. For information write Forest Supervisor, Challis National Forest, Challis, Idaho 83226, and the Forest Supervisor, Sawtooth National Forest, 1525 Addison Avenue East, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301.

Hungry Horse

This 34-mile-long, man-made lake in northern Montana gives you a chance to get away from the people who are trying to get away from people. Much of this region has become so popular that finding a place to pitch a tent is difficult. But there is still room at the southern end of Hungry Horse Lake. Even if it didn't give you a jumping-off point for exploring Glacier National Park (just 11 miles to the north), the reservoir has much to offer.

In spring, cutthroat trout can be taken at the north end of the lake and Dolly Varden in the south. Side creeks offer excellent opportunity for trout fishing (and huckleberry picking).

The lake has several boat ramps; once you are in the water watch out for tree stumps and floating debris. If you are a water-skiing enthusiast, you'll prefer nearby Flathead and Whitefish Lakes. There are many privately owned trailer camps at these areas, and a few small state parks.

From the lake's south end, you can hike into the pristine Bob Marshall Wilderness Area. Jewel Basin Hiking area in the high country to the west of the reservoir is less ambitious, but an outstanding walker's destination. It is fine for one-day family outings.

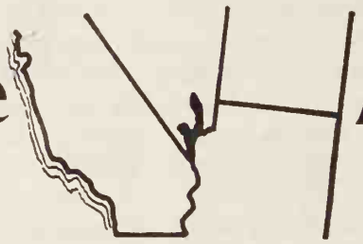
Around the reservoir are ten campgrounds, ranging from 46 to four units. All have toilets, six have piped water. There are also boat campgrounds on Fire Island and Elk Island. Fee: $1 per n... or Golden Eagle Passport. Season is from May through Septem...

For information, write Forest Supervisor, Flathead Nati... Forest, 290 North Main, Kalispell, Mont. 59901.

Lake Mead



Lake Mead's 550-mile shoreline is a mix of rugged and colorful deserts, sandy beaches, deep canyons, numerous dry washes and high rocky plateaus. Spring and fall are the best times here. Temperatures are in the balmy 70s, and you miss the heavy traffic of summer.

You can boat, sail, swim, water ski, skin dive and explore hundreds of sandy beaches and coves that line the shore. Several modern marinas rent boats and equipment. Be sure to bring your field glasses or binoculars to view the fantastic colors and rock formations around the lake. You may spot desert bighorn sheep, coyote and wild burro. Largemouth bass fishing is very popular, but you can also find rainbow trout, bluegill, black crappie and catfish.

Driftwood hunting is good, too. The flotsam is swept out of the Grand Canyon by the Colorado River. And should you tire of the desert's peaceful wilderness, Las Vegas is just 30 miles away.

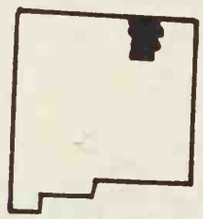
Taos County



Combine a camping and sight-seeing trip in the old-world atmosphere of this north-central section of New Mexico. Its blend of Indian, Spanish and American cultures is rare and exciting.

Choose the thriving art center of Taos as the hub of your vacation. It's surrounded by Carson National Forest, and has for a backdrop the wild and beautiful Sangre de Cristo Mountains. You'll find nearby camping areas from which you can explore the many museums and galleries of this small adobe town, deservedly famous for its art.

From sunup to sundown, you can visit the 800-year-old and still-inhabited Taos Indian Pueblo, which has changed little in the four hundred years since the Spanish first saw it. Indian dances are held nightly in Taos from June 1 through September 15.

Spanish villages and mission churches, some hundreds of years old, dot the countryside. Particularly beautiful is the St. Francis of Assisi Mission four miles south of Taos on Highway 64.

Southern Oregon Coast

Few stretches along Oregon's wave-pounded coastline will fail to please you, but the southern portion is more tumultuous and less crowded than the north. Headlands and cliffs here take the full foamy impact of waves and Pacific winds.

The entire Oregon coastline is dotted with campgrounds, and Oregon's state parks will spoil you with their outstanding facilities.

Harris Beach: This southernmost campground, two miles north of Brookings off US 101, has 119 units for tents and trailers. Activities are surf bathing, fishing and beachcombing. Trails le... past wild flowers and flowering shrubs. The area is popular wi... serious photographers because of its rock formations and seascape... here. Fee, $2 per night. No showers. Flush toilets.

To the north you'll find several other excellent overnight state parks: Humbug Mountain, six miles south of Port Orford (100 units); Bullard's Beach, two miles north of Bandon (191 units); Sunset Bay, 11 miles southwest of North Bend-Coos Bay (137 units). All have showers, flush toilets and laundries. Fees are $2 and $3 per night. Bullard's Beach is noted for sand dunes. The season is June through October; Harris Beach is open all year.

Wallowa Mountains

This northeastern corner of Oregon is less popular than other areas of the state, but it's a region of magnificent landscapes and excellent outdoor recreation. It was the beloved homeland of the Nez Perce Indians, who with their famous chief, Joseph, fought the last great Indian war.

Rich in the lore of the 1870s, it offers glittering lakes, streams and high mountain peaks rising from lush green valleys. Rainbow trout and landlocked sockeye salmon await the fisherman.

To the east, Hells Canyon of the Snake River cuts one vertical mile between Oregon and Idaho, exceeding the depth of the Grand Canyon by 1000 feet. An unpaved forest service road leads to the Hat Point Lookout at the rim of the canyon. Pack stations provide horses to take you into the Eagle Cap Wilderness Area, where scores of lakes can be found in remote valleys.

Wallowa Lake State Park: Located 78 miles east of La Grande on Oregon Route 82, this park offers 89 tent sites at $1 a night, and 121 trailer spaces with hookups at $3 a night. You'll also have laundry and shower facilities, fresh water and firewood. Sheltered electric stoves are available at a nominal charge.

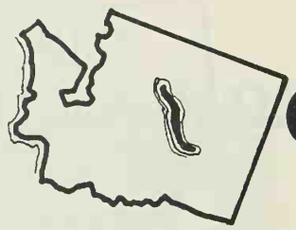
Wallowa Lake was formed by what has been called "the world's most perfect glacial moraine." You can rent motors, boats and water sports equipment.

Minam State Recreation Area: A small state park with ten tent sites at $1 a night. Located near the little town of Minam on Highway 82 leading to Wallowa Lake.

In the area of La Grande, you'll find other small state parks, in addition to a dozen U. S. Forest Service campgrounds.

The season here is from May 1 to November 1. Write Supervisor, Wallowa-Whitman National Forest, P.O. Box 907, Baker, Oreg. 97814.

Lake Chelan



Lake Chelan is a 55-mile-long, fjord-like waterway that penetrates the east side of the Cascade Range. The southern half of the lake, surrounded by apple orchards, is fragrant with blossoms in the spring. In the fall, some of the country's best apples are harvested here. The waters in this end of the lake may reach 75 degrees in the summer, making it ideal for swimming and water skiing.

To the north, accessible only by boat or plane, the lake reaches into the high, snowcapped peaks of the North Cascades. The air here is fragrant, the streams tumble over countless falls on their way to the lake and mountain goats scramble along the cliffs. A network of hiking and horseback trails lets you explore Glacier Peak Wilderness Area and the North Cascades National Park.

Lake Chelan State Park: Nine miles by road on the western side of the lake. It's large, well-kept and popular. There are 178 tent sites ($1.75 a night) and 25 trailer hookups ($2.25 a night), a boat ramp, diving platform, children's playground and changing houses.

Twenty-five Mile Creek Resort: A privately owned area ten miles farther up the same road. It has camping units and trailer hookups, a 60-foot heated pool and a boat dock.

Boat Camping: There are nine national forest and national park campgrounds ranging from one to nine units. They can be reached only by seaplane or boat (available in Chelan). You also can take the "Lady of the Lake" passenger boat, which leaves at 8:30 every morning from the Chelan city dock for the four-hour trip to Stehekin, a small resort community at the north end of the lake. It will drop you off at any one of these campsites. You put out a "stopflag" when you wish to be picked up again. The boat arrives back at Chelan every day at 5:30. Round-trip fee from Chelan to Stehekin is $7, children 6-11 go half-fare. Open all year; best from May through October.

For information write Chelan Chamber of Commerce, Chelan, Wash. 98816; North Cascades National Park, Sedro Woolley, Wash. 98284; Forest Supervisor, Wenatchee National Forest, Wenatchee, Wash. 98801.

Olympic Peninsula

Olympic National Park preserves a stunning region of northwestern Washington in its virgin state. Though encircled by Highway 101, and less than two hours from Seattle, some of the area remains the most unspoiled wilderness in the nation.

There are a variety of camping possibilities here. In the north, the Heart of the Hills road will take you past the park's visitors' center and mountain campgrounds at Hurricane Ridge for views of the glacier-carved peaks of the interior Olympic Range. Here, as at the end of all the 14 roads that pierce the area, you'll find trails leading deep into the rugged heart of the park. If you like boating and water skiing, you'll want to camp close to Lake Crescent in the north or Lake Quinault in the south.

To the west, you can camp along miles of forested misty beaches, where Pacific waves wash rocky headlands and tide pools. You can go surf bathing (the water is bracing), clamming, crabbing, smelting, bottom fishing—or you can just find a comfortable spot and watch the seals playing on the rocks.

In the broad valleys you walk through coniferous rain forests. Sounds are muffled in the campgrounds here by the lush mossy growth, and the sunlight is warm and green-tinted.

The 15 camping areas in Olympic National Park are quickly filled in the summer months. Nearby, 16 National Forest Campgrounds are usually less crowded. Sites are available on a first-come, first-served basis. Most have piped water, toilets and garbage disposal facilities. There are no showers, laundries, or trai hookups, but most of the campgrounds can accommodate trailers. Camping limit is 14 days. Open all year, but roads and camp grounds at higher elevations are closed from late fall to early spring.

For maps and information, write Forest Supervisor, Olympic National Forest, Federal Building, Olympic, Wash. 98501; Superintendent, Olympic National Park, 600 East Park Avenue, Port Angeles, Wash. 98362.

High  Uintas

The Mirror Lake region of the Wasatch National Forest, a two-hour drive east from Salt Lake City, offers splendid high-country camping. Take Highway U-150 at Kamas. It will bring you into the heart of this land of a thousand glacial lakes, aspen and pine forests, mountain meadows and trout streams. Mule deer, elk and Utah's only moose herd are residents here.

It is deceptively rugged country. Some of the campgrounds are located over 10,000 feet in altitude. A little exertion can leave you breathless at first. Nights are cool, and you can expect short thunderstorms, usually in the early afternoon.

Trails lead into the adjacent High Uinta Primitive Area. (The Uintas are the only major mountain range in the country runn east and west.) This beautiful and inviting country offers ba packers, riders and climbers over a quarter of a million acres wilderness that has changed little since pioneer days. Utah's high mountain, 13,498-foot Kings Peak, is here.

The national forest contains 14 camping areas right off St Highway 150. Half of these will accommodate trailers, and m have tables, fireplaces, piped water and toilets. Flaming  Gorge

In 1964, the Flaming Gorge Dam was completed across the Green River, turning a lovely wilderness section of eastern Utah and southwestern Wyoming into a popular recreation area. Today you'll find modern campgrounds, boat ramps and swimming beaches.

You can rent a boat and cruise smooth blue waters that reflect colorful rock cliffs, pinnacles and fanciful rock formations. Water skiing is popular. So are float trips through the incredible canyons of the Green River. (See "Wild Rivers" in the March 1971 issue of Better Homes and Gardens.)

Stop by the Visitors' Information Center perched 1360 feet on a cliff above the waters of Red Rock Canyon. You can also tour the dam. In the southwestern section, you can see a million years of geological history on a 15-minute drive through the spectacular Sheep Creek Canyon Geological Area.

The recreation area holds 28 campgrounds offering distinctive different camping trips. To the north, in Wyoming, you'll fi desert-like camping in colorful, arid terrain. Many fisherm prefer this area, but the majority of the campgrounds are in Utah cooler Uinta Mountains. You can pitch your tent overlooking t lake or move higher up on the forested mountain campgroun where wild flowers abound in spring and summer.

The season runs from May through October, but September one of the best months in this area. Most campers have gon though you still have the company of sheepherders bringing the flocks down from the high country.

For complete camping information, write Area Director, Flam ing Gorge National Recreation Area, U. S. Forest Service, Bo 157, Dutch John, Utah 84023.

The  Tetons

Less crowded than neighboring Yellowstone and Grand Teton parks, Teton National Forest provides a splendid camping experience in the forests beneath the craggy Teton Mountains.

Take to the trails. They'll bring you to lakes, waterfalls, wide meadows and forests of pine and spruce. The lakes and 1000 miles of streams harbor native cutthroat, brook and rainbow trout.

Wildlife-watching here is a daily event. Mule deer stare curiously at your camera. Elk are here by the thousands, and don't be surprised if you come face-to-face with a glaring moose. Golden and bald eagles and ospreys soar overhead. And so do hawks, ducks, geese, trumpeter swans, grouse and sandhill cranes.

For the experience of a lifetime, take a back-country trip into the 871-square-mile Teton Wilderness Area. You can go with one of the several-hundred horse owners packing individually or groups. Or you can backpack if you are in shape and want experience the exhilaration of wilderness camping.

The ten developed campgrounds in the forest, from five to 5 units each, have fireplaces, tables, toilets and drinking water. Th largest, Granite Creek Campground, though isolated in the spe tacular scenery of the Gros Ventre Range in Hoback Canyon, not far from busy Jackson Hole. A natural hot springs swimmin pool close by has dressing rooms and bathhouse facilities. Ther also are showers at Granite Creek pool, though none are provide at the other campsites. Season: June through September.

For information write Forest Supervisor, Teton National Fores Jackson, Wyo. 83001. ■

If all wagon buyers were alike, we'd build just one wagon.

Kingswood Estate

Our big wagon...with vanishing tailgate.

We've changed it. Actually, you've changed it.

You want a big wagon that's easier to load, easier to use. And, man, nothing's easier than ours.

You can open our Glide-Away tailgate even in a closed garage. Even when a trailer's hooked on.

Just turn the tailgate key and the window automatically glides into the roof. Out of sight. Another turn and the gate drops down, disappearing under the floor with one easy push. Out of your way.

We also put in a new forward-facing third seat you get to from the side door. And we designed the rear end so you don't have to put money into an air deflector.

You'll see. We put a lot into putting you first.

Vega

Our medium wagon...with walk-in tailgate.

Treat yourself to a tailgate that goes two ways.

Now the doorway.

You step up easily. The low cutaway bumper step is just the right height.

You step in naturally. The roofline is slanted to let you stand tall.

You sit down comfortably. On a big, wide sofa seat.

Now the gateway. Another treat: a loading gate that lies flat. Not at an angle like some we know. You'll see. The treat's on us.

Concours Estate

Our little wagon...with swing-up tailgate.

Vega. It's a lot of wagon for such a little wagon.

And like all '71 Chevrolets, it runs like a charm on no-lead or low-lead gasolines.

The tailgate?

Up it goes like a canopy—window and all—with one little effort. But what it leaves is a very big opening to a very big room. For such a little wagon.

You'll see. At your Chevrolet dealer's.

Sewage pollution

into a safe, odorless fertilizer, which is then piped to abandoned farmlands on the outskirts to restore productivity.

On the other hand, the State of Georgia has set an example of how things should not be done. A $52 million treatment plant is needed to clean up the Chattahoochee River, which serves half the state's population. Atlanta is willing to put up its 20 percent share of the costs; its sewage creates most of the problem. But there has not been enough public pressure to persuade Georgia legislators to contribute the state's 25 percent. (The remaining 55 percent would come from the U. S. Government.)

Federal enforcement officials of the Environmental Protection Agency are now threatening the city with court action to force construction, but it's by no means certain that this move will succeed.

The lesson is clear: We will continue to drink diluted sewage, eat polluted seafood, swim at filthy beaches, and watch our wild waters die until raising taxes to pay for cleaner water makes politicians popular instead of spelling disaster for them at the polls. How soon that day comes depends on how serious we really are about our environment—for sewage pollution is an area where we can't blame anyone but us. ■ over the old wall. Nail it together flat on the floor, and then raise it into position. Secure the frame with a few nails through the top plate into the ceiling joists. Fasten the bottom to the floor with concrete nails, or set some lead anchors into the floor and run in a few lag screws. Since your wall section won't be supporting anything but the paneling, you need only space the studs on 24-inch centers instead of the conventional 16 inches.

Add rigid or batt insulation before paneling (diagram 4).

With ceiling tiles, you might get by just gluing them to the old ceiling. But if your ceiling is in bad enough shape to warrant a real cover-up job, you'll probably need furring strips. Use ¼-inch plywood strips or 1x2s, depending upon the tile, nailed at right angles to the ceiling joists.

Space your strips so the edges of the tile will meet at each strip—you need strips running in one direction only, to fasten two edges of the tile. You can either glue the tile to the strips or staple them (diagram 5). Stapling is usually more economical, and you can probably borrow a staple gun from your tile dealer.

Your child's allergy needs an "allergy specialist."

So we made a chewable one.

Some children know all about pollen and sneezing long before they know about the birds and the bees.

They suffer from hayfever and other upper respiratory allergies.

We make a children's Allerest just for them. A chewable, cherry-flavored allergy pill (that also can be taken whole—just like grown-ups do). One that's strictly for children's allergies and not a cold capsule or sinus tablet.

Children's Allerest® is formulated with two antihistamines and a decongestant widely prescribed by children's doctors.

They help stop sneezes, runny nose, stuffed-up head and itchy teary eyes. Without giving your child a lot of medication he doesn't need.

Children's Allerest, for ages 6 to 14. Gentle, effective relief for a young case of hayfever.

even for thousands who perspire heavily

A different formula has been found to keep underarms absolutely dry—even for thousands who perspire heavily. So different, it contains far more anti-wetness agent than ordinary aerosol sprays. After decades of common "deodorants," it took a chemical invention to make this truly effective protection possible—with the same safety to clothing—the same skin mildness as popular "deodorants." Called Mitchum Anti-Perspirant, it is the product of a trustworthy 58-year-old laboratory. By the thousands, women with problem perspiration are finding the protection they need—and never could find before. And fully effective as a deodorant, too, of course. If you perspire more than average—even heavily—get the positive protection of Mitchum Anti-Perspirant. Liquid or cream. Each $3. Available in Canada.

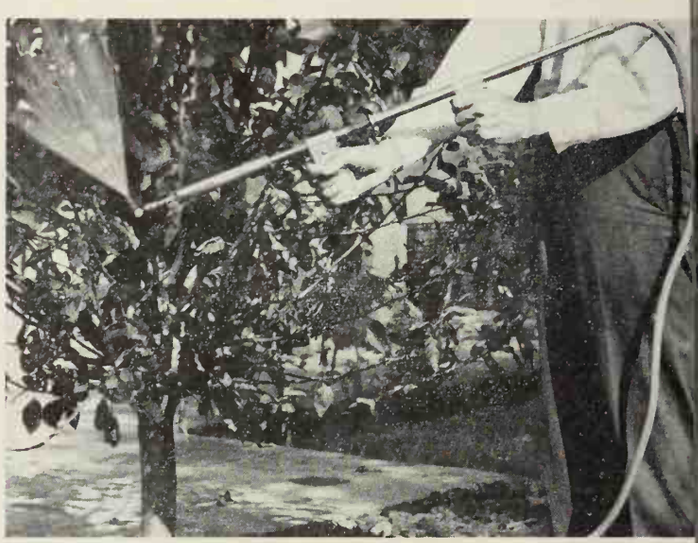
How to care for dwarf fruit trees

Continued

Protect from rodents. The trunk is the most vulnerable p of the tree. Rabbits love to eat the bark over winter, and gnawing clear around the trunk they can kill a tree. Prot the trunk with a wrap from the day you plant the tree. special commercial tree wrap is available at garden cente Let the wrap extend from two inches below the soil level to the bottom limb. Once a year loosen the wrap as t trunk expands. Replace wrap when old one deteriorat This or similar protection will also control apple tree b ers. Pressurized cans of rabbit repellent are available spray lower limbs. If field mice are around, collar the trun with fine wire mesh sunk three inches into the soil.



Control insects and disease. To produce clean pest-free frui use one of the multipurpose fruit pesticides available garden centers. Follow precisely the directions on the co tainer label. Apply with a trombone, as above, or a garde tank sprayer. Have the pesticide and applicator on hand i early spring to be sure the first spray is applied at the co rect time. Then repeat at regular intervals as stated on th label until about six applications have been made. To mak sure the pesticide solution spreads out over the tree surface and sticks even if it rains, buy a multipurpose pesticide co taining spreader-sticker. Or, if that isn't available, buy th spreader-sticker separately and add as directed. A matur dwarf tree takes about a quart of spray for coverage.

- Do cleaning jobs that require water, such as mopping and washing windows, during the coolest part of a warm day. These chores release moisture faster than the air conditioner can remove it from the air.
- Keep the bathroom door closed when bathing. Then open the door slightly and ventilate the moisture-laden air to the outdoors with a fan or open a window slightly.

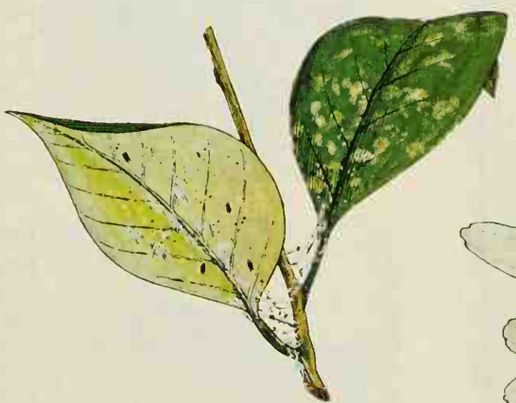
These tips for efficient use of a room air conditioner also apply to a home with central air conditioning.

The balance of nature is predicated on the fact that one thing dies so that another may live.

DIABROTICA BEETLE is a midsummer visitor. Feeds on many flowering plants as well as vegetables. Sometimes called the Cucumber Beetle. Larvae feed on the roots of plants.

APHIDS like the juicy new growth of almost any plant. They curl leaves, stunt and destroy growth, excrete sticky honeydew. A few soon become a hoard.

CATERPILLARS come in all colors and sizes, become moths or butterflies. Many are voracious leaf eaters. Some fold leaves, some build tents, some are perfectly harmless.



MITES damage leaves and turn them pale. They can also cause the leaves of plants to turn yellow with minute, paler yellow specks. They suck sap from underneath leaves and may go unnoticed.

THRIPS have mouths equipped to scrape and rasp. They scar and streak foliage, can deform buds so that flowers never open. Thrips are tiny, but the result of their work is all too easy to see.

LEAF MINERS are the larvae of many different kinds of insects tunneling inside leaves. They come from eggs laid on top of or just inside leaves by flies, moths or sawflies.

The proposition that concerns both of us is the unceasing struggle between desirable plant life and destructive insects. In this particular context, we think you will want us to join you in defending your garden.

Six of the garden's most common enemies are discussed above. There are thousands more. But don't lose hope. With broad spectrum defense like ORTHO® ISOTOX® Insect Spray you can repel about any pest invasion. Talk to your ORTHO Dealer.

THIS WOMAN IS REDUCING HER WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS AND THIGHS

with the Fabulous New SAUNA BELT™

TRIM-JEANS

The Amazing Space Age Slenderizer that is so sensationally effective it is . . .

GUARANTEED TO REDUCE YOUR WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS AND THIGHS A TOTAL OF FROM 6 TO 9 INCHES IN JUST 3 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED

CYNTHIA BATEMAN: "I lost 13 excess inches and got a brand new figure in just 3 days—that's what trim-jeans did for me. I used the trim-jeans for just a few minutes each day for 3 days and lost 2½" from my waist, 2½" from my tummy, over 2" from my hips and almost 3" from each thigh—which had always been my most stubborn area. There were no diets to follow and trim-jeans made it fun, easy and incredibly fast. I'm absolutely thrilled with the way my figure looks now."

THIS SUPER PRODUCT IS PRODUCING SUPER NEW SLENDERIZING FOR A HOST OF WOMEN. HERE ARE JUST A FEW:

Miss Penny Dix: "I used the trim-jeans just 3 times and took a total of 11½ inches off my hips and thighs and middle—7 inches the very first day. No dieting and my figure has never looked better."

Mrs. Mary Lou Wilhelm: "Following the trim-jeans program, I reduced my waist 2½ inches, my abdomen by 2 inches, my hips by 2 inches and my thighs by 2½ inches each—I ate normally—it took just 3 days—and the inches have stayed off."

Miss Carol Arrighi: "I used your marvelous trim-jeans a few minutes a day for 3 days in a row and reduced my waist from 26 to 24, my tummy from 31 to 29, my hips from 36 to 34 and my thighs from 23 to 21. My new measurements are just perfect for my height."

TRIM-JEANS—THE SPACE AGE SLENDERIZER WITH RESULTS THAT ARE OUT OF THIS WORLD. The trim-jeans are a marvel of ease, comfort and efficiency. Once you have slipped them on, you are ready for the most astounding experience in rapid slenderizing you have ever known. Only trim-jeans has the unique features of design, including the exclusive super sauna-lock that permits the constant snug fit and solid support in all 4 areas—waist, tummy, hips and thighs—without which truly sensational results are not possible. We recommend that the trim-jeans be used a few minutes each day for 3 days in a row when you first receive them and then several times a week until you have achieved your maximum potential inch loss. After that, for maintenance you can use the trim-jeans about twice a month or as often as you feel the need.

THE MOST REVOLUTIONARY GUARANTEE IN SLENDERIZING HISTORY. So many users of the trim-jeans obtain 'instant reducing'—are inches slimmer, inches trimmer in from just 1 to 3 sessions with this super slenderizer—are actually losing as much as a total of 7 or more inches from their waists, tummies, hips and thighs in just 1 session and up to 13 or more inches from 3 sessions. This principle produces really fantastic results. There may be variations of speed and/or degree of results due to individual differences in metabolism and body response. Not everyone may lose 7 inches in just 1 session and 13 inches in 3 days but remember this: No matter what your metabolism, no matter what your body type, if you do not lose a total of from 6 to 9 inches from your waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 3 days, you may return the trim-jeans and the entire purchase price will be immediately refunded.

Here is how it works:

Mrs. Cynthia Bateman has slipped into her trim-jeans and is inflating them with the handy little pump provided. She is now ready to perform her 'Magic Torso' movements, an exercise program designed specially for trim-jeans.

After a few pleasant moments—about 10 minutes or so—doing her 'Magic Torso' movements, Cynthia is now relaxing for an additional 20 minutes while keeping her trim-jeans on. That is all there is to it.

Cynthia checks her 'after' measurements. Remarkable! Cynthia lost 2½" from waist, 2½" from tummy, over 2" from hips, almost 3" from each thigh for a total measurement loss of 13" in just 3 brief sessions.

PLAYS THE THEME MUSIC FROM THE MOTION PICTURE LOVE STORY

Seldom has the public taken a picture to its heart with the unreserved warmth and joy that has greeted "Love Story." Tender, poignant, touching the very heart of first love, here is literally a total experience between art and viewer. And now, as if to distill the very essence of this fragile theme, we've taken the incredibly lovely theme music and placed it in this utterly charming music box. To a quiet moment in the day, as a background to a nostalgic moment, the crisp tinkling notes will gently build a beautiful world of your own. Listen and be lost in a lovely dream.

And the charming bisque statuette—in the tradition of world famous figurines—is a collector's piece that will become an heirloom treasure. Unfortunately it is literally impossible to capture the delicate colorations—the soft pinks, the tender skin tones, the workmanship of the coverlet and the fine details—all from the black and white illustration here. Only when you actually see it can you fully appreciate its elegance and appeal. So lovely you'll want to order an extra piece as a special gift while this offer lasts.

OFFER WILL NOT BE REPEATED THIS SEASON

We urge you to order now while our specially imported supply lasts. With its marvelous melody and decorator appeal, these pieces are certain to go fast. Each bisque sculpture is 6" long, 3¾" deep and 4" high, and is yours for just $4.98 on full money back guarantee if you are not absolutely delighted. But hurry, order now, this offer will not be repeated this season in this magazine. © Copyright 1971 Division of Bevis Industries

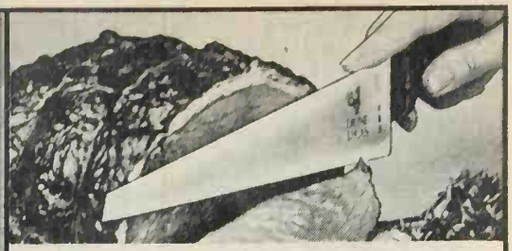
COMPLETE 4-PIECE SET
Handles Every Kitchen Chore
Set of 4...$19.98 ppd.



THE KNIFE THAT MAKES OTHERS OBSOLETE!

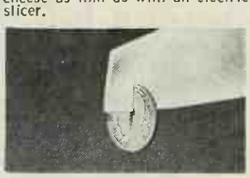
Designed to stay sharp indefinitely. Miracle marriage of space-age technology and Molybdenum Steel creates a blade so tough, so hard, so durable, it makes ordinary sharpening unnecessary forever...won't dull, rust, bend or lose its hardness.

You've never before seen knives like these! They're thin, flexible and with a completely new feather-light "feel" in your hand. Yet they're so sharp and swift they'll dice a full-size carrot in seconds...cut a pound of chuck in tender, paper-thin wafers just as quickly.

- Zip through roasts, carve turkeys like an expert
- Bone and trim like a master butcher
- Fillet fish clean as a whistle
- Chop and mince better than with a drawerful of tools

Beautiful modern design with squared points to protect your fingers and handsome, rosewood handles combine to set the MSC knives apart from all knives before them.

SO SHARP, IT CUTS SEE-THROUGH SLICES! Slice vegetables, bread, luncheon meats, cheese as thin as with an electric slicer.



CUTS A COIN...because it's crafted of one of the hardest, most costly steel known to man—Molybdenum Chrome!

The man next door

Rev. George Hall said he offered a little prayer the other day while planting his garden. "Lord," he said, "help me not to plant more than I can eare for."

"Do you realize," Christine mused the other evening, "that we were married so long ago we didn't even get one fondue pot as a wedding present?"

Police Chief Tillard agrees that the more things change, the more they're the same. The Lover's Lane he used to patrol is now the site of a drive-in movie.

Ten-year-old Judy clings to her ambition to be a nurse, yet her talent in wheedling allowanee increases should equip her ideally for a eareer in labor negotiation.

Elaine Cowan insists she isn't mueh interested in town gossip. She says she hears it first from the original east.

I liked the sign I saw on a garbage truck in our town: "We guarantee satisfaetion or double your garbage back."

A reminder that age is relative eame from Judy, ten, as she looked at snapshots of herself as a baby. "Boy," she said, "I sure looked funny when I was young."

Mark, a five-year-old neighbor, was told the world looks different to him than it does to a eolor-blind friend. This prompted him to ask: "Well, whieh way is it, the way I see it or the way he does?"

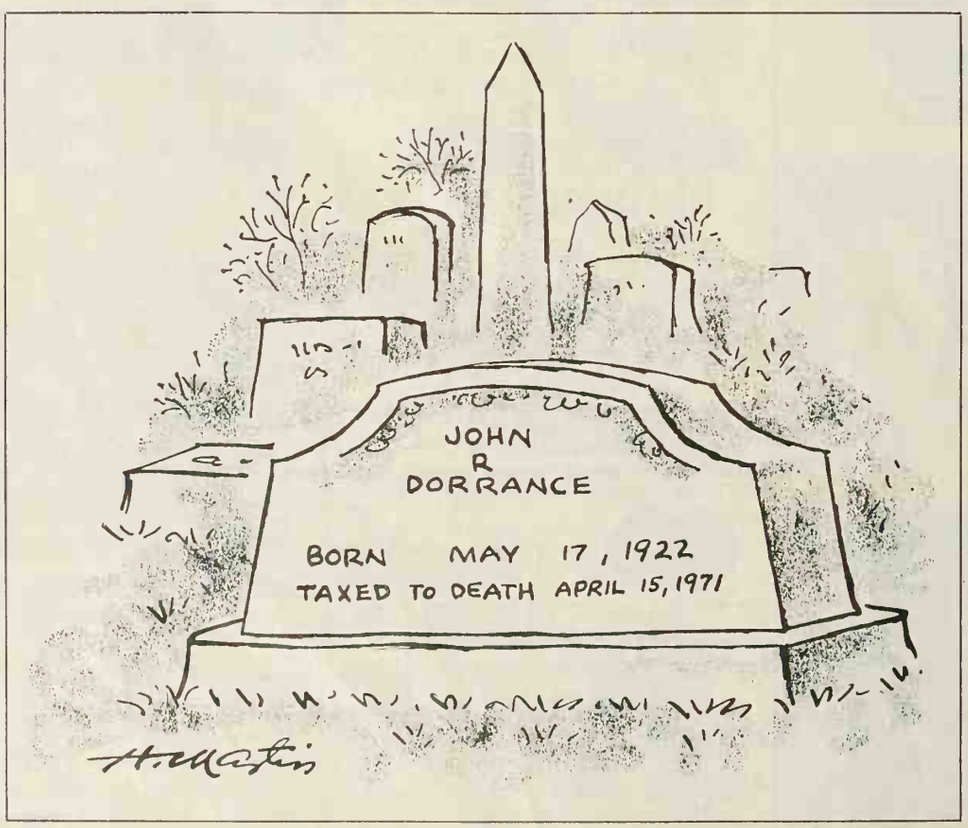
Rosemary says the hair-over-the-eyes style serves one useful purpose: "It keeps people from getting a good look at things they don't really want to see."

Although experts elaim it's sometimes dangerous to breathe the air around us, Unele Dodd Buekner says he's going to do his best to keep at it even if it hurts.

The new outdoor furniture takes on some strange and wonderful shapes, but nothing seems to suit the mood of an early summer evening quite like an old-fashioned poreh swing.

One of life's mysteries to Bill Clanton is why his ehildren, who are light eaters, suddenly beeome ravenous in a restaurant that features hamburgers for $2.85 and eake at a dollar a plate.

Family pienies should be a little livelier this year. Our environment-conseious ehildren refuse to let us swat any bugs for fear of disturbing the eeology.



"I told you no one could get along with her."

Dad Hillis recalls when he chose his food beeause he liked it. Now he fills out a mental eheeklist before he dares dig in: Will his bridgework approve? Cholesterol level? Calorie eount?

I lost a good friend reeently. Christine disearded my old yard-work trousers and replaced them with a brand-new pair. Now I have to think twice before I get on my knees, stuff dirty tools in my poekets or elimb a tree that needs pruning.

When I reeeived my bank statement in the mail last week, I noticed that an American flag deeal was ineluded in the envelope. An attaehed note explained it was a gift, given in the hope I'd put it on my car window. At first I was pleased.

Later, I began wondering if it was really the great idea it seemed to be at first. Showing off the colors on speeial oeeasions is something our family has always enjoyed. Yet having the Stars and Stripes eonstantly displayed on my ear seemed somehow out of step with our family's attitude toward the flag.

And what about the people who didn't have a flag deeal? Might I risk implying, however unintentionally, that they were somehow less patriotic than I? I deeided against the deeal, feeling it was more a sign of eurrent political ferment than an expression of genuine patriotism.

Then too, it seemed Old Glory deserved something better than being dumped in the same elass with billboards and bumper stiekers, many of them bearing vaguely ominous messages like "America, love it or leave it." Used like this—or as a shirt on a bearded youth—the flag beeomes a politieal football rather than a symbol.

My family agreed. To us, pride in our country ean't be synthesized into a deeal. Patriotism, like all ideals, must be something we feel within ourselves.

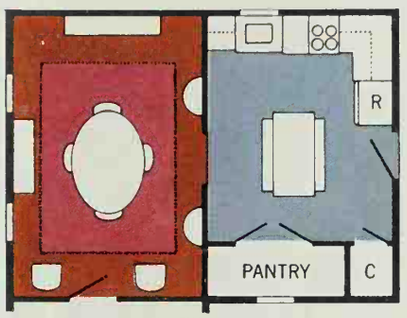
When home gets a little too cramped for comfort, it's not so easy to up and move. So most people redo, redecorate, revive. That's the challenge we gave our Armstrong interior designers. "Here are two rooms," we said, "a small dark kitchen and a drab dining room. Make the most of them!"

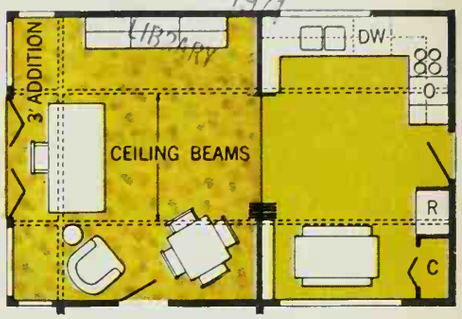
On these four pages, we'll show you how they combined the two small rooms into a beautiful, functional living center. How they got more out of the kitchen. And how they turned the old dining area into an ingenious convertible room.

Only part of their solution is structural change (see floor plans at right). The rest is imagination, decorative daring, and some exciting Armstrong products—floors, ceilings, carpets, and Thomasville furniture.

It all started in the kitchen with a new kind of floor that gives you a lot more than just good looks.



Before: Two too-small rooms. The kitchen and dining room.



After: A beautiful living center. More space. More light. More life.

More than just a sunny new floor Armstrong Solarian™ shines without waxing

You've probably heard claims about vinyl floors that are supposed to keep their shine without waxing. Armstrong has never made such a claim. We know from experience that any vinyl floor will begin to lose some gloss after a few months and require an occasional waxing to restore and maintain a shine.

For women who hate to wax

But we also know how much you hate to wax floors. So we set out to develop a totally new kind of floor that really would require no wax to keep shining and less work to keep clean.

The result is Solarian. And its secret is a major new development from Armstrong research called the Mirabond™ Wear Surface. Because of this entirely new formulation, Solarian will retain its gloss far longer than vinyl floors.

Tested in homes like yours

Armstrong has tested Solarian floors in the busy kitchens of actual homes for two years. With just occasional sweeping, damp-mopping—and no waxing—these floors are still bright and shining.

Most waxes won't adhere to new surface

Just as an egg won't stick to the new coated frypans, most waxes won't stick to the Mirabond Wear Surface. More important, neither will most spills or tracked-in dirt. Even black heel marks wipe right off this unique, new surface.

After several years of wear, there may be a slight lowering of gloss in high-traffic areas. You probably won't find it objectionable. But if you should ever need it, your Armstrong retailer can supply a special Solarian Floor Finish which you can use in these areas to restore and maintain the shine the way you like it.

As beautiful to look at as to live with

The "Palazzo" design shown here is one shining example of the many Solarian designs and colors. Want more information? See the box at the bottom of the next right-hand page.

To create a cozy dining area in the kitchen, our designers did away with the old pantry and let the sunshine in through a big bay window. They gained counter and storage space galore, added new appliances, and cabinets. (Notice how they had the cabinets patterned after the Thomasville storage units in the family room.)

The result? A bright, airy kitchen, opening into a beautiful, functional family room.

Here is the view from the kitchen the new family room. More space, e light, more living.

Now, on to Armstrong's convertible room

r design copyrighted by Armstrong

The Convertible Room: family roo

rood /or dining room

The old dining room spent much of its life gathering dust. A waste of valuable living space. So, our designers transformed it into a room that's always alive. Most of the time it serves comfortably as a family room, but whenever the need arises, converts easily into this elegant dining room. To add space and make their convertible room as bright and airy as the kitchen, our designers replaced one whole wall with a big window alcove. They also removed a big section of the wall between the two rooms. But for occasions like this, when no one wants to look at a messy kitchen, they installed a neat system of moving panels in the passageway. They hang from a track, concealed overhead, and slide into place in seconds.

The Armstrong products chosen for the convertible room had to be just as versatile—a lot more than just good looking.

More than just another ho-hum ceiling

Our designers knew just which type of Armstrong ceiling to use. It's one of our newest, designed for elegant rooms like this with more interesting textures and without the old "v-groove" joints between the tiles. Seams are less noticeable and the rich texture flows smoothly from wall to wall. It has a truly elegant look. We call it, appropriately enough, a "Chandelier™ Ceiling". At the same time, like most Armstrong ceilings, the Chatham design shown is acoustical so it soaks up family-room noise. And any reasonably handy husband can install one himself.

More than just another pretty carpet

In choosing a carpet, the Armstrong designers asked a good bit. They wanted family-room informality and dinner-party elegance. And, of course, the carpet had to be tough enough to take on the kids.

"Flower Garden" was all they asked—and more. It's a brand-new Armstrong shag, with a shag's soft, deep warmth, in a whimsical flower print. Comfortable and pleasantly informal. But this shag is much more lush, much richer in character than the usual shag. It's truly elegant. What you might call "elegantly informal". Or is it "informally elegant"? In any case, it's made of extra-bulky continuous filament nylon, so it's pretty tough for a flower garden.

More than just beautiful furniture

To furnish their convertible room, our designers chose Brandywine by Thomasville (which, by the way, is part of Armstrong now). Brandywine is Early American from its burnished, glowing patina to its antiqued brass-finished hardware. And versatile? This elegantly set table, with an armchair, doubles as the roomy desk you saw in the family room. And the rest of the chairs are more frequently found around a game table.

The three Thomasville storage units hold a lot more than now meets the eye. Conveniently out of sight behind the doors are the books, the stereo amplifier, speakers, TV, and all other clues to this lovely dining room's other life. And the conversion takes a matter of minutes.

Here the view is just opposite of the preceding page—the ly room converted for formal dining—ing toward the kitchen.

The whole project took a lot of work, a lot of imagination, and a lot of Armstrong, but when we'd finished, we had a beautiful, functional living center. If you'd like to get more living from your living space, we've got the products and ideas to help you. Floors, ceilings, carpets, and Thomasville furniture—all from Armstrong. See the box below for some more information on how to get started.

Armstrong products and ideas can make a beautiful difference in your home. For a full package of literature covering Armstrong floors, ceilings, carpets, and Thomasville furniture, write to Armstrong, 7106 Elm St., Lancaster, Penna. 17604.

THE OPEL 1900.
NO OTHER ECONOMY CAR (FOREIGN OR DOMESTIC) GIVES YOU ALL THIS.

Last year, Opel offered you one gon, the Model 39, shown at rear. This year, Opel adds the 1900 wag-. It offers many things as standard uipment that other small cars offer optional equipment. Or not at all.

For example, the Opel 1900 is the onomy car with hydraulic valve ters, for a quiet-running engine and minating the need for adjustments at cost time and money.

The Opel 1900 has front power disc akes that help give you quick, ooth, straight-line stops.

As standard equipment.

And the Opel 1900 has lots and lots room, too. The cargo area is fully rpeted, and the luggage compart-ent is cleverly hidden. And please tice, the Opel has adjustable backs on its front bucket seats as standard equipment.

The Opel 1900 has a four-speed manual transmission.

As standard equipment.

And a three-speed, fully automatic transmission is available.

Things like wheel trim rings, chrome drip rails, window trim moldings and fancy vinyl upholstery can really dress up a car.

And they're all standard equipment on an Opel 1900.

But maybe you want an economy car just for the great gas mileage and easy handling. The Opel 1900 gets great gas mileage and we turn tight . . . 31.8 feet with only three turns of the wheel.

See all the Opel 1900s (1900 two-door sedan, 1900 four-door sedan, 1900 sport coupe, the zoomy 1900 Rallye and the beautiful 1900 wagon) at your Buick-Opel dealer's. Over 2,000 of them sell and service Opel from coast to coast.

While you're there, see the other Opels, too.

Available this year is a four-door sedan, in addition to a two-door sedan and an economy wagon.

And they've got many of the things the 1900s have.

Plus one other wonderful advantage —they're less expensive.

After you've seen all the Opels, if you can find an economy car that you think gives you more than Opel, congratulations.

You've done more than we could.

more auto insurance for LESS money

If you have a good driving record—which to most insurance companies means no accidents for three years—you can buy better auto insurance protection for less than you now pay. A little-known "Special Automobile Package Policy" is available from many companies.

WHAT THE PACKAGE INCLUDES

Single-limit liability. In many cases, this offers higher limits of protection than policies which carry three individual limits. For instance, a policy with limits of 50/100/20 will pay a maximum of $50,000 per person for injury or death resulting from an accident, with a maximum of $100,000 for all persons injured or killed in the accident. The $20,000 is the maximum property damage coverage per accident. There is no overlapping of coverage. Thus in an accident where one person won a judgment of $70,000 against you, you would have to pay the amount in excess of $50,000, or $20,000 in this case.

Under a $100,000 single-limit policy, any claim or combination of bodily injury and property damage claims up to the full amount would be fully covered. In the case of a single judgment of $70,000, you would pay nothing. The special policy is available with five common single-liability limits: $25,000, $50,000, $100,000, $200,000, $300,000. Higher limits are available from some companies.

In addition to liability, the special policy includes medical payments, uninsured-motorist coverage, accidental-death benefit, bail bond and loss-of-pay provisions.

- Medical payments. Coverage is for $1000, $2000, $3000, $4000 or $5000, depending on the liability limits you choose. To cut costs and thus reduce premiums, the special policy does not duplicate claims payments collectible from other sources. If a claimant is not paid from any other source or his medical expenses are not covered in full, the medical payments coverage of the policy will pay his loss up to the limits of the coverage. With regular policies, you pay extra for this coverage.
- Uninsured motorist. This coverage is for bodily injury you would be legally entitled to collect, usually up to $20,000, from the driver or owner of an uninsured vehicle or a hit-run driver. The $20,000 is single limit whereas regular policies normally are $10,000 per person, $20,000 per accident. The amount may vary depending on the financial responsibility limits specified in each state.

The uninsured motorist portion of any policy is widely misunderstood. It provides coverage only for bodily injury. It does not apply to property damage to the car or its contents.

- Accidental death benefit. You and your spouse are each insured for $1000 for death resulting from an auto accident. This benefit applies only to husband and wife and does not cover children or other family members.
- Higher bail bond. If you have to post a bond or bail for an accident or traffic violation, you are covered for the cost of bonds up to $250 per bond. In the family policy, the limit is $100.
- Loss of pay. You are reimbursed up to $25 a day for salary or wages lost when you appear, at the insurer's request, at a trial or hearing in connection with an accident; also for reasonable expenses. The family policy pays only expenses.

OPTIONAL COVERAGES:

The special policy also includes these extras if the optional collision and comprehensive coverage is purchased:

- More "personal effects" coverage. Items left in the car, like wearing apparel and luggage, are insured for up to $200 against fire, lightning, flood, falling objects, explosion, earthquake and theft of the entire automobile. The family policy limit is $100.
- Towing and labor costs. You are allowed up to $25 to get a disabled car moved or moving. With the family policy, you pay an additional premium for this coverage.

WHERE AND HOW TO BUY THE POLICY

Many of the largest old-line agency companies, as well as some mutual companies, issue it under their own brand names. Your present company may have it but your agent may not push it because it pays him a lower commission. The policy is not available in Texas, North Carolina, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Puerto Rico because of legal technicalities. If you decide to switch to the special policy, start to arrange for it at least a month before your present policy expires. You must pay for it on or before the date it is issued. Also, renewal is by certificate rather than by a new policy, and is usually semiannual, sometimes quarterly. Premiums must be paid on or before the renewal date. However, most special policies can be reinstated if payment is received within 10 to 15 days of expiration date. Most regular auto policies do not have a grace or reinstatement period.

HOW MUCH CAN YOU SAVE?

The amount will vary from state to state and even within the same state. Savings can be up to 15 percent or more compared to similar coverage in regular policies. However, the special policy is not normally available to drivers under 21 who own and operate their own cars.

Small-tire care

The small tires on tent campers and boat trailers require special attention. Because of their smaller diameter, these tires rotate much faster than the larger diameter tires on the towing vehicle—up to 80 percent more revolutions per mile. This puts greater stress on the tires and results in greater heat buildup and accelerated tread wear.

Proper inflation is a critical factor. Small tires require higher inflation pressures than automobile tires, in some cases double or even triple the amount. Most small tires require at least 50 pounds pressure at maximum load; some sizes require pressures in the 90- to 100-pound range. Car owners and service station attendants may unwittingly inflate trailer tires to the same pressure as for car tires. The resulting under-inflation causes fast, uneven tread wear and can result in premature tire failure due to excessive heat buildup. Under-inflation can also cause handling problems: severe trailer sway, fishtailing and possible jackknifing.

Tire pressure should be checked before starting on a trip while the tires are cool. Never bleed air from a tire that gives a high reading after being driven. Pressure increases of up to 15 pounds are normal for small trailer tires operated at highway speeds.

MYTHS ABOUT YOUR HEALTH AND HEREDITY

Ten years ago, no doctor worth his shingle would try to predict that you could develop a disease simply because your parents, grandparents—or even a distant uncle—had it. That's certainly less true today.

More and more, doctors are taking advantage of new knowledge about health and heredity to help prevent many diseases from ever starting, and to predict diseases in the yet unborn. In fact, genetic counseling, a relatively new branch of science, is considered by many to be the fastest growing area of clinical medicine today.

But one of the most important steps in understanding the link between health and heredity is to clear away some common myths and misconceptions. Each of the statements in bold type is often considered true. Actually, each statement is false.

"There are only a few genetic illnesses."

Wrong. There are nearly 1500 human ailments and abnormalities now known to be related to hereditary influences, and hundreds more are suspected. Diabetes is perhaps the most commonly recognized hereditary disease, but genetic links have been traced to heart disease, some forms of cancer, certain allergies, birth defects, blood diseases, rheumatic illnesses and kinds of mental retardation.

Few of these illnesses, however, are guaranteed because of a person's genetic makeup. In most cases, heredity simply predisposes a person toward a certain illness. Whether or not it eventually develops is then determined by the individual's lifestyle and environment.

"Genetic problems are too complicated to understand."

It is not always easy to find genetic links between health and heredity, but it can be done. An inborn disease or structural defect, or a high susceptibility to some type of affliction—anything you inherit that may weaken your health—is passed on from one generation to another through basic laws of genetic transmission.

Here's how it works. Every physical characteristic, from most obvious to the most su is determined by one or pairs of genes attached in numbers to thin, stringy str of chromosomes somewhat beads on a necklace. One m ber of each pair is donate the father; the second al comes from the mother. Us the two genes are alike work together. But occasio they are not in agreement. gene from the mother may blue eyes, for instance, v the gene from the father brown. One or the other yield.

In this case, the baby's would probably be brown. is not because the father al overrules the mother; it hap the other way just as often. reason is that the gene for bl eyes is "strong" or domi (sometimes represented b capital G) while the gene blue eyes is "weak" or rece (small g). In the shorthan genetics, this is a mixed pair, in which the domi member is expected to pre

Who would think panels a have so b many different looks? c Weldwood would d .

There's no one word to describe Weldwood prefinished wall paneling. We have as many varieties as there are personalities to please, decorating styles to match, and budgets to plan.

For instance, we have a broad range of luxury panels, like (a) Deluxe Walnut, $30.00.

We also have panels in the middle range. Above are (b) Surfwood® Frosted Ebony, $13.50; and (c) Craftsman® Amber Elm, $14.00.

And then there are our thirty-two tight-budget panels, that sell for $8.50 or less per panel. Like (d) Cavalier™ Burgundy, $6.00.

In fact, the only thing all our panels have in common is the quality. Weldwood quality. Your local lumber or building supply retailer can show you the range. So can your Weldwood Headquarters Dealer, listed in the Yellow Pages under Plywood.

rigidly conform to it. Genes that are theoretically dominant, for instance, don't always behave that way. "Dominant" and "recessive" are only terms of convenience, by no means absolute. Actually, the comparative strengths of genes is infinitely varied. Sometimes a "recessive," for unaccountable reasons, manages to prevail over a "dominant." And frequently the choice is more than simply (G) or (g). Eyes don't have to be either brown or blue, they can be gray, green, or perhaps even albino.

"Genetic problems never strike twice in the same place."

Doctors often said this to console parents of a child afflicted by some inherited defect. Their reasoning was erroneously based on the laws of probability: since only one child in a thousand is born with clubfoot, parents who already have had one baby with that defect would surely be spared by the odds from having another.

Unfortunately, many couples encouraged by that logic soon learned that inherited traits are determined by the genes, not entirely by random chance. Genetic lightning can and does strike the same family twice—or more times, if given the chance. In the case of clubfoot, parents with one afflicted child run a much higher risk than the general population—it is estimated at somewhere between three and eight percent—that any subsequent child will have the same defect. The odds for each affliction are different, of course.

"Sterility cannot be inherited."

The statement is often considered a joke; after all, it's obvious that anyone who's sterile will have no children to pass the trait on to. But the fact remains that sterility is inherited in many cases—not from people who are childless themselves, of course, but from a mother and a father whose genes combine to create a condition that directly causes sterility in their offspring. Many people are confused about genetics in general because they visualize a particular trait as being "passed down" through g er tions in the manner of a t heirloom. It isn't as simp that. Many traits, both goo bad, are inherited from p who never possessed them

"Genetic defects are usu caused by the mother."

When are you heading for REAL MONEY TROUBLE?

There are a number of economic danger signals you should watch for. By staying alert to these warning signs and taking action as soon as you spot them, you may avoid severe financial distress.

1 Do you have less than the equivalent of three months' take-home pay in a bank savings account or other asset such as stocks you can convert readily to cash without a big loss on your investment?

2 Has your regular family income remained static while expenses have accelerated? Do you have enough financial reserves to carry you through an unforeseen major expense—or a reduction in your income?

3 Have you been forced to dip into emergency savings to pay bills and meet routine expenses? Are you unable to replenish your savings quickly?

4 Do your installment loan payments add up to 20 percent of your monthly take-home pay? Does the installment debt figure continue to grow?

5 Are you constantly paying off a loan at the bank, the credit union or a loan company? Have you signed up for other loans while earlier burdens are still outstanding?

Any one of these warnings means it's time for a hard look at your family finances to figure out how you can realign your expenditures and income. If three or more distress signals apply to your situation, arrange to talk with your lenders or a financial counseling service.

How good is your insurance away from home?

You probably have more protection than you realize, but it's a good idea to go over your policies to find out if you need extra protection. (And be sure you arrange for payment of premiums that fall due during any trip you plan.)

Homeowners coverage. Your personal liability coverage is good anywhere for damage to someone's person or property (excluding car accidents). You're limited to $25,000 liability for each accident, but you can raise the coverage easily. Less than $10 extra will bring you $300,000 liability protection.

To figure your "off-premises" coverage on personal property for fire, theft and other physical hazards, you have to go through the following calculations:

1. You're covered at home for 50 percent of the amount on the dwelling itself. For example, a policy that covers the house for $30,000 gives you $15,000 protection for "unscheduled" personal property (that excludes certain items that are covered only up to a certain amount).
2. Away from home, you're covered for ten percent of the insured personal property—in the above case, $1500.
3. There's a minimum coverage of $1000, even though that may be more than ten percent of your protection, for all unscheduled personal property. (An $18,000 home, for instance, would otherwise provide only $900 off-premises protection.)

There are other limits that apply to at-home losses as well as those off-premises: $100 on cash or coin collection; $500 on stamps, securities and other valuable papers; $500 on jewelry or furs.

Your overall off-premises protection increases, of course, as you raise the face amount of your insurance. Let's say you are covered off-premises for $1200—ten percent of the personal property protection on a $24,000 homeowners policy. Here's how the away-from-home provisions work:

- Your motel room is flooded by a break in the plumbing, which ruins $375 in clothing and luggage. You're fully covered.
- A $700 fur coat, plus clothing worth $300, is stolen from a moving van. Your insurance will pay $800—$500 maximum on the fur coat, and $300 full coverage on the clothing.
- Your daughter's $300 hi-fi set is stolen from her room at college while she's in residence there. Any such loss up to $1200 is covered.

If you don't think your personal property coverage is large enough, you can add a "rider" to your policy, or take out "floaters" on specific items.

Auto insurance. You're generally covered anywhere in the United States—and in some of its possessions. Before starting on a trip, though, check with your agent to see if your liability insurance meets the financial responsibility requirements of the places you'll visit.

Your policy also covers you in Canada, but you need at least $50,000 liability to comply with provincial requirements. When you travel in Mexico, you must be insured by a company based in that country. If your own company is a member of the American Foreign Insurance Association, your agent can get you coverage through a Mexican company. Typical 10/20/10 coverage costs less than $2 a day. Or, you can buy the insurance at the border for a slightly lower premium.

Health insurance. With Blue Cross-Blue Shield, you're covered almost anywhere. If your policy is with a commercial company, check geographic limitations. Some companies require a "policy endorsement" for foreign travel, where they'll spell out exactly what's covered.

Whatever your policy, be sure to get receipts covering all hospital or medical care costs outside your area. That applies even to expenses in adjoining states.

Life insurance. In general, your present policy is good anywhere in the world. You may have problems if you want additional insurance, and are planning to live in an area presenting unusual health problems (like Southeast Asia). Some companies charge a higher premium, limit the amount, or even turn you down. In that case, you may be able to get term insurance for the duration of your stay; it depends largely on what you'll be doing.

How to shop for auto financing

Before you begin looking at cars, it's smart to shop around for credit. You're more likely to save money when you're aware of the available plans—and you'll be in a better bargaining position, too. Be sure to compare both terms and interest rates of each lender. Low interest rates are important, but you should also decide which repayment arrangement suits you best.

The Truth in Lending law makes it relatively easy to compare interest rates. All interest rates must now be stated as a true annual percentage rate, and must include all charges connected with getting credit. Compare these factors too: the amount of What subject can turn the boudoir into a battlefield?

Money.

Let there be peace.

Why can't we manage to enjoy money? Because most of us don't know how to manage money. That's where Master Charge® comes in...

Where did the money go?

Let's start where the problem does...the end of the month. You've used a lot of different charge cards and charge accounts to charge a lot of different things. The bills pour in. You don't know what you've spent where. And just when you think all the bills are in and paid...wham...two more come in. With different billing dates.

You can eliminate this problem simply. Use Master Charge for all your purchases. At the end of the month...just one bill. One simple budget record of everything you've spent. Instead of writing 4 or 9 or 12 different checks, one check pays everything. And just one stamp to mail it in. Over the year it can save you time and money.

How to meet the unexpected

Another budget dilemma. Your income probably comes in regularly but there are always unexpected emergencies that knock your budget for a loop. With Master Charge you can take care of that emergency item now, even though you don't have the money, and pay for it when you do. The same principle applies to buying things on sale or out of season when savings can be substantial. To meet the unexpected, Master Charge offers you a fine, extended payment plan.

End the confusion

So today, get rid of all those charge cards, all those monthly bills, all those monthly checks. Get rid of all that confusion. Trade it for the simple life. Master Charge. One monthly bill...one card good in more places in the U.S.A. than any other card. And a Master Charge card is free.

Manage to enjoy your money...with Master Charge.

Now that you're making it, MANAGE IT!

PESTICIDES:
USEFUL FRIENDS OR DEADLY ENEMIES?

The third in a series of articles

Some 3000 different insect pests compete with us for our food. Despite pesticides, they still manage to destroy one quarter of our crops each year. It's obvious that we must try to control these insects as best we can. If we didn't, we'd soon face food shortages and skyrocketing food prices—not to mention the threat of epidemics caused by insect-borne diseases.

This creates a terrible dilemma. Pesticides are poisonous. They have to be to kill. The problem is, how can we kill insects without harming our environment and ourselves? We are not yet in a crisis situation. But crises have a way of happening to those who are uninformed and ill-prepared. Pesticides are very much like drugs: they can do a great deal of good or a lot of damage, depending on how they're used.

Let's look at DDT. A persuasive case against it was made by the late Rachel Carson in her 1962 book, Silent Spring. More recent studies have described the "thin-eggshell syndrome" in certain bird eggs and attributed this condition, which hinders reproduction, to the buildup of DDT in the fish, worms and insects eaten by birds. It's also been charged that DDT depresses photosynthesis and cell reproduction at the very base of the ocean food chain. And claims have been made that residues of DDT in the human body are connected with liver cancer, leukemia and high blood pressure, among other ailments. Some of these charges against DDT may be justified; most have not yet been proven. There is conflicting evidence for virtually every claim.

DDT, whose initials stand for dichloro-diphenyl-trichloroethane, is one of a group of chemicals called chlorinated hydrocarbons. It was first widely used as an insecticide during World War II. Since then its effectiveness against the anopheles mosquito has helped wipe out malaria in countries whose populations total roughly 550 million people. The World Health Organization (WHO) says that DDT has cut India's malaria death rate from 750,000 a year to 1500.

On the other hand, DDT is a "hard" pesticide—one that tends to persist in the environment without breaking down. Traces of it have been found everywhere in the world. It can also become highly concentrated in bird, fish and animal tissues as it progresses up the food chain. Its value as an insecticide is also declining; more than 150 species of pests have developed resistance to DDT. A number of states in the U.S. have banned the chemical. The Department of Agriculture has taken a moderate position in the controversy, pointing out that there is no medical evidence of increased DDT levels in the human body nor any widespread danger to fish and birds. The Food and Drug Administration's monitoring program has also found the level of this and other pesticides in the American diet to be safe.

In the United States, at least, most uses of DDT are unnecessary. Yet it may be needed in special cases. In Maine, for example, spraying was discontinued and then begun again when spruce bud worms attacked forests. And in controlling insects that destroy cotton crops, there is no effective substitute for DDT.

As these instances have demonstrated, the pesticide issue is a complex one. On the one hand, it's claimed that DDT poses a threat to wildlife; some animals, fish and birds have been killed by it. But there's another side to the argument: one of the fastest ways to wipe out wildlife is to denude a forest, as the spruce bud worm can do if it's not controlled somehow.

DDT has been blamed specifically for the declining populations of some species of birds, including the bald eagle and peregrine falcon (or "duck hawk"). In truth, most of these birds started declining long before the introduction of pesticides, largely because our own encroachments into their territories destroyed their food sources and habitats. But pesticides may well be helping to speed their disappearance.

The harm to other kinds of wildlife may be exaggerated. Government data show that the harvest of game by licensed hunters and the catch of fish by licensed fishermen are both at an all-time high. One reason, of course, is that there are simply more hunters and fishermen. Still it's remarkable that, despite an increasing population, use of pesticides, great industrial growth and land development, all signs seem to indicate that most wildlife populations have remained relatively stable.

Even so, the case against DDT has been strong enough to cause a Federal action banning interstate sale of DDT for home, garden and many other uses. Appeals are now under way to allow it for certain industrial and agricultural uses. They should lead to a helpful airing of the problem.

According to most house paint ads, the quickest and easiest job is all you care about.

The Dutch Boy believes you care about something else: a paint job that will stay looking good a long time.

We won't kid you and say there's nothing it. Painting a house — even with Dutch Boy® Latex ouse Paint — takes planning and work.

If the surface is new, or if it was painted th latex house paint before, your surface prepara- n may involve very little beyond resetting nails, ttying nail holes, or removing chalk.

If your house was painted with oil paint fore, or you don't know if it was and can't find out, u should consult your Dutch Boy dealer and he l advise you as to what methods of surface prepa- ion may be in order.

Two things particularly contribute to the g-lastingness of Dutch Boy Latex House Paint. e is that since the paint "breathes," moisture n't get trapped under it. The other is that the rylic resin base of Dutch Boy Latex House Paint s the ability to lock in colors and consequently, colors last for the life of the job and the job ts longer.

If you've got shutters and trim that you nt to look glossy, although you want the rest of house flat, your Dutch Boy dealer can sell you flat and glossy colors designed to work together.

And the painting of gutters and drain pipes is no problem, either. Dutch Boy Latex House Paint clings to aluminum, galvanized and copper surfaces for the life of the paint job — no special primer is needed.

As to the quickness and ease of the paint- ing itself, Dutch Boy Latex House Paint actually flows on easier without dragging or sticking. It doesn't leave lap-marks when you stop and start, so that if you want, you can paint every weekend for the whole summer. Paint before and after the rain. And no matter what kind of a mess you make (and you can make a mess) it will wash right up with soap and water.

But we're never going to tell you that painting a house is so much fun you'll feel like run- ning out and doing it again. You have kids to raise and living to do and our main job is to help you forget about us for a very long time.

Outdoor Living ANY WAY YOU LIKE IT

By Noel Seney, Building and Outdoor Living Editor, and Staff

This summer, why not make the great outdoors even greater? Instead of putting up with an untamed sun or fishbowl yard, create your own summer style—be it sunny, shady, private or just plain easy. These 12 pages show you how to set about it.

1 It's a rugged play area by day, an entertainment center by night. The 8x10 deck and L-shaped landing also camouflage an old concrete-slab patio. The lath canopy admits just enough light to keep deck and living room sunny, while eliminating unpleasant glare. Deck and landing are made of redwood 2x4s. Cedar 4x4s, set in concrete, support the freestanding canopy (see detail 1A).

2 This open brick terrace is a popular dining spot, thanks to a corrugated plastic roof. The roof panels are pitched slightly to keep the area bright and dry, even in a summer shower. Redwood 4x4s support the roof; 2x10s form the fascia. Fiber glass panels stopped into 2x4s form a sidewall privacy screen. Open spaces above and below avoid a "wind-lift" problem.

3 With an L-shaped house, your outdoor area is already halfway done. These homeowners finished the job by building a paving-brick patio and enclosing it with a low brick wall and privacy fence. Oak-stained 2x8 beams span the patio to provide a feeling of protection. Beams are bolted to 2x2s, which in turn are attached to the eaves (see detail 3A). Brick wall is capped with stone.

4 An attractive privacy wall made o reed screening gives this garden terrace an intimate feeling. Two layes of screening, with supporting chicken wire between, are attached o a fence framework of 2x2s and 2x4s

The exposed aggregate "floor" is divided into 4x4 squares with redwood 2x4s as borders. The squares simplify pouring since you work only on a square at a time. Also, squares won't crack like slabs do.

1 This piano-shaped deck stretches the livability of an older house. The 30x16 deck extends off the family room; lattice doors at far end lead to the front yard.

Wrought-iron railing and curved 1x2s create an inviting seating area along the deck's edge. Four lattice-board panels, nine feet high, form a decorative transition between deck and house. A 1x8-inch skirt below the deck conceals the understructure. All the wood is stained with semi-transparent blue stain.

2 Shaped like a ship's bow, this tree-shaded 23x12 deck is perfect for parties. Built-in benches and planting beds add to the setting. A gas-fired grill, bolted to the deck, stands ready for quick cookouts.

Gravel bed below deck illustrates a good way to add texture and definition to a deck area, while eliminating weed and water problems. Scrape ground bare, spray with defoliant, spread a plastic sheet over area and cover with gravel.

3 Here's an intriguing deck that works from dawn to dusk. Twin sliding doors allow deck to work off living room for entertaining, off kitchen or dining. A counter-height window opens from the kitchen to the deck snack bar.

Over the 10x14 deck is an airy but sun-filtering canopy of 1x4s, spaced one inch apart. Junipers blend deck with the rolling yard grade, and hide the understructure of the deck.

1 A narrow lot doesn't rule out outdoor privacy, and this deck/patio proves it. A seven-foot-high fence provides seclusion for the living room deck and the garden patio off the dining room. Drapes can be left open to keep the indoors bright and visually spacious. For easier traffic flow, the deck was extended to keep the entryways on the same level. Decking is gray-stained Douglas fir; the fence is made from redwood 1x8s.

2 If the floor level of your house is too high above yard grade for an out-the-door patio, consider this solution. A catwalk at right leads from the living room to the upper deck; steps lead down to the main level, partially secluded by hedges and a privacy baffle. Both decks are built with a simple understructure (see detail 2A). This double deck and stair system looks sharp, and it also makes the house look lower.

3 This house-wide deck looks for all the world like a park pavilion. A sunken planting bed divides the deck into two areas so that it can simultaneously accommodate children at play and adults engaged in conversation.

Safety rails of 2x8s guard the open garden. At the far end of the deck, a raised walkway leads to the yard. The 2x6 fence slats provide a feeling of enclosure without subtracting from the light and airy look.

4 By linking the grassy area above with the patio below, this split-level deck attractively unifies a steeply sloped yard while creating an inviting area for entertaining and dining.

Concrete block retaining walls with quarry tile caps divide the deck from the yard. For informal gatherings, the deck edges double as benches. Floors are 2x4s laid on edge (see detail 4A). The spiral stairs lead to a sun deck atop a garage-turned-family room.

5 Evening entertaining is a special experience on this island deck. It's equipped with roof spotlights, placed high enough to avoid harsh glare. For your own deck, experiment with several types of lights, heights and angle positions before attaching lights permanently.

A catwalk connects this deck with the dining room. Built-in counters at left are big enough for a party-size buffet. Redwood 1x6s form deck floor; a bordered gravel bed surrounds the deck for easy mowing.

1 Twin shade trees make attractive centerpieces for this twin-diamond-shaped redwood bench. Redwood is a classic material for outdoor furniture. It's a breeze to work with, needs no maintenance and always looks good.

Deck and patio area are built flush with the interior floors, making it easy to roll out a serving cart, television or extra furniture. Surrounded by a privacy wall, the deck serves as another "room" of the house.

2 Seating is never a problem on this aggregate stone patio. It's enclosed by a sturdy redwood bench-fence. Planks of 2x6s make the seats; 1x6s and 1x8s form the backrest. A standard picnic table, stained to match the bench, is equipped with wheels for quick and easy moving. The concrete floor—with its combination of textures— is polished slightly to serve as a dance surface.

3 Make yourself comfortable outdoors with these lightweight lounge chas Each chair measures 30x30x26; standard-size cushions fit neatly o seat and backrest. The sides are made from ¾-inch exterior-grade plywood; seat and backrest are formed with spaced-out 1x2s. The armrests and facing are lengths o 1x4s, and the understructure is formed by sturdy 2x4s.

4 Indoors or out, these sugar-cub seats make themselves useful.

.move the cushion, and you have all-purpose end table complete th side rails. Cube is made from inch plywood faced with 1x4 dwood decorative banding. Each be measures 16x16x13.

Add splashes of bright colors to ur yard with these easy-to-build ddle seats and end table. Made of inch plywood, units measure x24x18 inches high. To make the ats, insert a length of canvas through a pre-sawn slot on the side; then slip a dowel through a sleeve sewn in the canvas to lock the seat in place. This system makes it easy to repair or change the canvas.

6 Courting a suntan can be fun with this handsome lounge bench. Pine 2x4s go the length of the bench; redwood 2x4s form the legs. Just for looks, a 1x4 is inlaid at the foot end. Countersunk screws covered by wood pegs hold the boards together.

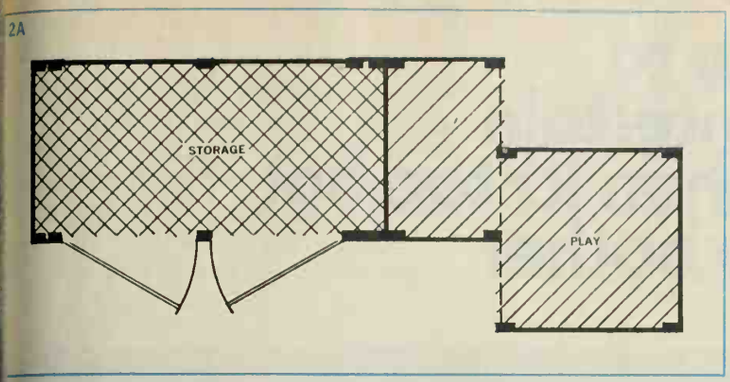
..and for the youngsters



1 Fun never stops in this multi-level playhouse. It has four separate levels linked by steps and ladders (see floor plan 1A). Children never tire of exploring the ins and outs of the various entries, decks and ladders. The playhouse is basically an eight-foot cube made from 11½ sheets of 4x8-foot ¾-inch plywood. Concrete blocks form steps and corner supports.

2 Both you and your youngsters have a stake in this sturdy unit. At one end, it's a double-entry playhouse (see detail 2A); at the other, it's a spacious storage compartment for your lawn and garden equipment. Padlocked doors on the storage section keep children away from dangerous tools and chemicals. The entire structure is made with texture 1-11 plywood, stained ash gray.

3 It looks like a mountain fire-watch tower, but this rugged structure is really a combination play loft and storage area. A ladder at the far end leads to the loft, which is sheltered by a plywood roof. Below, there's a lockable storage compartment for your tools and outdoor accessories. Support posts made from 4x4s are set into concrete; storage doors are 1x6s with redwood siding laid over.

How to entertain when it's too hot to bother

If summer parties leave you hot and harassed, follow our blueprint for a big and a small buffet. We've shown you how to make the best use of space and how to substitute creativity for cost. All party props can be made ahead and used over again.

On narrow porch (below) food and drink are well separated to avoid traffic tie-ups. Beverages are dispensed from a mobile cart at one end—a posh dinner from a slab door-table placed at the opposite end. Brilliantly papered buffet table (left) folds away for storage after the party. Centerpiece is a fish poacher brimming with beribboned strawflowers flanked by candle holders made from brioche pans. Pastoral look is emphasized with Zanzibar plates, Grand Colonial sterling. How-to information page 64.

picnic on the porch

Bright-eyed hanging lamps (left) float between porch uprights. Ours are made with hurricane glass, pie pans and wooden knobs. Put lamps up for the party or let them compete with the fireflies all summer long.

For mobile drink dispenser (right), bolt artist drawing boards to Junior's red wagon. Wheel it around outside or indoors—or unbolt it and use for a handy shelf unit.

Even big-as-Texas space needs proper handling. Below, we placed a drink and tidbit table and a portable refrigerator adjacent to the entry. For comfort and convenience, don't forget to plan electrical outlets in your outdoor living areas. Dotting the lower courtyard, folding chairs and tables covered with brilliant pinata print provide dining space for foursomes. Each table (right) features mirror tray mats, yarn-wrapped napkin rings and a gaudy flower candle. How-to information page 64.

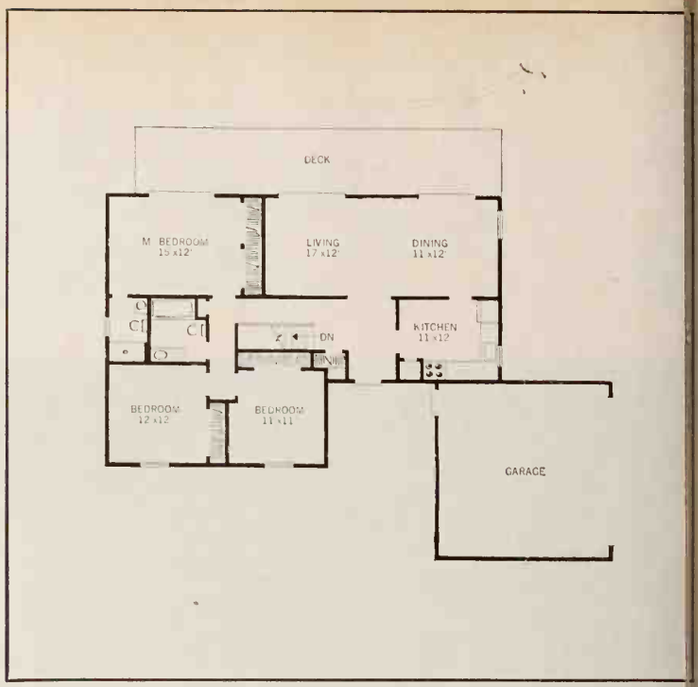
Pre-sited Houses

Where man and nature meet

By Stephen Mead, Architectural Editor



In the Echo Hill community of Amherst, Mass., you won't see any utility poles, crowded streets or rows of look-alike houses. Instead, you'll find a quiet residential area where houses are tucked away amidst trees and forest greenery. What makes Echo Hill a special place to live is the land-use concept of Planned Unit Development, or PUD. It begins with a master plan that divides the land into building sites and open spaces.

In site areas, houses are situated on small cul-de-sacs and eyebrow drives, away from traffic arteries. Houses are individually pre-sited to make the best use of local topography and the natural landscape. Each house is placed so that most of its windows face groves of trees, not other houses. Where necessary for privacy, artificial hills are created and trees planted. Utility wires go underground and wooded paths take the place of sidewalks. Tree-filled parkways shield houses from the main streets. In common areas, children can ro around trees and winding streams.

Good planning makes this kind of living practical—tod and anywhere. More of these new communities will come builders realize that people are willing to try the new id that provide a better environment for family living. Wha more, in a PUD community everyone benefits. Develope can build more houses per acre while still preserving a natu setting. Buyers get a better house with more privacy for l money. Children are provided with forest-like play are safe from traffic hazards. And even our environment gai because there's less concrete to blight the land and no wi to mar the sky.

As for the houses, they're planned special too. Like all i neighbors, this house has lots of windows and an open de at rear where a family can always enjoy the secluded wood view. But even if you build this house in a typical residential area, you'll get the extra privacy because of this home's rear-orientated living area.

The wood siding of this three-bedroom house sets a warm and rustic mood all by itself. A court-like entry, formed by an extended garage and bedroom, offers a cozy invitation to the spacious 1700-square-foot interior.

Stair placement makes the bedrooms a quiet zone, away from the activity areas; the bathrooms serve as a privacy buffer between parents' and children's bedrooms. An L-shaped kitchen leaves plenty of room to incorporate a built-in breakfast bar. Along the basement stairway, an open rail makes the hall area spacious and intriguing. ■

Play Up a Porch

Is your porch an underdeveloped area? Here are ways to turn it into an inviting oasis, whether it's enclosed for year-round living, semi-enclosed with screens or wide open to summery breezes.

Left: Bright color and strong pattern give an early 19th-century open porch a fresh contemporary look. Vinyl wallpaper in a Chippendale fretwork design covers the ceiling, and the same blue is repeated in canvas draperies tied back at the porch columns. Draperies can be fully or partially drawn for protection against the sun or showers. An oversized contemporary painting explodes more color onto the scene as do pillows covered in patchwork and needlepoint. With so much color play, the porch furniture was chosen in white.

Below left: A strong color scheme built around two primary colors—blue and yellow—provides the connecting link between this screened porch and the adjoining family room. A rich blue indoor-outdoor carpet flows from one area to another, giving the illusion of one large room. Accents of yellow appear in canvas cushions on the rattan chairs.

Opposite: This tropical oasis started with a roofed-over front entry in a U-shaped house. The mouth of the "U" was spanned by a fourth wall made of sliding and fixed screen panels. Inside shutters assure privacy for all rooms opening onto the porch, and a bamboo blind is drawn over the porch skylight. The brick floor, level with the outside terrace, and a bricked planter at one end of the porch add to the outdoor feeling. Some plants grow directly in garden soil; others in pots can be changed as climate dictates. Rattan and vinyl-strapped furniture fits the casual setting.

Left: On this screened porch, the psyche is soothed by the pleasant sound of burbling water. The indoor garden at one end contains a 36x48-inch pool with a recirculating fountain. Several hanging begonia pots carry the fresh green look ceilingward. The outside wall of the porch and ceiling area over the garden are screened. Nylon canvas roofs the balance of the porch. In winter, the canvas is removed to let sunlight flood the adjacent rooms, and the porch is closed off from the dining room with three folding glass doors.

Below left: Porch living is an everyday pleasure for this family of seven. From spring through early fall, their dining room is the screened-in area just off the kitchen and family room. Canvas awnings control glare without blocking out the view, as blinds might do. The pattern of the cool-looking cement floor is repeated by straw matting that defines eating and seating areas. White walls and ceiling give the porch a crisp, cool look. For contrast, the white wrought-iron furniture is upholstered in a spicy orange print that complements the green of nature.

Opposite: To enjoy year-round dining in a lush garden atmosphere, this family glassed in their screened porch. Lath was mounted on the rough exterior paneling of the porch to simulate latticework. Exposed aggregate flooring proved a happy choice for dining since crumbs don't show and it's easily swept clean. Budget idea: director's chairs with interchangeable canvas covers to simplify color switches.

barbecue ideas hot off the grill

Prime your menu repertoire with fresh ideas. You'll find spectacular entrees for special occasions, new ways to fix barbecue classics and extravagant-looking but economy-minded family suppers.

surprisingly easy

Surprise your friends with delicious barbecued main dishes done the easy way. Each of these recipes takes advantage of a convenience food to add special flavor.

1 SWEET-SOUR CORNISH HENS: A tiny bird apiece makes an elegant entree. Add a squeeze of lemon and canned tomatoes to bottled sweet-sour salad dressing for a rosy sauce to brush on the birds during the last 15 minutes they're on the grill. So that you can grill four of the birds at once, insert the spit rod through the Cornish hens crosswise, securing with holding forks and cord.

2 GUACAMOLE BURGERS: Start with a ground beef mixture seasoned with onion salt and worcestershire sauce, then add crushed corn chips. Grill burgers to the doneness your family prefers, then top with the easiest guacamole you've ever made. All you do is stir lemon juice, hot pepper sauce and chopped, seeded tomato into avocado dip you buy from the freezer case.

3 TACO-SEASONED ROUND STEAK: Uncertain of how to use Mexican seasonings? There are no guesses in this south-of-the-border steak recipe. Marinate a piece of round steak in a zesty blend of tequila and peppy taco seasoning mix to flavor the meat. If you wish, substitute dry sherry for tequila. Plank the steak, garnish with fresh or canned hot peppers and parsley and slice thin to serve five or six people.

perfect for parties

Next time you entertain outdoors, bedazzle your guests with one of these out-of-the-ordinary entrees.

1 CURRIED RIB ROAST WITH RICE STUFFING: Make a "paste" of curry, garlic, turmeric, pepper and parsley. Rub a boneless rolled rib roast inside and out with the seasonings; reroll with a well-seasoned rice mixture. Roast slowly till meat thermometer registers just below the degree of doneness you prefer. Retained heat will cause the temperature of the roast to rise slightly after you remove it from the grill.

2 APRICOT-STUFFED PORK CHOPS: These fruit-filled chops are easy, but extraordinary. You make them special by inserting apricot halves inside each chop and saucing with a colorful glaze. Make the glaze with catsup, onion, mustard and lemon juice. Stir in apricot syrup and you have a spicy yet fruity sauce that's perfect with pork.

3 NANI LUAU: Here's a feast that's a show-stopper. You cover a wok pan, then set it on its ring right in the hot coals to heat the arrangement of vegetables, fruits and orange-glazed ham.

(Recipes begin on page 86)

cost-cutting cuts

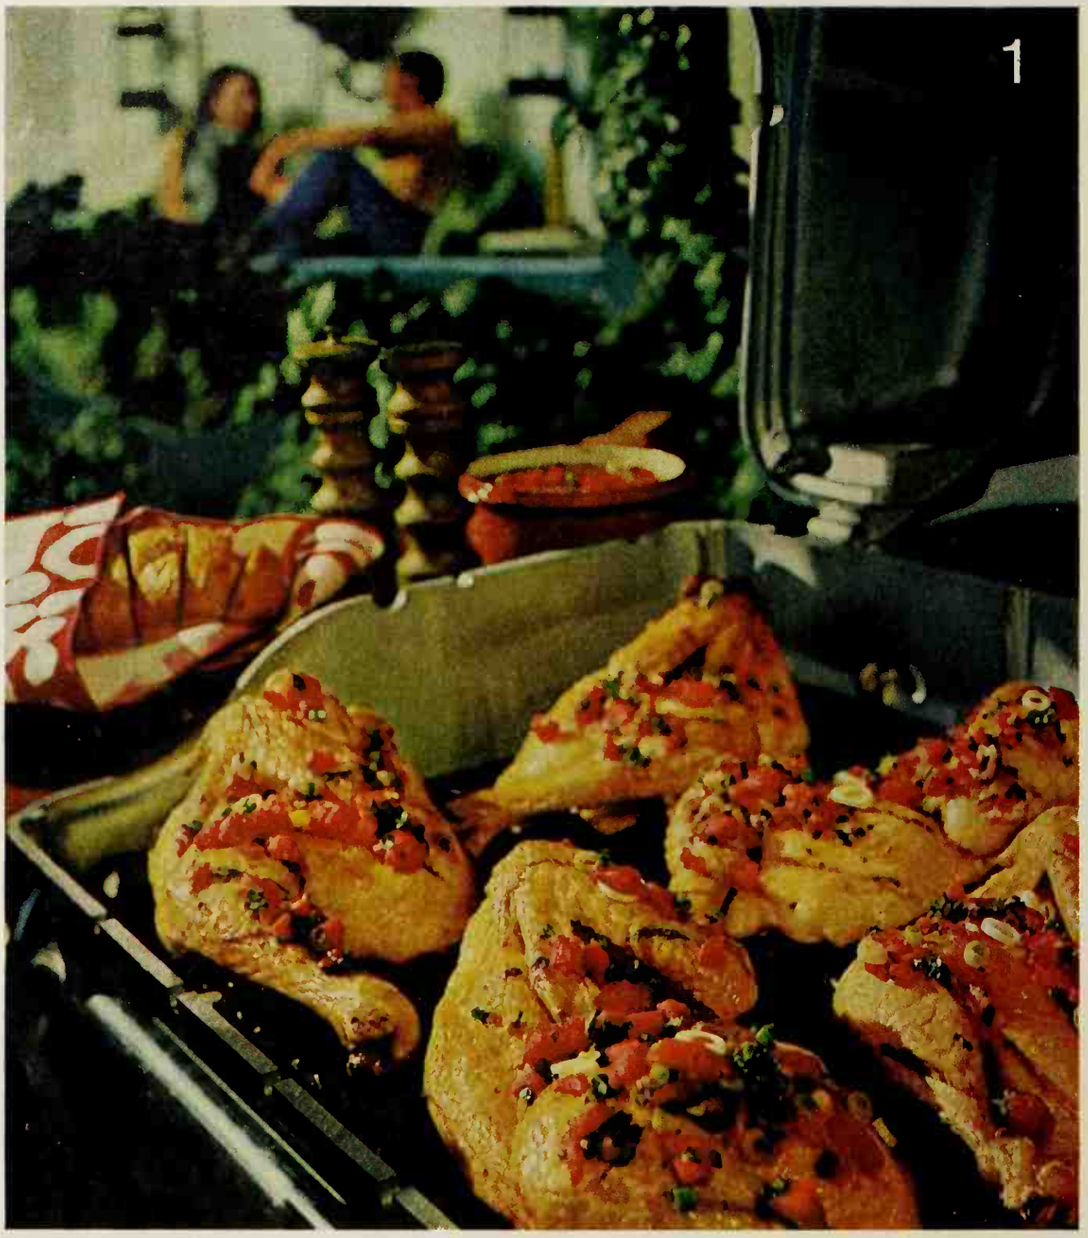
You don't have to splurge on expensive meat to make an outdoor meal special.

1 LEMON PEPPER PINWHEELS: Marinating strips of flank steak in a peppery sauce gives moistness and flavor to an otherwise less tender cut of meat. Wrap each thin steak strip around a cherry tomato, then skewer and grill. Serve with mushroom-green pepper kabobs that cook at the same time.

2 TERIYAKI TURKEY: You can afford to entertain the neighborhood when you grill a whole turkey cut in individual servings. The teriyaki sauce will appeal to all ages. While the coals are hot, roast a medley of squash, too: tiny crookneck, pattypan and chunks of zucchini.

3 MUSTARD-BRUSHED BOLOGNA KABOBS: Be an original outdoor chef and cube a chub of bologna. Alternate with pineapple chunks on skewers and brush with bologna's flavor friends: hot-style mustard and melted butter.

(Recipes begin on page 87)



unbeatable basics

You can't top the tantalizing aroma of these meats.

1 CHICKEN PROVENCALE: We've chosen a special garden blend of tomato, green onion, parsley and wine to brush generously on our grilled chicken pieces. Warm a loaf of garlic-buttered French or Italian bread at the same time and you will get rave reviews for this elegant feast.

2 HOT BARBECUE RIBS: Here's how you can avoid greasy fingers. Boil the ribs first in the kitchen, then bring them to the grill. They'll barbecue a scant 20 to 30 minutes while you brush them with the hot-hot sauce. At the same time, roast corn to serve with horseradish and herb butters.

3 ONION-STUFFED STEAK: With a very sharp knife, slash through the largest muscle of either porterhouse or sirloin and stuff steak with garlic-seasoned onions. Brush with dry red wine and soy; crown with sauteed mushrooms. Serve with foil-baked Cheese-topped Tomatoes.

Cookout franks

By Patricia Pollock, Associate Food Editor

Summer is official when you cook franks sizzling hot on the outdoor grill. Try the nation's number one link these three new ways: kabobbed with tiny whole potatoes and pepper pieces, wrapped in a pizza-burger cloak, and simmered with sour cream-sauced beans.

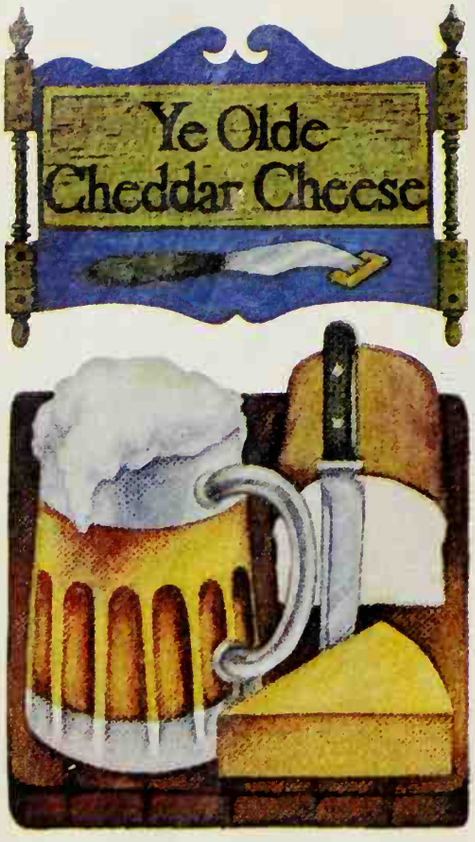
WHAT HAPPENS WHEN YOU OVERLOAD YOUR CAR? This eye-opening article points out the pitfalls of overstuffing the family car—such as mechanical problems, handling headaches, unexpected expense and unnecessary danger. Make this must reading—before you go anywhere.

When you buy some Cracker Barrel Brand Cheddar, you ought to know what you're getting.



Cheddar is one of the most tradition-filled cheeses ever to come out of England. The ploughman's lunch—served in the pubs—is just one of the prescribed uses. It consists of a cut of cheddar, a hunk of bread, a tankard of ale. Happily, most of the traditions surrounding cheddar fall in this casual category.

What occasions deserve cheddar in this country? Most connoisseurs agree that cheddar is an informal, "warm" cheese. Serve it with rye bread, sweet peppers and slices of salami after football games. Or cut in cubes in a big tossed salad. Or with pie or fruit after a quiet dinner. Because it is a full, robust cheese, it goes well with informal beverages—beer, wine, coffee and soft drinks. A good cheddar never forgets it originated in the hum-

Cheddar should not be sliced until just before serving ble cottages of midland England.

Like the English variety, Cracker Barrel Brand from Kraft attains, and maintains, a uniform high quality—from coast to coast. The flavor and texture are checked by an actual cheesemaster. (It is also classified into Sharp, Extra Sharp, Mellow and Mild to satisfy all regional tastes.)

Serve fine cheddar in a stick, block, half-moon or wheel, and let everyone cut his own. Set out crackers, ham cubes and pickles for do-it-yourself appetizers. Store cheddar in the refrigerator. A rule to remember is: Keep air out, moisture in. It's a hard cheese and keeps a long time. (One reason the Pilgrims liked it so much.) If some mold forms, just cut it off. It doesn't hurt the rest of the cheese at all. You can freeze it if you wrap it tightly in small quantities. Thaw it slowly, in the refrigerator, to retain its freshness and moistness.

Actually, the most important guideline to follow in serving Cracker Barrel is: do it. The good Englishwoman put it succinctly: "We don't talk about our cheddar, we eats it."

Now, for people who like whipped cream more than frosting, a frosting more like whipped cream.

So velvety smooth, so soft and swirly, New Betty Crocker Whipped Frosting Mix is more like whipped cream than any other frosting. So billowy and light it caresses your cake in two not-too sweet flavors (chocolate and vanilla). And it stays lusciously fresh without refrigeration...something whipped cream just can't do.

Tips for toting

When transporting food to a picnic or party, plan ahead:

- Prepare the food in dishes or pans that fit the carrier.
- To prevent foods from drying out, cover with foil, clear plastic wrap, or bag.
- Don't take a cake with a delicate frosting unless you have a carrier to keep it secure.
- Don't carry containers with liquid unless they are very tightly sealed because a quick stop could result in a spill. Check the containers for leaks.

Summer Dream Cakes.

Dream Whip's Dream Cake recipe gives extra height and the texture and moistness that make these cakes easy, delicious and fun.

Dream Whip® Topping Mix plus two extra eggs, added to your favorite cake mix, is the secret to these recipes. Finish your Summer Dream Cakes by adding strawberries and prepared Dream Whip.

It's that simple.

The cake you bake will be taller than a mix cake. And can be as beautiful and professional-looking as the ones you see here.

The Glazed Strawberry Dream Cake is easiest of all. It's a 13x9-inch cake made with the Dream Cake recipe, which adds height, and makes it sweet and moist. Decorate the top with fresh strawberry halves and a simple glaze. Serve with a side dish of Dream Whip. It's not only delicious, it's elegant.

The Tiered Strawberry Dream Cake speaks for itself. It's made with one 8-inch cake layer. The Dream Cake recipe makes each layer higher, so it's easier to slice into thirds. It also makes it so uncrumbly and manageable that building up layers of cake with Dream Whip and strawberries in between is easy and fun.

Perhaps the most exciting of all, is the Strawberry Surprise Dream Cake. It's the Dream Cake made in a tube pan. The height and moistness this recipe gives make this cake easy to tunnel. Fill the tunnel with prepared Dream Whip, strawberries and cake cubes. Then decorate the cake with Dream Whip. Your surprise is a secret. Your cake, irresistible.

Eating outdoors really is a picnic when you have the gear keep food and drink at the proper temperature. To help you : a fine table wherever your fancy leads you, here's a selec-ın of servers, vacuums and coolers. All are designed to travel ht and do the job right.

The insulated serving dishes (left) are triple convenient. You n bake or freeze food in the two-quart non-stick metal con-ner, then slip it into the insulated outer section for serving. clear dome cover helps keep the food hot or cold for indoor outdoor buffets.

A 2¼-quart covered pitcher with 14-ounce tumblers serves tdoor potables with style. The pitcher has a three-position ver that turns for free pouring, pouring with ice guard or ›sed. It has a drip-proof spout, is dishwasher safe and is ailable in avocado, gold, flame and blue.

This plastic insulated pitcher (left) makes itself useful at tdoor meals. Its 15-ounce capacity is ideal for gravy, cream, ad dressing, syrup or coffee for one or two. The server is uble-wall insulated and vacuum sealed.

To carry food with nary a spill, rely on the 1½-quart stack-le serving dishes with cover (rear). They are chip- and crack-istant and come clean in the dishwasher.

Colorful and stain-proof hot and cold mugs and 12x8-inch ack trays (right) can be used together or separately at any tdoor or indoor informal party.

Cheery color-matched picnic set includes insulated mugs, cuum bottles, picnic-table-size vinyl cloth and a heavy-gauge, nyl-insulated bag. On the left is a steel case holding two e-pint vacuum bottles. The design of the case prevents its lling around in the car. Adjustable carrying straps help make a good traveler, too.

Shown are two one-quart vacuums (front), one with a handle both container and cup, the other with a handle just on the p. The wide-mouth bottle (top center) is great for stews, ups, canned fruit, etc. A one-cup insulated vacuum (bottom ıter) has a sealed-in refrigerant in the lid. Put the lid in the ezer ahead of time, and food in the container will stay very ld and fresh. For those big gatherings a three-gallon liquid ntainer (top left) is the answer.

The 80-quart-capacity cooler (left) is big enough to handle 25-pound block of ice, one gallon of liquid, and enough food · a four-day camping trip. The 68-quart-size cooler (right) lds a 25-pound block of ice and has shelves.

;ing vacuum bottles and ice chests etal utensils and wire bottle brushes should never be inserted o a vacuum bottle because they can scratch or break the ıss liner. Plastic utensils, though, are safe for spooning food ›m the bottle without damage.

Avoid creating temperature extremes. Don't put ice cubes ectly into a bottle; pour the liquid in first.

Never eat or drink directly from the bottle unless it has an ıer safety shield. ■

It's too bad we have to call it meat loaf.

It is meat loaf, but it's the empress of all meat loafs. A tangy, juicy confection that will be the family's favorite for years to come.

One secret of its goodness is the choice B in B Mushrooms. They're the plump, brown kind, all broiled in butter and packed in their own butter-rich broth. Broth you add to your cooking... not "throw away" brine, like you get with other brands.

Try them. They come 3 ways: Crowns, Sliced or Chopped. Now, for the recipe.

Empress Meat Loaf with Mushroom Stuffing

2 cans (3 oz.) B in B Sliced Mushrooms	2-1/2 lbs. ground chuck
1/2 cup minced onion	2 eggs, slightly beaten
1/4 cup butter	1-1/2 teaspoons salt
4 cups soft bread crumbs	1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon powdered thyme	1/3 cup catsup
	1/3 cup mushroom broth
	1/4 cup minced parsley

Drain mushrooms, reserve broth. Sauté mushrooms and onion in butter until onion is transparent. Combine with bread crumbs, thyme, and parsley. Lightly mix together ground chuck, eggs, salt, pepper, catsup and mushroom broth. Pack half of meat mixture into 9¼ x 5½ x 2¾-inch loaf pan. Pack stuffing on top, then remainder of meat. Bake in 375° oven, 1 hour and 15 minutes. Then let stand for 15 minutes. Drain juices. Turn out onto serving plate. 8 servings.

Food from afar: Mexico

Gazpacho

Gazpacho (gaz-pah'-cho), a chilled tomato-based soup, o nated with Spanish peasants. The Mexicans adopted it added their special flair. Their version features chopped cuc bers, onion, tomatoes and garlic. The mixture is thinned with water or tomato juice, olive oil and lemon juice or vinegar. Mexicans add bread cubes instead of the layers of bread Spanish use. What results is a delightful and refreshing lic salad or colorful salad-like soup.

A blender is a nifty way to chop the vegetables—

6 very ripe tomatoes, peeled and chopped (3 cups)
1 medium cucumber, peeled, seeded and chopped (1 cup)
1 small onion, finely chopped (½ cup)
1 small green pepper, finely chopped (½ cup)
1 small clove garlic, minced
1½ cups tomato juice
¼ cup olive oil
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Few drops bottled hot pepper sauce

(To loosen the tomato skins for peeling: Insert fork into toma and plunge the tomato into boiling water for a few seconds. Or twirl tomato over a flame for just a moment.)

In a large mixing bowl, combine the chopped tomato, cucumber, onion, green pepper, garlic, tomato juice, olive oil, vinegar, salt, pepper and pepper sauce. Chill till serving time. Serve in bowls or individual icers. If desired, add an ice cube to each serving; top with toasted bread cubes. Makes 6 servings.

Outdoor appliances: handle with care

When summer calls, you'll be moving from house to porch or yard for picnics, parties and family meals. And with you will go some of your handiest portable electric appliances.

Appliances that are adaptable to outdoors include blender, electric fondue pot, waffle baker, coffeepot, electric hot tray and electric skillet.

Used safely, these appliances add comfort and convenience to your family's outdoor living. They can be hazardous, though, if you neglect safety precautions.

Electric cords are a frequent cause of accident and injury. Check cords carefully, particularly those on appliances which have not been used for several months. Also check extension cords which you'll probably need to get small appliances to out-of-the-way locations. Replace or repair cords that have brittle, cracked or worn insulation, no wires should be exposed. Also replace plugs which are cracked or bent. When appliance is not in use, avoid coiling cords too tightly or wrapping them around hot appliances.

If you frequently cook outdoors or on the porch, play it safe by having a special circuit and outlets installed close to the cooking area. This eliminates the need for extension cords.

Ground all appliances except those with open heating coils. This is particularly important for portable appliances that are used outside or in damp places.

To avoid mishaps when using portable appliances outdoors, observe these safety tips:

- Follow manufacturer's instructions for use, care, cleaning and maintenance of portable electric appliances.
- Disconnect appliances when not in use and before cleaning.
- Avoid excessive and unnecessary use of extension cords and multiple connections.
- Cool appliances before cleaning, covering or storing them.
- Arrange adequate lighting both in eating areas and for traffic patterns to and from the house.
- Keep heating appliances out of the reach of children and on sturdy, dry, level surfaces.
- Always make sure appliances are turned off before connecting or disconnecting.
- Disconnect equipment by grasping plug rather than cord.
- Don't overload circuits. Check wattage on appliances before plugging them into outlets; don't connect more than a total of 1600 watts on any one general-purpose circuit.
- Use appliances in dry, uncrowded areas.
- Take special precautions to avoid tipping appliances or containers containing hot liquids.
- Use an appliance only with the cord made for it. A 16-gauge cord is usually required for heating appliances to provide safe current flow.
- Put probe-like controls into the appliance before plugging it into the outlet.
- Have defective or questionable appliances checked and repaired before using them.
- Don't use electric appliances where they could fall into water while connected.
- When using appliances like toasters and some broilers, don't touch exposed heating elements with metal utensils while appliances are connected.
- Dry hands thoroughly before connecting or disconnecting electric equipment.
- Don't place cords where someone may trip over them or accidentally pull the cord and appliance from table or shelf.
- Before buying an appliance or cord, look for the Underwriters' Laboratory (UL) inspection tag, which means it has met safety standards.
- Select portable heating appliances with sturdy, firmly attached, heat-resistant handles and legs for safe, easy moving and handling.
- Use only grounded appliances in wet or damp places.
- Don't stretch extension cords over long distances.
- Don't use light sockets for heating appliances such as a hot tray, coffeepot, or skillet, which require more current than light outlets normally supply.
- Use special waterproof UL-labeled cords, plugs and sockets for connecting electric appliances in patio or yard.

Entertaining outdoors with portable appliances can be enjoyable and fun providing care is taken when using them. ■

Outdoor Grills: Which one for you?

By Janice Heckroth,
Appliances, Housewares, Management Editor

Photograph: Hopkins Buying information, page 109

Your choice is big as all outdoors: (front) a small portable beach charcoal grill; (right) a kettle-type charcoal grill with smoke cover; (rear) a twin-grill gas grill; (left) a covered electric grill.

Whether you're headed for the woods, the beach or your own backyard, there's a grill for you. It may be charcoal, gas or electric; it may be portable or stationary.

Which type you select will depend on where you plan to use it, the amount of money you want to invest and how much experience you have in barbecuing food outdoors.

Consider these key points when you shop for a grill:

Material: Grills are made of steel or cast aluminum; some have a porcelain enamel finish. The metal should be sturdy and heavy gauge.

Durability: Price is one clue to how sturdy a grill will be. Obviously, a small portable should not be expected to last as long as a larger and costlier unit. Be sure that the unit is evenly coated and not chipped so it will resist rust and deterioration whether it is used in the backyard or at the beach.

Economy: Whether to buy a charcoal, gas or electric grill depends on the source of fuel readily available to you. If you must run a main gas line to your home or add additional electrical wiring to the area where the grill is to be used, a charcoal grill may be your best value. However, if gas or electricity is readily available or there is only a minor cost for installation, then that may be your choice.

Size: This depends on how you plan to use the grill. If you cook out infrequently or only with small groups, there is no need to buy a large grill or a double grill.

Operation: Cooking on the grill should be fun and relaxing. So choose one that is easy to operate, maintain and keep clean. The location of the grill should be convenient to the kitchen and to the eating area. If the grill is not stationary, make sure it's easy to roll about, on the grass as well as on a patio. If you plan to take the grill to the beach and other spots, be sure it's easy to carry. A grill can be used outside in winter as well as summer so consider its movability and location with this in mind.

Appearance: The grill is a part of your backyard scene. Select one that is attractive and is likely to keep a like-new appearance for a long time.

Charcoal Grills: A wide range is available from the small beach grill to the large covered cooking kettle.

The amount of charcoal needed differs with the equipment and the food you plan to cook. A shallow fire is simple to control and fine for broiling steaks or chops. Large roasts require more charcoal, a larger fire and longer cooking time.

Coals are ready for cooking when they look ash-gray by day, and have a red glow after dark.

For steaks, burgers, kabobs and other meats you want to cook rapidly, use a relatively hot fire. A moderate fire is fine for larger pieces of meat such as roasts. For slow-cooking cuts such as pork chops and spareribs, use a slow fire.

An easy way to tell the heat of the fire is to hold your hand over the coals at the height the food will be cooking. Begin counting "one thousand one, one thousand two" and so on. If you can comfortably hold your hand only to "one thousand two," you have a relatively hot fire; "one thousand four," a moderate fire, and "one thousand six," a slow fire.

If you have an open-type unit and want to save the coals after cooking, use tongs to transfer the coals from the firebox to a bucket. Smother the fire by covering the bucket tightly. If your barbecue unit has a hood or is the kettle type, lower the hood or lid and close the dampers.

Also remove the hot grill top and keep the grill covered with wet paper towels or wet newspapers while you eat. Later a few swipes will clean the grill. For stubborn spots, use scouring or abrasive-type pads. Periodically clean out the firebox and wash with soap and water.

Gas Grills: These are self-contained appliances that cook primarily by radiated heat. The gas flame heats pumice rock "coals" which then heat and cook the food. Fat drips onto these coals and flares or smokes to produce a barbecued appearance and flavor. For stronger smoked flavor, sprinkle hickory chips over the coals.

The main difference between a charcoal grill and a gas grill is that the charcoal is consumed in use and the temperature of the coals may vary during the cooking time.

A gas grill maintains the same temperature as long as the gas burner is operating at a particular setting. Read the manufacturer's instructions before using a gas grill.

Preheating is necessary because briquets must radiate heat to cook the food. Leave the grill open and preheat at high setting for five to 15 minutes, depending on the food to be cooked.

Using a gas grill is very simple, but some factors can affect cooking and cooking time: location of the grill, whether the cover is open or closed, air temperature, wind velocity and direction, temperature of food at start of cooking, size and shape of meat, personal preference of doneness. Cooking with the grill cover open or closed is also a matter of preference. There is a greater concentration of heat and smoke if the cover is closed. In general, the cover should be closed for cooking large cuts of meat such as hams, roasts or turkeys.

Expect and encourage a moderate amount of flaring and smoking when cooking on a gas grill. Smoke provides flavor, and flaring gives a rich brown color. If excessive flaring occurs, move the food to another location on the grill or sprinkle a small amount of water on the briquets.

Common causes of excessive flaring, resulting in burned food are: preheating too long, preheating at too high a setting, high fat content of food, or briquets that are coated with drippings.

After using the grill, leave the burner on at medium setting, lower the cover and let food particles cook off for about 15 minutes. Then take a wire brush and brush off the grid. Periodically the grid will need to be removed for washing in sudsy water.

The briquets are self-cleaning; food particles and grease will burn off while the grid is being "burned off." It's best to turn the briquets every few weeks so that all surfaces are kept clean.

Occasionally, brush the burner with a stiff brush to remove any cooked-on grime. Open any clogged ports with a wire. Take out all interior parts, brush out bottom to remove any food ash, and wash interior and exterior of grill with hot sudsy water. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

Electric Grills: They are also self-contained appliances that can be used for grilling, baking or roasting depending on the type of grill purchased.

Some electric grills have coils that heat briquets which then cook the food. Others use no briquets but heat directly from the coils.

Most electric grills are portable; however, they can be permanently installed.

Like the gas grill, an electric grill offers the convenience of easily controlled heat. Read the manufacturer's instructions before using an electric grill.

Preheating is necessary especially when the unit uses briquets.

Follow the manufacturer's directions and the information given under gas grill for cooking variables and using the smoke hood.

There may be some flaring but the cause, such as fat drippings, will soon burn off. Because electric coils clean themselves during the cooking process there will be no buildup of grease on the coils. However, to clean the briquets, close the hood, open the vents and set the temperature on high until no more smoke comes out of the vents. ■

Calorie counting on your vacation

When you embark on vacation this year, will your diet go with you or stay at home? If you're a wise eater and follow a good exercise program while you're "relaxing," you might even return home slimmer! Clip these smart tips to the inside of your luggage, traveling kit, or picnic basket.

Cooking in

- When you pack a lunch, limit sandwiches to one or even a half. Use thinly sliced bread. Try cucumber-lettuce-tomato, or one slice of meat in your sandwich. Let the others choose high-calorie dressings and spreads—you stick to prepared mustard or horseradish.
- Carry a fruit dessert and any packable raw vegetables such as lettuce wedges, celery, carrot and green pepper sticks, and cauliflower buds.
- Instead of drinking less milk to cut calories, drink milks lower in calories than whole milk, such as skim, reconstituted nonfat dry milk, and buttermilk (only 90 calories per 8-ounce glass).
- Watch your consumption of alcoholic beverages, too.
- Drink unsweetened fruit juices between meals and as appetizers when others are sipping creamed soups and calorie-packed cocktails.

Eating out

- Begin your day with a nutritious breakfast. It cuts down on snacking the rest of the day. Also, you usually work off breakfast calories during your morning activities.
- Limit yourself to only one starchy food per meal. Sacrifice the roll basket if you intend to order a baked potato (sans sour cream, of course).
- If you order a potato, be sure it's baked (90 calories) instead of French fried (ten fries, 155 calories).
- Order broiled chicken (three-ounce serving is 185 calories) instead of fried chicken (same amount is 215 to 2[illegible] calories).
- Stay away from gravies and sauces, pastries and nuts.
- Try lemon juice, vinegar, or tomato juice on salads instead of creamy salad dressings, mayonnaise, and oil.
- Entrees of broiled, baked or roasted meat, fish, or poultry are best. In these methods of cooking, no fat is added and the meat fats drop to the bottom of the cooking pan.
- Choose vegetables without cream sauces or butter.
- If substitutions are allowed in the restaurant, ask for cottage cheese and fresh fruit salad instead of asparagus hollandaise, or ask for a plain vegetable instead of the potato.
- Use your knife and fork to trim calories. Cut all fat from meat. Remove skin and bread coating from fried and batter-dipped foods. Push gravies, rich sauces, toppings, and dressings aside. You'll want to do all your trimming discreetly, of course.
- If you can't resist something sweet after dinner, you might order plain ice cream, sherbet, or gelatin.

Burning up calories

Put out more energy than you take in. Park a distance from your destination and walk (to use 140 calories per hour). If you're in a camping area, participate in the many activities available.

What the new oil-can markings mean

The type of oil you put into your erankease is just as im portant to engine performanee and life as the grade of oi

Those mysterious eode letters on an oil eontainer hav long contributed to the confusion about whieh oil to use. T make your ehoice easier, the Ameriean Petroleum Institut (API), the Soeiety of Automotive Engineers (SAE) and th Ameriean Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM) hav developed a simplified labeling system. Here's a breakdow of the new designations for oils intended for use in interna eombustion engines:

SAE Letter Designation	API Engine Service Description	ASTM Engine Oil Description
SD	1968 Gasoline Engine Warranty Service	Meets the require ments of all auto mobiles manufac tured since 196
SC	1964 Gasoline Engine Warranty Service	Meets the require ments of all auto mobiles manufac tured from 196 thru 1967
SB	Minimum-Duty Engine Service	Contains som antioxidant an anti-rust addi tives; suitable fo some small 4 cycle engines
SA	Utility Gasoline and Diesel Engine Service	No additives; suit able for use a a general-purpos shop lubricant.

Four other letter designations—CA, CB, CC and CD—may appear on the container, but these are of interest only to owners of diesel engines.

Here's how to interpret a typieal label or can top:

A.P.I. SD CC S.A.E. 10 w 30

"SD" speeifies that the oil meets the API requirements for automobiles manufactured from 1968 to the present. "CC" means that the oil will also meet the requirements of eertain diesel engines. "10 w 30" indicates that the oil is a multiple viseosity grade meeting SAE standards.

Type SD oil ean be used in all ear engines. If your ear is a 1968 model or newer, you must use type SD to keep the warranty valid. Cars made before 1968 ean also use SC oils. You're better off, though, using SD oil, especially if your ear is subject to lots of short-trip, low-speed driving. And, if your ear is an oil-burner, you may as well use the SC. Types SB and SA are not recommended for automotive use. ■

Chevrolet shows you Impala's bare essentials.

Because it's the only car in its field with all these essentials to bare.

1. Turbo-Fire 350-cubic-inch V8 runs efficiently on no-lead, low-lead or regular gas.

2. New power ventilation automatically draws in outside air through front louvers and expels old air through rear deck louvers, even with car at a standstill.

3. New windshield wipers that hide away under the hood are longer (18"), with new stronger linkage design for larger "sweep" area.

4. Smoother laminated windshield that's 10% bigger for improved visibility.

5. Steering column lock follows the principle that it's difficult to steal what you can't steer. Remove the ignition key; steering wheel locks.

6. New double panel roof consists of not one but two strong steel roofs, the inner one acoustically engineered with sound deadening perforations.

7. Seat construction uses flat S springs found in fine furniture, covered with a full molded foam cushion and rich upholstery.

8. Cargo-guard luggage barrier is a steel bulkhead between back seat and trunk.

9. Steel inner fenders positioned at each wheel help protect outer fenders from salt, water, tar, thrown stones, etc.

10. Magic-Mirror acrylic lacquer finish is superior to enamel in many ways. It's tougher, less porous. Which means it's harder to stain, easier to restore.

11. Delco Eye battery has sealed side terminals to prevent corrosion build up, plus the magic eye that lets you know when to add fluid.

12. New standard power disc/drum brake system features discs in front; finned brake drums in rear for more rapid heat dissipation. Dual master cylinder, warning light and corrosion-resistant brakelines, too.

13. Engine cushioning, made of strong vibration-absorbent butyl rubber, helps isolate power team impulses from frame and body.

14. New inside hood release allows you to remain in the driver's seat while you unlock the hood.

15. New body sills are open and thus less likely to trap rust-causing moisture.

16. Side-guard beams like those along the side of a highway are built into the doors for added protection.

17. New outside door handles are mounted flush with door and can be operated with one finger.

18. New perimeter frame is longer to accommodate a longer, smoother riding 121.5-inch wheelbase.

19. New suspension system with computer-selected Full Coil springs for a smoother, quieter ride and improved handling.

20. New fuel tank has evaporation control system to help fight air pollution.

21. Advanced body mounting system involves positioning thick rubber cushions at all strategic points along frame to help minimize road noise and vibration.

There are easily a hundred more reasons why Impala is more car. More car, with more meaningful improvements.

Your dollar wants to buy the most car value.

That's the '71 Impala. The most Impala ever built.

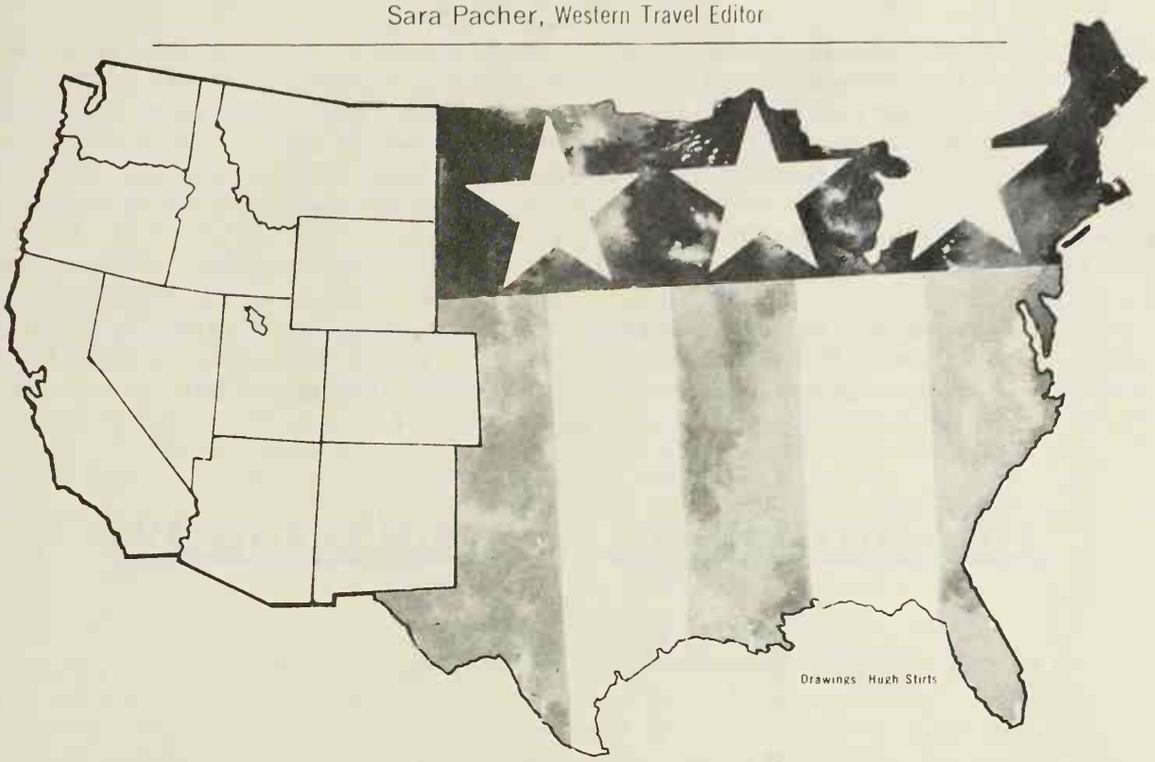
the best short vacations in the west

Sara Pacher, Western Travel Editor



This year more Americans will take mini-vacations than ever before—partly because of the new plan for moving certain national holidays to Friday or Monday. Three days isn't enough time for a family to explore places like those featured in Better Homes and Gardens last month: the North Cascades or Eastern Sierra, for example. But the West boasts an abundance of other choice spots ideally suited to short vacations. Here are some that rank among the best.

Colorado Mining Tour

It took weeks to complete this loop trip out of Denver when the mine camps were booming. Today you can recapture some of that tumultuous past in a weekend. Though the roads have changed, the awesome, ice-carved Colorado Rockies are still the same.

Take U.S. 6 west out of Denver, making a side trip on Highway 119 to Central City, located in an area that produced over 80 million dollars in silver and gold and brought 40,000 people to town during the last half of the century.

By the early 1900s, Central City's population had dropped to 400, but it was too tough and colorful to die. In 1932, Lillian Gish opened the first season of the highly successful Central City Opera and Drama Festival in the restored Opera House, where Sarah Bernhardt and Edwin Booth had once performed. Each year, the festival's opening day is celebrated with a lively, old-fashioned, gold-camp-style play.

There are art museums, shops and taverns, as well as Colorado's first drugstore and high school. Inside the old Teller House, you can still see the painting, "Face on the Bar Room Floor," which is appropriately named. Jeep trips will take you to the mining area, including the Glory Hole, a 300-foot-deep open pit mine.

Retrace your route to Highway 6 and Idaho Springs, where you'll find Radium Hot Springs, long used by the Indians for their curative powers. Pan for gold in Chicago Creek, where the metal was first discovered in Colorado, and take a free tour of the Edgar Mine, an experimental mine of the Colorado School of Mines.

Your next stop will be quiet, lovely Georgetown, with its brightly painted houses and iron lacework. Its silver-boom population of 10,000 has shrunk to 500, but the "Silver Queen" has much to offer, including five museums.

It's just a short drive from Georgetown to several of the well-known ski resorts of the Loveland Pass area of the Front range, the site chosen for the 1976 Winter Olympics.

Two miles west of Georgetown, you pass through Silver Plume, named for the plume-shaped silver deposits that were mined here. High on a mountain between the two towns, you can see the remains of the Georgetown Loop, a railroad engineering marvel that brought the silver down from the mines.

Climbing over 11,992-foot Loveland Pass and crossing the Continental Divide, you reach Dillon, a town completely moved to higher ground when the Dillon reservoir was built. Its modern buildings and alpine chalets are in sharp contrast to the 19th-century charm of Breckenridge, a popular ski resort 14 miles away.

Over Hoosier Pass, you'll go through the gold camp of Alma, where some mines are still being worked, and on to Fairplay, at the junction of Highway 9 and U.S. 285. There is a monument here to a burro named Prunes, who worked in the mines for many years. From Fairplay, U.S. 285 will take you over Kenosha Pass and back to Denver.

Mission Bay

San Diego's Mission Bay, a huge recreation complex dredged from a former marshland, offers an astonishing variety of family fun.

Boating is a major pastime. There are eight marinas where you can rent a boat or launch your own. Sail Bay is set aside just for sailboats, while the eastern portion of the park is reserved for powerboats and water skiers.

Fishermen find good shore fishing along miles of sloping, sandy beaches, and Quinalt Bay has sport fishing boats for deep-sea charters, including overnight excursions.

Seven coves provide safe swimming areas with lifeguards. Most of the coves are adjacent to grassy lawns with restrooms, dressing areas, snack bars, picnic tables and fire rings for outdoor cooking.

You can spend a whole day at Sea World, one of the largest marine-life centers in the world. One admission price ($3.50 for adults, $2.50 for ages 13 to 17 and $1.25 for children five to 12) covers aquarium and sea life exhibits and all major shows, including performances by trained dolphins, killer whales, seals and penguins. The sky tower at Sea World gives you a great view of the whole area.

There are many excellent hotels, resorts, restaurants and night spots. To plan your stay, visit the Tourist Information Center for Mission Bay off Highway 5 (use the East Mission Bay Drive exit), or write to Mission Bay Leasees Association, 2688 East Mission Bay Drive, San Diego, Calif. 92109.

The San Diego Backcountry

When the people around San Diego talk about going to "the backcountry," they are referring to a 4258-square-mile area of cool mountains and hot desert less than an hour's drive from the city. You can get a taste of the area in a day, but you'll find it's well worth a weekend or more.

Take Interstate 8 out of the city to the Sunrise Highway (S1), which takes you through the oak, pine, cedar and manzanita forests of the Laguna Mountains to the quaint apple-growing community of Julian. Just outside of town, there's a hundred-mile view of the desert landscape below.

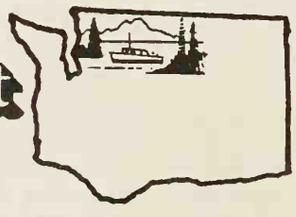
Over 15 million dollars in gold came from this area in the 1870s, and the Julian Memorial Museum is dedicated to the history of those boom days. Today the riches of the region are delicious jams, jellies, honey and cider.

From Julian, according to the time you spend, you have a wide choice of routes. One of the best is the steep Banner Grade (Highway 78) down to Borrego Springs, an off-the-beaten-path desert resort and focal point for exploring the unspoiled regions of Anza-Borrego, the nation's second-largest state park. If you have a jeep, you can explore the 600 miles of trails that wind through the rugged terrain, or take a self-guided drive to more accessible areas. There's plenty to see. Stop by the State Park Headquarters at Borrego Palm Canyon campground, two miles west of Borrego Springs, for detailed information and maps.

During summer months, you'll be more comfortable in the mountain area. You can travel north from Julian on Highway 76 to the Palomar Observatory for a look at the world's largest telescope. An exhibit hall contains illuminated photographs, some in color, of the nebulae, galaxies and constellations. Both the dome gallery and exhibit hall are open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. There is no admission charge.

From the observatory, route 76 will bring you to Pala (an Indian community with a replica of the mission San Antonio de Pala) and back to the coast. Or you can take U.S. 395 back to San Diego, passing through Escondido and a countryside of citrus groves, avocado orchards and vineyards.

Skagit Tours



Make a reservation with Seattle City Light for a tour of the Skagit River hydroelectric project. It will get you out into some rugged mountain scenery in one of the nation's most spectacular unspoiled wilderness areas.

This tour, popular since 1928, costs $4; $2 for children under three. The three lakes and dams of the project are in a territory of jagged peaks, abrupt ridges, canyons carved to dizzying depths, awe-inspiring rock slides and waterfalls cascading thousands of feet from perpetual snowfields.

Tours start at Newhalem, Washington, about 130 miles northeast of Seattle. If you can't provide your own transportation, there is a chartered bus service from Seattle at an additional $5.50 per person. The excursion takes about 5½ hours.

You'll visit the gorge powerhouse and take a colorful walk through the rock gardens to Ladder Creek Falls. A seven-mile bus ride will take you along the Skagit River Canyon, past the high Gorge Dam to Diablo Dam. There you'll transfer to an inclined railway, and ride 600 feet up the mountain to the level of Diablo Lake. Another short walk, and you embark on a four-and-a-half-mile boat trip to Ross Dam, where you'll inspect the powerhouse, then return to Newhalem for a logging-camp-style dinner with as many seconds as you can eat.

Once the tour is over, you can stay in some of the small inns and resorts in the area to enjoy the scenery and excellent fishing. The Skagit River is famous for its winter steelhead fishing, and most of the region's streams provide good cutthroat catches.

For reservations and information, contact Skagit Tours, City Light Building, 1015 Third Avenue, Seattle, Washington 98104.

The Flagstaff Area

Flagstaff, in cool highlands 141 miles north of Phoenix, offers a summer festival of concerts, art exhibits, ballet, theater, chamber music, film classics and a Navajo crafts show. The three-day, All-Indian Pow-Wow, held early in July, brings thousands of Indians from more than ten western tribes for the nation's oldest and biggest ceremonial festival. Camping in the surrounding pine forests, they compete in rodeo events, hold colorful parades and barter their handicrafts. Tickets are on a first-come, first-served basis. You can get them from the Flagstaff Chamber of Commerce.

The Lowell Observatory, where the planet Pluto was first discovered in 1930, is also in Flagstaff. There are free daily tours, and evening programs every other Friday night.

A few miles north of Flagstaff on Highway 180, two free museums—the Museum of Northern Arizona and the Pioneer Historical Museum—will give you considerable information on the anthropology, geology and biology of the area, as well as on early Arizona history. Fourteen miles up the same road, the Arizona Snow Bowl keeps its chair lift running both winter and summer. From the top, you can see five states and Mexico.

It's only 17 miles north on Highway 89 to Sunset Crater National Monument, a volcano which erupted in 1064, leaving sunset-colored mineral deposits. The eruption scattered volcanic ash over 800 square miles, turning the area into great potential farmland, which attracted Indians from many tribes. You can see the remains of this prehistoric land rush in the Indian ruins of nearby Wupatki National Monument.

Other prehistoric dwellings can be seen in Walnut Canyon National Monument ten miles east of Flagstaff on Highway 66.

Within an hour's drive of the city, you can also visit the ghost town of Jerome, the Indian ruins of Tuzigoot, Montezuma Castle, Montezuma Well, and Meteor Crater, used as a training ground for NASA astronauts. And Grand Canyon is just 79 miles away.

San Juan Bautista

Time almost seems to have stopped in this pleasant village 95 miles south of San Francisco. Its original plaza looks much as it did when Spanish soldiers paraded here.

Facing the plaza is California's largest mission, where masses have been held daily since it opened in 1812. It contains a museum of mission history, graced by a colorful, old-fashioned flower garden. The dirt road along one wall of the cemetery is a portion of the original El Camino Real, California's first road connecting the missions from San Diego to San Francisco.

The town was one of the main stage stops between San Francisco and Los Angeles, and the Plaza Hotel, once a barracks for Spanish soldiers, became a famous landmark. Its gambling room and bar have been restored as part of the San Juan Bautista State Historic Park. You can still see bullet holes from frontier days.

Another historic building in the park is the Castro-Breen House. Originally the headquarters of General Castro, Mexican prefect of the district, it was the home for many years of the Breen family, survivors of the Donner Party tragedy. A self-guided tour is 25¢; children under 18 are admitted free. It is one of the state's finest examples of Monterey-Colonial-style architecture, and contains artifacts representative of both its Mexican and early American history.

You can also visit an old livery stable, the Zanatta house and cottage, a jail, log cabin, an orchard and several gardens. Some of the town's shops, galleries and restaurants are housed in buildings over 100 years old.

It's a sleepy place most of the time, but in July, thousands of people come to town for the annual rodeo—and a wild weekend.

Santa Catalina Island

Just getting to this relaxing island 22 miles off the California coast is an adventure. The two-hour boat trip aboard the 2200-passenger Big Lady steamship begins at Catalina Terminal Building in San Pedro. It costs $8.50 for adults and $4.25 for children. Other, smaller boats operate from the San Pedro, Long Beach and Newport Beach docks. On the way, you'll probably see flying fish and maybe a spouting whale.

Or, you can take a 15-minute flight on one of the seaplanes operating out of San Pedro and Long Beach airport, or a jet from the L.A. International airport.

The island's only city, Avalon, was a 1930s "in" spot for the wealthy. You can stay here today at prices ranging from $8 to $35 per night, with cheaper weekly rates.

A glass-bottom boat takes you on a 40-minute ride over parts of the California State Fishing Preserve, where you'll see a wide variety of sea life, including bright orange Garibaldi fish and moray eels. Beyond the preserve, you can fish for halibut, marlin, swordfish, barracuda, white sea bass and yellowtail.

Rent a bike or small car, or take a motor tour of the scenic backcountry of this rugged, fascinating island. You'll find a working ranch that raises purebred Arabian horses—and excellent surfing on the southern shores. Some areas look like South Sea isles, others look Mediterranean.

You also can play golf and tennis, ride, hike, explore caves, swim in the cool Pacific and—best of all—lie on the sandy beaches and get a Southern California tan.

Oregon's Shakespearean Festival

Ashland, just 15 miles north of the Oregon-California border on Interstate 5, is deservedly famous for its well-produced Shakespearean plays. From June 19 through September 12, you'll have your choice of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Macbeth," "Much Ado About Nothing," and "Henry IV, Part One." Make your reservations early. Last season the audiences filled the outdoor Elizabethan Theatre, patterned after London's 16th-century Fortune Theatre, and the new indoor Angus Bowmer Theatre. Tickets cost from $2 to $5. Tickets for children under 12 are half-price in all sections, and if you alert the box office in advance, they will arrange for a baby-sitter.

A nightly Tudor Fair, with strolling musicians, singers and dancers-on-the-green, is held in the softly illuminated theater gardens before each performance. For a nominal charge, you can take a two-hour tour of the backstage areas every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings.

At noon on Wednesdays and Saturdays during July and August, free, informal talks on the current plays are held behind the theaters in Lithia Park. Bring a picnic lunch if you like.

Shakespeare is just one of this region's attractions. The Oregon Museum of Natural History features excellent exhibits of Southern Oregon's plants and animals.

In winter, there's fine skiing at Mt. Ashland, a resort 18 miles from downtown, which gives you a 20 percent ski package discount on tickets to Ashland's spring season of contemporary plays (held from March to May in the indoor theater).

In August, the Peter Britt Music and Art Festival is held in Jacksonville, a well-preserved frontier town 15 miles from Ashland.

There are also many possibilities for swimming, hiking, picnicking and fishing throughout the vast area surrounding Ashland. Crater Lake to the northeast and the Oregon Caves National Monument to the west are each about a two-hour drive away.

Wine Country Touring

The scenery is beautiful, the drives are short and pleasant, and the wines you taste are excellent. Nowhere in the world is the climate more dependable for growing uniformly fine wine grapes than in California.

You can tour many of Napa Valley's wineries, sampling wines in hospitable tasting rooms and buying your favorites right from the source. Be sure to take along a picnic, as some of the wineries have gardens, picnic grounds and barbecues on the premises. (It's wise to make a reservation for these facilities in advance.) The California Wine Institute at 717 Market Street, San Francisco, will give you a wealth of information on the many wineries in the area.

It's a historic tour, too, for many of the wineries have been operating for over a century. Near the wonderful old town of Sonoma, where a delightful "vintage festival" is held in September, Col. Haraszthy, a Hungarian generally recognized as the father of viticulture, established his Haraszthy Cellars-Buena Vista Winery in 1857. It is now a State Historical Landmark.

The Charles Krug Winery is the oldest in Napa County, established in 1858 by a Prussian and operated for the last 27 years by the Mondavi family.

Schramsberg, a winery often visited by Robert Louis Stevenson in the 1860s when he was writing Silverado Squatters, is on route 29 near St. Helena. In the book, he recalled his trips to the wineries of the area as ". . . making pleasant music for the mind." Writer Ambrose Bierce was also a guest here.

Napa Valley is but one of nine wine-growing districts in California. Most of the areas offer wine tours, or at least a peek at the wine making.

Houseboating The Delta

There are more than one thousand miles of navigable waterways in the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta. Houseboating on them is today's answer to childhood yearnings for following Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn down the Mississippi.

You can rent by the day, weekend or week. The best boats have two engines, giving you added insurance against failure from fouled spark plugs or other such mishaps. All boats have showers, heads, complete galleys and plenty of storage and hanging space. Most have refrigerators. Rental costs average about $350 per week for four people.

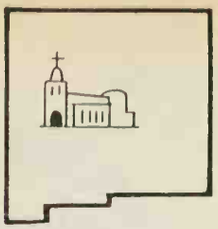
Some houseboats are available with a second-story pilot house, which makes the trip more interesting, since you can see over most of the levees along the way from your high vantage point.

Navigation and piloting are simple. Charts are good, and the main waterways are well marked. Tides are the main thing you have to consider when you anchor overnight—if you don't want to be stranded in shallow water for 12 hours until the next tide comes in. By measuring the depth (some boats have electronic depth finders), you can judge whether you're anchoring in a good spot.

Reserve well in advance for the summer months. Off-season (after Labor Day through June 15th) is less crowded and cheaper.

Swimming and sunning are the main activities on houseboat trips. Don't forget games, books, a portable radio or cassette player, sun-tan lotion, good food—and fishing tackle.

New Mexico Mission Tour



Franeisean Fathers helped to colonize the area now known as New Mexieo, building missions whieh ranked among the most interesting religious structures in the world. However, in 1680, the Indians rose in a rebellion that drove the Spaniards baek south, and many of the great missions, a sign of Spanish domination, were destroyed.

A 193-mile drive from Albuquerque will bring you to some of these stark and majestie ruins—and to a mission that was rebuilt when the Spanish made their peaeeful reeonquest 18 years later.

Take Highway 66 or I-40 east out of Albuquerque and turn south on N.M. 10-14 to Quarai State Monument. This is one of the "eities that died from fear," for it was abandoned before the rebellion, and no one knows exaetly why. Finished in 1639, it had four-foot-thiek red sandstone walls that rose about 40 feet. The pueblo surrounding the ehureh and eonvent was as high as three stories, and was designed around several large, enelosed plazas.

Further south on N.M. 10, the impressive gray limestone ruins of Gran Quivira National Monument sit in desolation on a windswept hill overlooking the plains. There are actually two missions here. The first, San Isidro, was built in 1629, and the second, which was to have been larger, was completed in 1660.

Both time and people have been cruel to the San Gregorio ruins at Abo, said to have eontained the most beautifully earved beams in the southwest. (Retraee your route north on 10 and go west on Highway 60.) It, too, was abandoned ten years before the rebellion —after an attaek by the fierce plains Indians and a series of droughts.

Follow N.M. 6 from Abo west to N.M. 47. Take the short detour to the little Spanish village of Tome, whieh has an interesting old ehurch and outdoor religious museum, before eontinuing to Isleta Indian Pueblo. Some of these Indians were sympathetie to the Spanish and went south with them; others partially burned the mission ehureh. It was restored by the Spanish in 1693, and serviees have been held there ever sinee.

You ean take either N.M. 47 or U.S. 85 baek to Albuquerque.

Wasatch Valley Tour

This is a trip you ean make in a day, but with sueh a variety of things to do, a long weekend is better.

Take U.S. 40 east from Salt Lake City to Kimball Junetion, a stage stop for the Overland Stage Line. It's a short drive from here on U-248 to Park City, onee a roaring silver mining camp that nearly beeame a ghost town until ski slopes were opened on Treasure Mountain. Now you ean ride the world's longest gondola (two and a half miles) in winter or summer, and visit the Underground Mine Museum, where an authentic mine train will earry you three miles into the mountain to see how mines were worked during the turn of the eentury. It's a rollicking eombination of nightclubs, saloons, good restaurants, old melodramas, antique and eurio shops, with many of the landmarks of a bygone era still very mueh in existenee.

Looping back to U.S. 40, you come to the communities of Heber and Midway in the green Wasateh Valley, whieh looks like Switzerland transplanted. The Swiss thought so, too, and many settled here. Early in September, just before the surrounding mountains put on a vivid autumn display of reds and golds, the valley residents hold Swiss Days, donning eostumes and celebrating with musie, festivals and folk danees of the "old eountry."

Two resorts in Midway offer dining, lodging, swimming in warm springs pools and horseback riding. Nearby is Wasateh Mountain, Utah's largest state park—22,000 aeres of alpine beauty with an 18-hole golf eourse.

You also ean take some interesting loop drives out of the area. One will bring you to Caseade Springs, where well-designed wooden walkways zigzag over the rushing, ever-flowing water. Return on Highway 152, whieh will take you by beautiful Big Cottonwood Canyon on the way to Salt Lake City.

Solvang

Denmark is too far away for a short vacation, but you might try Solvang instead. It's just 140 miles north of Los Angeles.

Make it a seenic motor trip along the coast on Highway 101, cutting inland on Highway 154 at Santa Barbara. This will bring you through the oak-dotted grazing land of the Santa Ynez valley, home of the famous golden palominos so often used in parades. From early May through August, the whole area is bright with fields of poppies.

Mission Santa Ines, built in 1804 as the 19th in the chain of missions, sits at the head of the valley. Beyond it is Solvang, with its replicas of old Danish windmills. Shops and homes are of Danish "bindingsvaerk" architecture adapted to native materials, giving the town the appearance of a rural Danish hamlet of a generation ago.

Today's residents perpetuate the traditional crafts of their ancestral homes. You'll find potters, clockmakers, silversmiths and other eraftsmen at work. Shops sell wooden dolls, Christmas tree ornaments, rare porcelain and figurines. And if you like Danish food and pastry, you can sample old-eountry recipes. Don't miss the "aebleskive," or ball-shaped pancakes, and "smorrebrod," the tempting open-faeed sandwiches.

In September, "Danish Days" are celebrated with several parades, folk dances, Hans Christian Andersen storytellers and aebleskive breakfasts. ■

What's best to take for Dull, Throbbing Pain Of Nervous Tension Headaches?

By V. A. Rodgers

DOCTORS who specialize in treating headaches state most headaches are caused by emotional tension and stress. Anyone who suffers from tension headaches knows only too well how the throbbing, pounding pain can dull your efficiency, slow you down and play havoc with your nerves.

What's best to take? Clinical tests by doctors on over 500 patients who complained of tension headaches, proved Anacin® relieves nervous tension headaches just as effectively as the expensive leading prescription. Yet Anacin needs no prescription and costs far less.

Here is other convincing evidence about Anacin. Replies from a survey of over 1600 specialists in internal medicine showed twice as many doctors said they would recommend their patients use the Anacin formula to relieve pain over that of the other leading extra-strength tablet. Just consider that—twice as many doctors prefer Anacin.

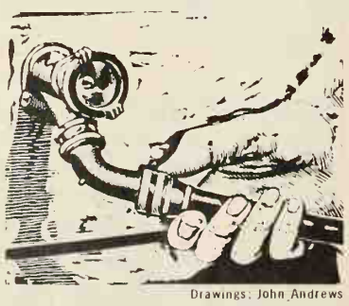
You can trust Anacin to relieve headache pain in minutes. Then its nervous tension and painful pressure on nerves go, too. Anacin lets you do a better job. Lets you function better.

Despite its great strength, Anacin is not habit-forming and it's so gentle acting on the stomach.

It makes good sense to try fast acting, extra strong and doctor approved Anacin Tablets.

STRETCH THE LIFE OF YOUR GARDEN HOSE

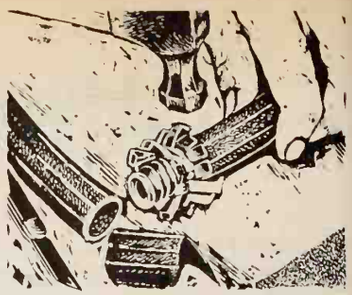
If you have a beat-up garden hose, chances are you haven't been as careful with it as you should have been. True, you buy a hose with the understanding that it is guaranteed for five, ten, or more years, depending on quality. But you can extend the life of a hose years beyond its guarantee by using a little care in the way you treat it. Too often when a hose is not in use it's left out in the sun . . . or run over by the car . . . or left in kinks that eventually defy straightening out. With such treatment, any hose will soon begin to leak.



Drawings: John Andrews

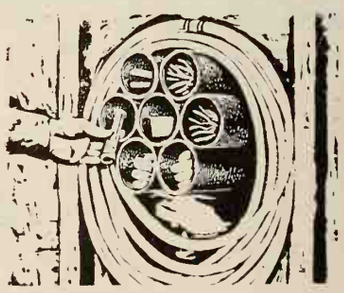
To avoid sharp bends at the end of your hose, make a small investment in a gooseneck hose connection and screw it on the faucet. Attach hose and it will swivel to prevent kinking.

If your hose develops a break at the end, use a sharp knife to cut off the leaking part. Hold hose alongside a 1x2 as a guideline for making a good square cut. To repair the end of the hose, use a male or female finger-coupling depending on which end you are replacing. Coat the coupling-insert—as well as inside of hose-end—with soap for easier insertion.



To make a splice, cut out the section with the leak and carefully square both ends of the hose. Soap well the contacting parts; insert the tubes all the way into the hose ends and hammer the fingers down so they catch securely in the hose, but not so hard that they cut it. If you prefer, you can get a hose clamp. Instead of fingers, this one holds the newly inserted coupling firmly in place by means of a metal band that you place over the hose and tighten. Instructions come with couplers for plastic hose.

Your hose will age quickly if you leave it out in the sun too often. Keep it in the shade, and use this shortcut to coiling. Pull the hose out straight—to remove all kinks. Then lay it in folds in a figure-eight. You'll be amazed at how freely it uncoils when you use it—and without the usual twisting and kinking.



If you have no shady spot outdoors where you can store your hose, then hang it in a tool shed or garage. You can buy a regular hose hanger or make one by nailing seven tall juice cans in a circle on the wall. Coil the hose, screw the coupling ends together, and hang it over the cans. As a bonus, the open cans hold small items, such as pruning shears, putty knife, plant ties, gloves. If you paint the cans, do it before mounting them permanently in place.

Rafting through Jackson Hole

Chances are, you won't encounter many heart-stopping rapids on a rubber raft ride down the Snake River in northwestern Wyoming. The thrills on this river are primarily the animals and birds you see against a backdrop of what may be the most spectacular mountain range in North America.

It's a thrilling introduction to this vast wilderness, providing an intimate view of ancient glacial moraines and alluvial meadows. Be sure to have a camera or binoculars handy when your boatmen point out an eagle's nest or an osprey flying high overhead.

Two kinds of trips are available from Jackson Lake Lodge. The "20-mile trip," on a large rubber raft accommodating 22 people, lasts about four hours. The price is $12 for adults and children. Buses to the boat-launching areas leave Jackson Lake Lodge at 7 and 8 a.m. daily.

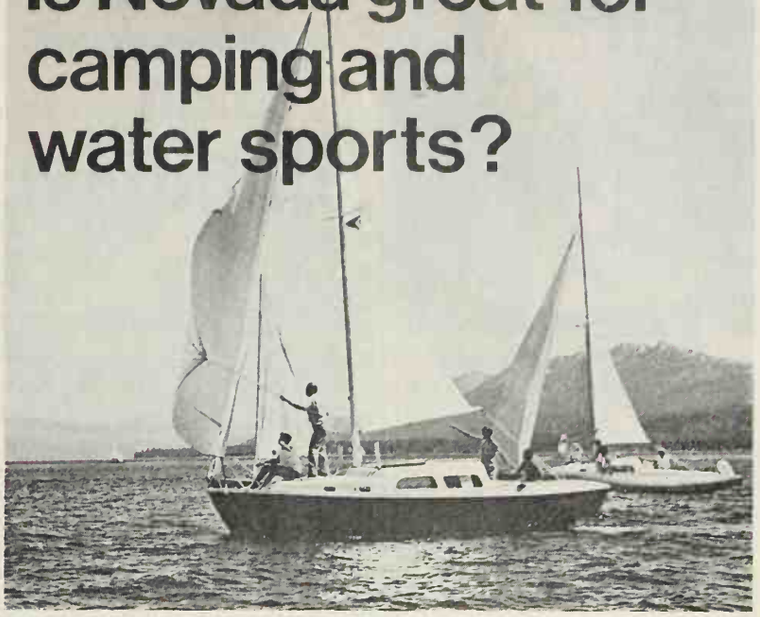
Is Nevada great for camping and water sports?



Bet on it.

You don't have to stand in line to camp in Nevada. And you don't have to wait your turn to get in the water.

Nevada has plenty of room for camping and plenty of crystal-clear lakes to enjoy water skiing, boating, skin diving and swimming, plus some fabulous fishing.

State and private property in Nevada only take up 13 percent of the land. The rest is yours to roam — 60 million acres with few or no restrictions.

Right outside Las Vegas, Lake Mead has 550 miles of shoreline dotted with campgrounds, beaches and boating facilities.

Lake Tahoe in Western Nevada is the second largest lake at 6200 feet or above in the world. Long stretches of beach, well maintained campgrounds, as well as numerous boat launching facilities are available to the outdoor family.

There are 63 campgrounds scattered throughout Nevada, mostly in the almost untouched central part of the state. You can choose your degree of solitude and your type of recreation. You can pick your country — deep forest, mysterious desert lakes, rugged mountains with hidden lakes.

If you're a camper who likes to be near the water, you'll be surprised how much clear water you can find in Nevada.

Bet on it.

A great sand pile

Anyone who has ever enjoyed playing in a sandbox should go out of his way to visit Great Sand Dunes National Monument in south-central Colorado.

These shifting, wind-sculptured dunes, which pile up to heights of 700 feet, are cradled in the arms of the Sangre de Cristo Mountains at the eastern edge of the San Luis Valley, 37 miles northeast of Alamosa.

The continually moving surface sands keep the dunes barren, except in protected depressions where small grass patches, scurfy pea plants and sunflowers find rootholds.

Stop first at the visitors center, about a mile inside the entrance. You'll learn how the dunes, which are among the biggest in the world, were formed. Prehistoric Folsom Man once roamed the area, as did a number of Indian tribes, but it was the Ute Indians who made the surrounding valley their permanent home.

In 1806, Lt. Zebulon Pike, for whom Pike's Peak was named, described these mysterious and forbidding sands in the journals of his exploration of the territory.

Inquire at the visitors center about ranger-conducted walks through the dunes, or pick up a self-guiding trail leaflet. On the edge of the main dunes, you'll find a picnic area; it's a good starting point for the three-hour, round-trip hike.

In midsummer, when the sands can get very hot, plan your hike for early morning or late evening. Going up may put some strain on your muscles, but coming back, you can just sit down and slide. You'll end up with a lot of sand in your clothes, but your children will find it exhilarating.

The monument is open all year, though the main highway to the dunes is sometimes closed by bad weather in winter.

During the regular season, which runs approximately from Memorial Day through Labor Day, you can camp at the 118-unit campground on the monument grounds. Gasoline and supplies are available at the Dunes Outpost, about one mile outside the entrance.

Bonsai—but easy!

Most people think creating a bonsai entails years of time and the patience of Job. Not at all. You can create one in a matter of two or three hours—even less if you don't try for something too fancy. Visit your local nursery and choose a small plant with an interesting shape—spruce, cotoneaster, azalea, podocarpus, carissa, dwarf pomegranate, rosemary, or whatever appeals to you.

1. Here, Frank Okamura of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden starts work on an 18-inch spruce bonsai. It's already a well-formed miniature tree which would be good for an indoor Christmas tree. But that's not what you want. You want an artistic creation—a living one that adds to your decor.

2. Cut away unwanted growth to make a terminal. Stake with a ⅜-inch dowel to keep the terminal growing straight, and leave on for one season. Tie dowel to the lower part of the trunk—don't drive it into the soil or you'll risk damaging the fine root system.

3. Study your plant from all angles. Imagine how you want it to look. Bend branches carefully one way, then another—to see the various forms the plant can assume. Then prune out any branches that don't jibe with your mental image of the finished product.

4. To look its best, a bonsai needs a shallow container. Bonsai dishes are easy to find nowadays. Here, the pruned plant has been removed from its nursery pot. To do this, simply grasp the plant by its trunk, turn upside down, and tap edge of pot on a counter.

5. The original root ball is too large for the shallow container that the plant is to go in. Use a special curved two-prong hook (or an old fork will do) and gently remove soil to whittle down the size of the ball until it fits container.

6. After you've reduced the soil ball to the proper size, dust it with a soil mix (the only way it will get on the bottom of the plant where it's needed) and moisten with a syringe or laundry sprinkler—to prevent the mix from falling off when you set plant upright in container.

7. Spread a thin layer of potting mix on the bottom of the container—to receive plant you've prepared. Run a wire (the only one you'll use) through holes at either end of the dish. Later, this will be bent over the soil ball to hold the plant in position until it reestablishes itself.

8. Many people don't like the looks of wire that is so often used to shape bonsai branches and to hold them in a desired position. String is generally handier and less noticeable. Here's how you use it to gain the same effect that you would get with wire. Tie a dowel to the trunk, then along the length of branch that you're going to lower to a more pleasing and artistic angle.

9. Finished bonsai. Soil has been carefully raked from the base of the tree to expose some roots—and watered. If string used is white, you can darken it with ink to make it less conspicuous during the two or three seasons it will take for branches to hold in place without help.

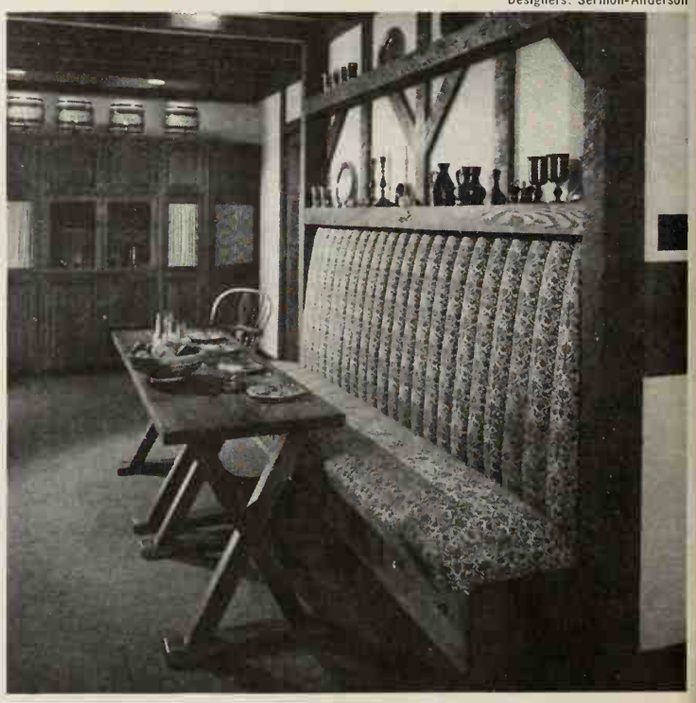
Special spots for snacks

Photographs: Suter, Hedrich-Blessing. Designer: David Wright. Source: Liz L

A ballooning paisley wall covering animates this eating nook in one corner of the kitchen. To sharpen the pattern impact, a simple window treatment was chosen. Chalk white shutters can be closed for privacy or pushed aside to reveal the view. Wire "ice cream" chairs are a good idea when floor space is scant. These are cushioned in a solid color to match fringed table cover. Kitchen flooring was covered with a thickly tufted shag carpet for an unexpected note of luxury.

Designers: Sermon-Anderson



Removing cabinets at one end of a kitchen and combining gained space with an undersize breakfast area produced this distinctive dining spot. Since conventional table and chairs would have obstructed room-to-room traffic, a banquette was built along one wall and two narrow tables pushed together to form one long tabletop. Rough-hewn beams create a striking wall design and provide display shelves for pewter plates, candlesticks, and other utensils.

THE WINDOW BLIND FOR PEOPLE WHO HATE WINDOW BLINDS.

No tilt cords. Levolor's inconspicuous Magic Wand lets you open and close the slats without cords.

No bulky heads. Levolor Riviera blinds have thin heads designed to match the rest of the blind in beauty.

No tapes. Levolor Riviera blinds have no tapes. The tapes have been replaced by slat supports less than 1/16″ thick. Cleaning is a cinch. Just sponge, wipe or brush the slats.

No wide, dust-catching slats. Levolor Riviera blinds have slats less than 1″ wide. They practically disappear from view when you open them (yet when they're closed they give you complete privacy).

No controls where you don't want them. You choose where you want the controls on a Levolor Riviera blind. Magic Wand on the left, lift cord on the right, or vice versa. Or both on the left or right.

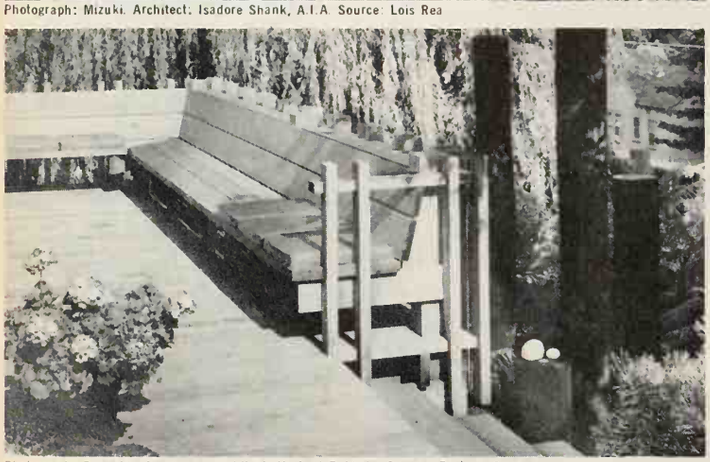
More seating for your garden

Backyard
For this zigzag bench that seats about 12, join three seven-foot seats at right angles to each other. A good seat height is 16 inches. Sink seven 4x4 posts into the ground and bolt 2x6 crosspieces at top of each one. Space 2x4s three-fourths of an inch apart for good drainage and nail to crosspieces. Here a plain lath screen complements the bench. It also provides privacy and divides the yard into two separate activity areas.

Photograph: Mizuki. Architect: Isadore Shank, A.I.A. Source: Lois Rea

Terrace edge
Make this U-shaped bench 12 feet long with three-foot seven-inch ends and you can seat about eight extra people. Use clear Oregon fir and stain it dark. You'll need 2x4s for seat and back supports. Nail corner ones to railroad ties in terrace floor. For front legs, use 1½-inch dowels together with three pairs of steel rods and sink them in concrete. Bolt pairs of 2x4s to each pair of legs, run 2x4s diagonally at both corners, string 2x8s (⅜-inch spacing) and nail down. Make the back of 2x10s, slanted for comfort.



Photograph: Reynolds. Landscape architect: Herbert Baldwin. Source: Barbara Gorder

Deck edge
The 6x6 posts that support the deck also brace this redwood bench. To build it, bolt pairs of 2x6s to the posts for support of planks; two 2x6s and one 2x8 for the seat and two 2x6s for the back. Notch 2x4 baluster verticals and nail them to 2x4 horizontals. Geraniums in containers take the heat and add color.

Photograph: Bill Hedrich, Hedrich-Blessing. Source: Jessie Walker

Entry court
This angular bench repeats the design of the planter area. To make the seat, line up 2x2s with 2x3 facers and bore a hole ten inches from each end to receive a long screw rod. Countersink outside holes to receive nuts. Set ⅜-inch spacers with bored holes between the 2x2s and bolt together. Nail 2x3 facers to ends and screw seat to angle-iron supports welded to the ends of three-inch pipes sunk in concrete. This assures sturdy, no-tip sitting space.

How come the rooms you have in your head are never the rooms you have in your home?

You've probably furnished your home by going from store to store. Picking out a sofa here, a rug there, a chair somewhere else.

They looked great by themselves. But now that you've got them home, do they make your rooms look like you thought they would?

Or, since your furniture is supposed to be a way to express yourself, is it expressing you sort of tongue tied?

The next time you have a chance to do some decorating, visit an Ethan Allen Gallery. We can help you have a home that can pronounce you correctly.

To begin with, instead of acres of sofas or beds or tables, all our furniture is displayed in room settings. All complete down to the last lamp.

So you can see how all the things we make can go together.

And so, by talking with us, you can get ideas of how our things can be mixed and matched to go with the things you already have. To make rooms that are yours and nobody else's.

Walk around the gallery with one of our people and let him ask you about your home, your family and your style of life.

Or, if you're not in a talking mood, pin on one of our buttons that says "Just Browsing" and walk around alone. And maybe sit down in a room setting and think things over. Whatever surroundings you build for yourself, you're going to have to live with them for a long time.

And we want them to be right for you.

Drop in soon. And when you do, pick up a free copy (it's worth $5.00) of our new, 358-page "Treasury of American Traditional Interiors."

It has ideas to help you move furniture around in your head long after you leave us.

Perhaps the most promising approach of all is "integrated control," which uses a wide variety of techniques to attack what must be understood as a complex problem. One example is California's campaign against the grape leafhopper, a species that has learned to resist chemical sprays. Agricultural researchers discovered that the Anagrus wasp used to be a natural enemy of the leafhopper. Guess which choir robe was ironed with new RENUZIT® Homogenized SOFT STARCH?

Now, for the first time, you can buy a starch that actually feels soft. A starch that takes the "fidgets out of fabrics." A product that adds all the body of starch without the stiffness. That's why we call it Soft Starch.

This amazing new Soft Starch works on all types of fabrics. Synthetics as well as cottons. The secret? An exclusive homogenized formula which also helps stop flaking and caking. Resists scorching, too. And it won't clog or quit in the middle of ironing. So you get all the Soft Starch you pay for.

You could call it the perfect starch. Because new Renuzit Homogenized Soft Starch gives you a combination of five advantages you can't get in any other starch:

PANELING WITH THE GREAT AMERICA

Georgia-Pacific introd

ookware you like the outside,
for TEFLON II on the inside.

Today's cookware is a feast of styles and colors. Choosing the set that's right for your home just waits on your own good taste.

But before you buy the set that looks great in your kitchen, make sure it's great on your stove. That's where the TEFLON II Quality Seal comes in.

The TEFLON II Quality Seal tells you a lot about cookware. It's no-stick. And cleanup is easy.

The TEFLON II Quality Seal can say this because only brands of non-stick cookware that have passed a tough series of tests get to wear it. DuPont sees to that.

It's just this simple. The TEFLON II Quality Seal on a set of cookware tells you that what looks good on the outside, is great to cook with too.

*TEFLON is Du Pont's registered trademark for its non-stick finishes. TEFLON II is Du Pont's certification mark for scratch-resistant TEFLON-coated cookware which meets Du Pont standards.

pens in females, suppresses ther But the Y chromosome lac anything to balance them agair and thus allows them to ex their "bad" influence.

It could therefore be said th each parent contributes to se linked characteristics—the mot er a "bad" recessive gene, ar the father a small Y chrom some.

"You don't give your children the same genes you inherit.

This is a half-truth. You don pass along the same genes, onl half. But those you do pass o are completely unchanged fro the moment you receive ther from your father and mothe until the moment they're trans mitted to your children. Yo change, but your genes stay th same. What distinguishes on generation from the last is th difference in genetic combina tions; your genes and those o your husband or wife have nev er been paired before.

An important exception ex ists, however. Some genes ar changed through the process o mutation. This is a rare and un natural alteration within th germ cells that sometimes occur "spontaneously" (meaning scien tists are currently unable to ex plain it). At other times th change is caused by strong un accustomed forces—atomic ra diation, say, or overexposure t X rays, or drugs such as LSD The list of suspected culprits is long. Predictably, most muta tions are undesirable.

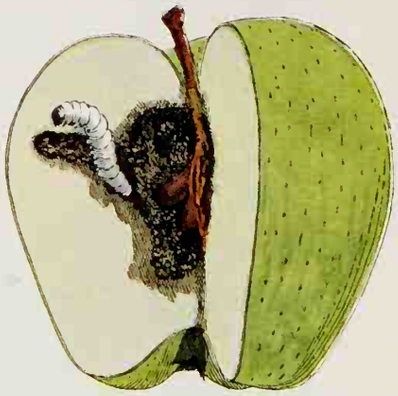
Bitter harvest in suburbia.

BROWN ROT is a very stubborn fruit disease. Prevention must start with spray protection of the very first blossoms.



THE CODLING MOTH has a huge appetite. Moth lays its eggs under skin of apple. The larva sometimes eats right through to the core.

WHITEFLIES are small sucking insects. Usually inhabit the underside of leaves. Often found on green beans, too.

IMPORTED CABBAGE WORM dines on lettuce. It's a major pest. Also feeds on ornamentals like nasturtium and alyssum.

CORN EARWORMS are highly destructive and not just to corn. They like tomatoes, beans, and many different flowers.

HORNWORMS destroy the foliage. Fruitworms the fruit. The fruit is often half devoured before you even get around to picking it.

This year, as every year, too many home gardeners will surrender their fruits and vegetables to insects and disease. It's heartbreaking. It shouldn't happen, but it will.

The destruction shown here illustrates a senseless waste of food and labor. It's the result of what we at ORTHO® call "no think" gardening. In each case, the use of ORTHO insecticides, fertilizers, or fungicides could have prevented the damage pictured.

The lesson is clear. Let ORTHO help. ORTHO is the world's largest marketer of home garden products. Whatever you choose to grow, ORTHO can help you grow it better. Talk to your ORTHO Dealer.

Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Caused By Inflammation And Infection

Also Gives Prompt, Temporary Relief In Many Cases from Pain and Burning Itch in Such Tissues.

There's an exclusive formulation which actually helps shrink the painful swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by infection. In many cases the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from itching and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues.

The sufferer first notices relief from such painful discomfort. Then this medication helps to gently reduce swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues. Tests conducted by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C., and at a Midwest Medical Center showed this to be true in many cases.

The medication used by doctors in these tests was Preparation H® —the same exclusive formula you can buy at any drug counter without a prescription. Preparation H also lubricates the affected area to protect the inflamed, irritated surface and so helps make bowel movements more comfortable.

There is no other formula like Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

PETS

Douglas M. Lidster, Editor

Keep your pet healthy when it's hot

Here are some tips to help make summer as happy, carefree, and comfortable for your dog or cat as it is for the rest of your family.

Vaccinations should be kept up to date at all times, but especially during summer months. This is the time when your pet is most likely to come into contact with other animals, or places where they have been. Disease also spreads most rapidly in hot, humid weather.

Although it's not required by law in most areas, have your cat vaccinated against rabies. A cat is much more likely to be bitten by another animal than a dog is.

Parasites, both internal and external, are very active during the summer. Fleas, ticks, lice, and mites can make life miserable for your pet, and all are disease carriers. The flea is a double threat—besides the itching he causes, he's an intermediate host for tapeworms. Keep your pet's bedding clean, and when he's outdoors, provide a spot where he can get out of the grass to lie down.

While roundworms and tapeworms—the most common internal parasites—can be pretty hard on puppies, they don't really pose a serious threat to the adult dog or cat unless they get out of hand. Hookworms or heartworms are always dangerous. If you suspect worms, take a stool sample to your veterinarian. If evidence of worms is found, the veterinarian will determine the proper dosage of the correct medication. Home treatment of a worm problem can be more hazardous than the presence of the worms themselves.

Flies, gnats, and mosquitoes aren't technically parasites, but they do plague your pet. Some of the aerosol flea and tick medications serve as effective repellents against these pests. Don't use flea sprays intended for dogs on cats, and don't ever use repellents intended for humans use on either a dog or a cat. The best way to keep the bug problem down is to keep your pet's play area clean.

Summer haircuts do long-haired dogs more harm than good. Because a dog doesn't perspire as people do, his skin is not part of his body's temperature control system. He loses excess body heat by panting. That heavy coat insulates him against heat, and shaving it off could subject him to severe sunburn or heat prostration.

Poisons take a dreadful toll of pets every summer. Keep charcoal lighter, paint, and gasoline out of a dog's reach. While petroleum products sound unpalatable, some dogs will drink them—and there's no real antidote for petroleum distillate poisoning. Also, be especially careful with aerosol cans—a dog that bites into one is in for the surprise of his life, maybe his last.

Don't let your dog or cat play in the yard right after you've spread fertilizer or weed killer. Both can lead to serious eye and mouth irritations.

Cuts, even minor ones, should be carefully cleaned and treated with antiseptics. Infection runs rampant during hot, humid weather. Also, some species of flies lay their eggs in open wounds. These eggs hatch into maggots that are extremely harmful to your pet.

Cat fights, contrary to popular opinion, rarely end in serious injury to either combatant. But, even minor wounds can fester. Animal tissue on the cat's claws is a perfect breeding medium for bacteria. Cat bites, like other puncture wounds, close quickly, but often abscess. If your cat has been in even a minor altercation, examine him for injuries.

Most towns have tie-up laws, and with good reason. Don't think that your dog will be unhappy if he can't roam free. Think instead how your child will feel if his pet is run over by a car, or how you'll feel faced by a lawsuit if he bites one of your neighbors.

A summer swim is as refreshing for the dog as it is for the rest of the family. But, when it's time to go home, dry him off and brush his coat thoroughly. Dirty, matted hair will cause him to itch, and subsequent scratching may lead to more serious skin problems. Be sure to get the insides of his ears dry—many ear infections are caused by water remaining deep in the ears after a dunking.

After your dog runs in an open field, check his eyes for pollen and weed seeds. These lodge under the lids and irritate the eyes. Comb him out thoroughly and break up any small clods of dirt that may have formed on the hair between his toes. It's also smart to check for ticks. Ears, armpits, groin area and any other place where there are folds of skin offer ticks a hiding place. There are as many ways to get ticks off as there are people to give free advice. The safest way is to apply flea or tick spray directly to the tick itself. If the tick has attached itself to your pet, you should not try to pull it free—you may leave the tick's bloodsucking apparatus in the dog's skin, which can lead to infection.

Hay fever in dogs and cats sounds funny, but it's not. If your pet scratches frantically or sneezes for no apparent reason, he may have a seasonal allergy. Take him to the veterinarian for diagnosis and treatment immediately. Allergic symptoms can be controlled, but an allergy can't be cured.

Summer vacation trips will be more enjoyable for both you and your pet if the latter stays at home. A panting dog or cat in a hot stuffy car will make a trip extremely unpleasant. Also, many parks and motels have restrictions against pets. Your dog or cat will be much more comfortable if you leave him in an air-conditioned kennel, anyway.

If you insist on taking him along, get him accustomed to auto travel long before you hit the road—a month's practice isn't too much. If you find him bothersome on these short trips, traveling cross-country is likely to be a real nightmare.

Write ahead to check which motels admit animals, and if you plan to cross state lines, carry a certificate stating all your pet's vaccinations are up to date.

When it's hot, feed your pet in the evening so he can digest his meal in the cool of the night. Since he probably won't feel particularly active, you should give him less food.

If your dog chews a bone, don't let it lie around for more than one day. It will attract flies and may become maggot infested. Hornets, too, are sometimes attracted by bones, and will attack the dog that tries to take it away from them.

Don't worry if your dog or cat eats grass. While there are many theories about this subject, the reason for grass eating seems to be simply that some animals just like to eat grass—and even have their favorite types.

Make sure that fresh water is available at all times and provide a shady spot where the dog can escape the sun. If he lives in a dog house, modify it so you can lift the roof slightly to provide flow-through ventilation.

Summer is a great time to enjoy your pet. Do everything possible to keep him comfortable so he'll enjoy summer. ■

THIS WOMAN IS REDUCING HER WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS AND THIGHS

with the Fabulous New SAUNA BELT™

TRIM-JEANS

The Amazing Space Age Slenderizer that is so sensationally effective it is...

GUARANTEED TO REDUCE YOUR WAIST, TUMMY, HIPS AND THIGHS A TOTAL OF FROM 6 TO 9 INCHES IN JUST 3 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED

THIS SUPER PRODUCT IS PRODUCING SUPER NEW SLENDERIZING FOR A HOST OF WOMEN. HERE ARE JUST A FEW:

PENNY DIX:

"Incredible! I lost 7 full inches from my waist, hips and thighs the very first day I tried trim-jeans. Altogether I used them just 3 times and lost a total of 11¼ inches. The inches melted off so rapidly and right where I wanted to lose them: 2 inches off my waist, 2¼ inches off my tummy, 2 inches off my hips and 2½ inches off each thigh. No dieting- and thanks to my trim-jeans I now have my perfect measurements."

Mrs. Jean Wennerstrom: "I lost 7¼ inches in just 30 minutes the very first time I ever tried the trim-jeans and in just 3 days I lost 4¼ inches from my waist, 3¼ inches from my tummy, 2¾ inches from my hips and just under 3 inches from each thigh for a total loss of 16 inches. The overall improvement in my appearance has been absolutely dramatic!"

Mrs. Linda Saatsaz: "In just 3 days my waist went from 29 inches to 25 inches— my hips from 39½ inches to 37 inches and my thighs from 24 inches to 21 inches with a total overall loss of 14½ inches with these wonder working trim-jeans—and all without the need for dieting." *

Mrs. Gerry Rose: "Trim-jeans actually remade my figure in just 3 days. Imagine, in just 3 days, I lost 2¼ inches off my waist, 2 inches off my tummy, over 3 inches off each thigh and 4 inches off my hips! This adds up to a total loss of 14½ excess inches. Trim-jeans have given me a trim and shapely figure of which I am truly proud!"

TRIM-JEANS—THE SPACE AGE SLENDERIZER WITH RESULTS THAT ARE OUT OF THIS WORLD. The trim-jeans are a marvel of ease, comfort and efficiency. Once you have slipped them on, you are ready for the most astounding experience in rapid slenderizing you have ever known. Only trim-jeans has the unique features of design, including the exclusive super sauna-lock that permits the constant snug fit and solid support in all 4 areas—waist, tummy, hips and thighs—without which truly sensational results are not possible. We recommend that the trim-jeans be used a few minutes each day for 3 days in a row when you first receive them and then several times a week until you have achieved your maximum potential inch loss. After that, for maintenance you can use the trim-jeans about twice a month or as often as you feel the need.

THE MOST REVOLUTIONARY GUARANTEE IN SLENDERIZING HISTORY. So many users of the trim-jeans obtain 'instant reducing'—are inches slimmer, inches trimmer in from just 1 to 3 sessions with this super slenderizer—are actually losing as much as a total of 7 or more inches from their waists, tummies, hips and thighs in just 1 session and up to 16 or more inches from 3 sessions. This principle produces really fantastic results. There may be variations of speed and/or degree of results due to individual differences in metabolism and body response. Not everyone may lose 7 inches in just 1 session and 16 inches in 3 days but remember this: No matter what your metabolism, no matter what your body type, if you do not lose a total of from 6 to 9 inches from your waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 3 days, you may return the trim-jeans and the entire purchase price will be immediately refunded.

THE AMAZING TRIM-JEANS TAKE OFF INCHES WHERE THEY NEED TO COME OFF. Your trim-jeans are designed to give you just the reducing effect you need where you need it . . . and the price of the trim-jeans is just $13.95 and each pair carries a FULL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. Here is the slenderizer supreme—trim-jeans—which we sincerely believe to be the easiest, fastest, most convenient, most sensationally effective waist, tummy, hip and thigh reducer ever discovered—with the most revolutionary guarantee in slenderizing history. So if you want trimmer, slimmer, sleeker measurements and you want them now, send for your trim-jeans today.

Here is how it works:

Miss Penny Dix has slipped into her trim-jeans and is inflating them with the handy little pump provided. She is now ready to perform her 'Magic Torso' movements, an exercise program designed specially for trim-jeans.

After a few pleasant moments—about 10 minutes or so—doing her 'Magic Torso' movements, Penny is now relaxing for an additional 20 minutes while keeping her trim-jeans on. That is all there is to it.

Penny checks her 'after' measurements. Remarkable! Penny lost 1" from waist, 2" from tummy, 1" from hips, 1½" from each thigh for a total measurement loss of 7" in just 1 brief session.

The man next door®

It was a mistake telling my wife she should run our house the way I do my office. Yesterday, she made me fill out an expense report for my golf outing.

The high school commencement program may not have been complete this year; the main speaker didn't mention ecology.

Pondering the endless upkeep jobs around my house, I'm not so sure it was a good idea for our ancestors to move away from those maintenance-free caves.

When my wife Chris called the local theater to ask what was showing, the manager's reply was "just about everything."

Dell Matson, my neighbor, is having trouble finding a new job. "Problem is," he says, "you work hard, study to improve your skills and then end up unemployable because you're over-qualified."

My doctor concedes that today, an ounce of prevention is worth about $9.75.

A summer cold isn't very pleasant, but at least having something exotic and out of season has snob appeal.

At my high school reunion, Miss Aldrich, my Latin teacher, said I turned out just the way she expected. I took it as a compliment, but I'm not quite sure it was.

Jim Rodgers, our neighborhood's would-be philosopher, told me "Life is a lot like a tube of toothpaste. You always have to squeeze hard to get the most out of it."

After delivering three sermons Sunday morning, the Rev. George Hall said he should take a few days off—to catch up on the practicing of his preaching.

Burt Jr. can't complain that his history teacher is behind the times. After a recent pop quiz, Burt's paper was returned with the note: "This paper is rated D."

My uncle, who quit smoking last month, is now down to four packs of gum a day.

My daughter's vocabulary still confuses me. Yesterday she said she bought a "real cool pair of hot pants."

It's officially summer. Chris just heard some gossip about our shapely neighbor's seanty new bikini.

"I'm going to see if I can get my kitty back."

"Lucky it turned out nice today—otherwise I'd be cleaning out the attic."

Last week Christine and I were in a book store when a book on how to understand "body language" caught my eye. I didn't realize I could understand the language until Chris gave me a thumbs-down sign.

Now that we have a son and daughter in high school, my wife imposes strict rules on phone calls. I can now use the phone anytime between 5:30 and 6.

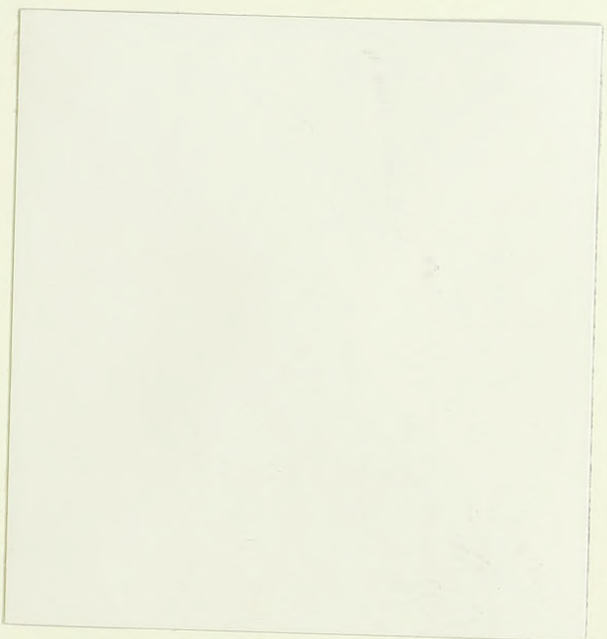
For her final assignment in art this semester, my daughter Rosemary had to produce a portrait sketch. After an unsuccessful attempt to find a willing model, she finally asked me to pose for her.

She explained that her younger sister wouldn't stop giggling, her brother Burt, 13, made faces, neither the cat nor dog would hold still and her mother was too busy. This left me as the last possibility.

It was an interesting, though not a flattering experience. She assembled her materials and settled down just out of my view. After sitting motionless for seven minutes, with what I thought was my most intelligent expression, I discovered she had stepped out to the kitchen for something to eat. When she finally got back, she began a running commentary.

It seems my nose wasn't attached to my head the same way everyone else's was. My chin, she added, was also weird. My wife stopped by and remarked that she had never realized how odd my ears were.

Within an hour Rosemary gave up and decided to do a sketch of our pet turtle. She told me not to mind, that she loved me anyway—and she gave me a kiss on top of my oddly shaped head to prove it. And that, I suppose, is all that matters.

But now I look with some concern at the face I shave every day, trying to figure out just where it goes wrong.


Burton Hillis
